GOLD IN TUT'S TOMB OUTDOES ALADDIN CAVE

Gems Cover King, Dead 3,000 Years.

[Copyright: 1923: By the New York Times.]

LUXOR, Egypt, Feb. 17.—Further details available today of the undreamt of wealth in the inner chambers of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, the king who ruled all Egypt more than thirty centuries ago, take the breath away. These details became known as preparations were made to open officially tomorrow the sarcophagus of the Pharaoh in the presence of a queen of today—the queen of the Belgians, who is here incognito—and many other notables.

There are no figures that can estimate the value of the dead king's burial trappings, and there are few minds that can conceive it—a gem studded cavern. Aladdin's lamp never revealed such treasures as flashlights and torches illumined to a lucky few. Imagine a huge box 4 feet high and wide and 5½ feet long all covered with richly beaten gold and studded with several fortunes in precious stones of the Tut-Ankh-Amen period. Imagine inside this priceless canopy another of the next size, all aglow with gleaming gold as bright as new $10 gold pieces. Imagine that golden gleam iridescent not only with gems studded in it, but between it and the outer canopy, picture a heap of jewels worth a king's ransom.

Then More Exquisite Treasures.

Imagine, if your mind isn't dazed, a heap of exquisite scarabs, red, blue and green, nothing like them ever having been found before and probably never will be found again, and if after this you have any capacity to imagine, picture an absolutely priceless alabaster vase shaped like a chalice and its sides translucent. On top of this are dainty cups and in the cups superb figures of Nepthys and Isis.

But imagination has not done its work yet, not by half, for beside the vase is a heap of amulets which money could not buy today. And over all is a black veil closely studded with golden crescents.

Weird and Thrilling.

Never in all the history of Egyptian archaeology was there such a weird and thrilling scene as yesterday inside and outside the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, in the valley of the kings. Here it is believed is the tomb of a Pharaoh practically intact—a scene laid more than 3,000 years ago, and disturbed, if at all, only so lightly as not to affect materially a discovery which can illuminate with startling clearness scenes of Egypt of the fourteenth century before Christ.

Conjectures had been current for weeks as to whether beyond the sealed door of the antechamber of the tomb discovered by Lord Carnarvon and Howard Carter last November, where the mummy of the Pharaoh, the contents of the sarcophagus, and all the royal magnificence of the eighteenth dynasty.

File Into Tomb.

It was 1:15 o'clock when the quiet and subdued procession filed from an adjacent tomb, where they had nibbled at a luncheon preparatory to advancing to the stage for this historic occasion. Lord Carnarvon led the way past the barrier, followed by his daughter, Lady Evelyn Herbert; his brother, the Hon. Mervyn Herbert; Sir William Garstin, the Hon. Richard Bethel, Prof. Breasted, Mr. Winlock, Mr. Lythgoe, and Dr. Alan Gardiner, with their expert staff, including four members of the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art expedition at Thebes.

For a few minutes they sat inside the barrier and looked down into the mouth of the locked tomb, manifestly nervous and seeking to hide their agitation under a conventional chatter which deceived nobody. Ten minutes later there arrived Abdel Hamid Soliman Pasha, the under secretary of public works in the Egyptian government, and M. Lacau, director of the Egyptian antiquities department, and all were ready for the excursion into the past.

Slowly, and conscious of the momentous nature of the occasion, Mr. Carter's staff unlocked the outer wooden doorway and merged into the darkness of the steep passage leading to the antechamber.

Electric Lights Retint Tomb.

Down twenty steep, old steps to a passage, perhaps ten yards long, the investigators marched, then on into an oblong antechamber about ten yards long by five yards wide, surrounded by four high walls of solid rock painted a light pink and glowing

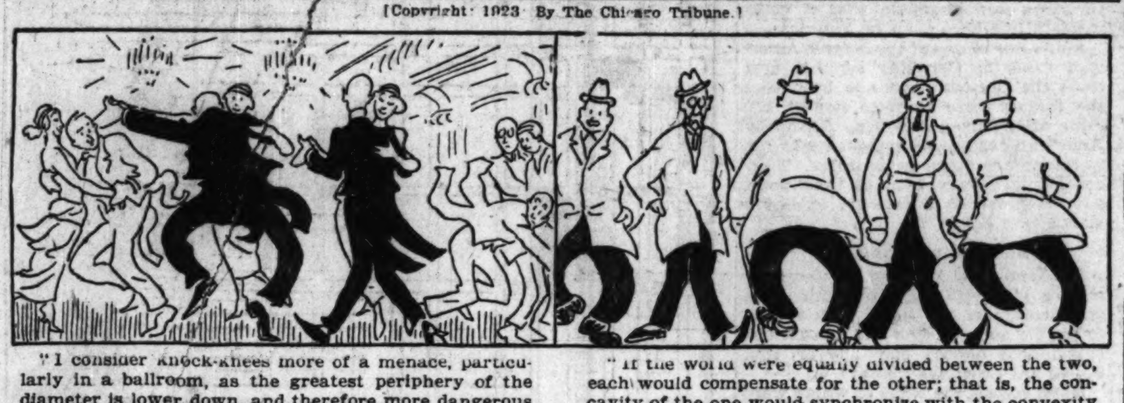
THE INQUIRING REPORTER

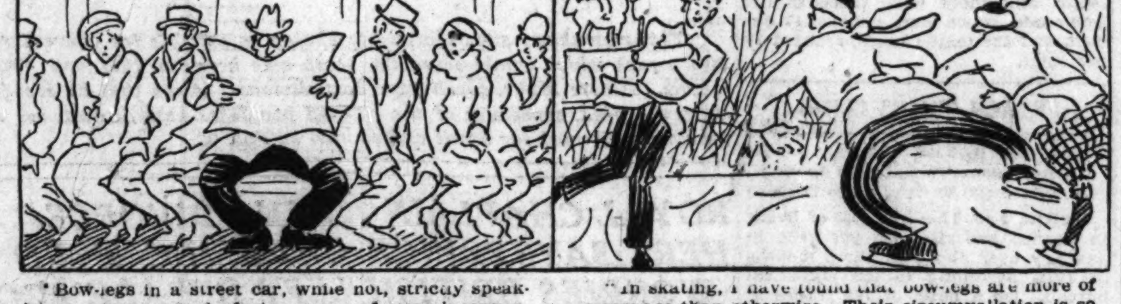
Are Bow-Legs More of a Menace to Navigation than Knock-Knees?

[Copyright: 1923 By The Chicago Tribune.]



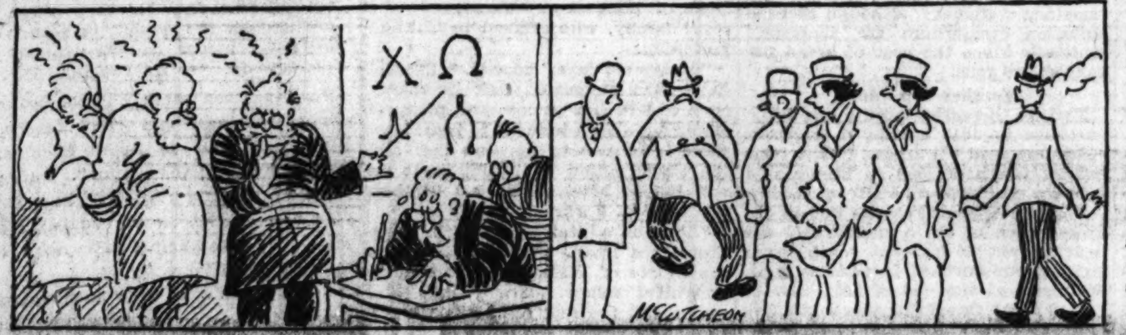
"I consider knock-knees more of a menace, particularly in a ballroom, as the greatest periphery of the diameter is lower down, and therefore more dangerous in its contacts with the feet of other dancers. Bow-legs brush one by; knock-knees trip."

"If the world were equally divided between the two, each would compensate for the other; that is, the concavity of the one would synchronize with the convexity of the other, and, with moderate care, there should be no interference."



"Bow-legs in a street car, while not, strictly speaking, a menace, are, in fact, a cause of some inconvenience to other passengers. When they (the bow-legs) strike their angle of repose, they displace more area than knock-knees, and vice versa."

"In skating, I have found that bow-legs are more of a menace than otherwise. Their circumvallation is so much greater, and that leads me to the conclusion I have stated earlier in my conversation."



"It is easily proven scientifically that bow-legs are the greater menace. This was one of the riddles of the ages until early Greek philosophers, etc., solved it by the simple illustrations shown on the chart—the common wishbone of a chicken and the Greek letter Omega, as compared to the Greek letter Chi. No further argument is possible."

"The bow-legs, being more beautiful in their Hogarthian curves, attract more attention and thus divert the attention of pedestrians, leading to many minor collisions. People always look at bow-legs, seldom at knock-knees."

BOY DIES FROM JAW SPLIT BY FAKE DENTIST

Leo Poplanske, 11 years old, died last night after suffering since Dec. 31 from a broken jawbone, split, it is charged, by the efforts of a fake dentist to extract a tooth.

The boy was rendered unconscious by loss of blood and his life has been slowly ebbing away since his visit to the dental office.

As a result of an investigation made by John W. Follmer, inspector for the state department of registration, it developed that the boy's jaw bone was broken by "Dr." Arthur W. Fox, with offices at 211 North Robey street.

"Dr." Fox was practicing without a license. Mr. Follmer found that he was a shoemaker in Canada before coming to Chicago. He married the widow of a dentist, inherited the dental equipment, and set up practice.

"Dr." Fox was arrested on Wednesday, charged with practicing without a license, and then freed on $1,000 bail.

Manslaughter charges will probably be asked against "Dr." Fox, Mr. Follmer said last night. The boy's father, a grocer, 2246 Coyne avenue, is expected to make the demand of a coroner's jury.

Fox came into notice two years ago when he was arrested charged with mal practice.

SUES CANDLER; ASKS $500,000

Widow Seeks Big Sum in Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 17.—Suit for $500,000, alleging breach of promise to marry, and claiming aggravated damages, was filed in the federal court here late today by attorneys representing Mrs. Onezima De Bouchel of New Orleans, well known in social circles throughout the south, against Asa G. Candler of Atlanta, millionaire founder of the Coca Cola company.

MRS. ONEZIMA DE BOUCHEL.
[World Wide Photo.]

Mrs. De Bouchel's suit declared that Mr. Candler broke their engagement on the eve of what was to have been their wedding date, telling her in a letter that he had reports "from sources he was bound to believe" that she had received improper visits from two men while attending the Confederate reunion in Atlanta in October, 1919. These charges, the petition said, "are false."

Kept Names Secret.

"Defendant has persisted," the petition said, "in his refusal to even divulge to plaintiff, in response to her urgent request and demands, the names of the authors of said charges, or of those by whom said charges were conveyed to him. Your petitioner, therefore, brings this action for damages, in order that the matters herein set out may be freely inquired into and determined by a jury of said district."

Accompanying the petition was a supporting affidavit by Mrs. De Bouchel, signed in Cook county, Illinois, before Gladys L. Harvey, a notary public, and dated Feb. 13. In her petition the plaintiff says she is a citizen and resident of Nevada.

Love Ardent, She Says.

The petition set forth that Mrs. De Bouchel and Mr. Candler met during the confederate reunion in Atlanta in 1919, at which time she was chaperon general for the Daughters of the Confederacy. At that time she was the recipient of many favors and attentions from Mr. Candler, the petition asserted.

Their acquaintance ripened into friendship and an intimate correspondence ensued, the petition said, and "ultimately, in his letters to plaintiff, after acquainting her fully with many circumstances of his private life and the vicissitudes of his public career, the defendant commented on the loneliness of his home as a widower and urged plaintiff to become his bride."

Mrs. De Bouchel's petition said that Mr. Candler so conducted himself both preceding and during the term of courtship "that she was inspired with an honest affection for him."

Family Made Inquiry.

In subsequent correspondence, the petition continued, Mr. Chandler told Mrs. De Bouchel that certain members of his family opposed their marriage, making it clear, however, that the opposition was "not based upon his plan to marry plaintiff, but was based upon the expressed opposition of said members of his family to his purpose to marry at all." She promptly informed Mr. Candler, the petition said, that she was unwilling to marry him in the face of such opposition, but that he assured her that whatever opposition they had manifested would be removed by his marriage. She said she "accepted his protestations and assurances and again agreed to become his wife."

Mr. De Bouchel in her petition said certain members of the Candler family visited New Orleans to investigate her.

"BLACK HOLE" IS RIVALED HERE IN POLICE JAILS

Calcutta Outdone in One Busy Night.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Chicago has no night court, but in the downtown loop, in the wealthiest ward in the world, it has police dungeons that at times rival the Black Hole of Calcutta. Here small offenders are herded with hardened criminals. Often, too, innocent bystanders who have perhaps stepped into a poolroom to get warm or to buy a cigar just as the police have rounded the corner on a raiding expedition, spend a night and maybe Sunday also, if it happens to be the week-end, under conditions little short of appalling.

If they are without friends and without money enough, in the case of misdemeanors, to put up a cash bail or to pay a straw bondsman a fat fee, they are clear out of luck. The country boy or the floating laborer sticks in jail until he can be taken into court next day, when his case is probably disposed of in three minutes.

Habeas Corpus Tool for Criminals.

The professional criminal, on the other hand, finds it easy enough to get "sprung" once he can let his gang outside know he has been pinched. A hurry-up call for a lawyer, a trip to a judge at his home, a writ of habeas corpus, and the habitual criminal is again at large and ripe for another job. Long ago habeas corpus became more used as a bulwark for organized crime than as a safeguard for society—it is invoked by professional crime more often than by any other element, as any good policeman will admit.

Years ago Chicago had a night court—in fact, it was twice tried—and each time discontinued for some reason or other. Some of the judges objected to being torn from their slippered ease at night. Others went to the theater when business was dull in the early evening hours. The night court faded away.

New City Around Old Jails.

Since then Chicago's population has grown a million or so; the police are more active, roundups are more frequent, while the police station jails in the congested sections are just as vile and crowded as they ever were. The question is again raised whether a night court should not again be established.

Michael Hughes, chief of detectives, is among those who declare a night court might prove a distinct advantage. He says it would not interfere in his operations against crime, while it would perhaps alleviate conditions for some classes of prisoners who are entitled to juster treatment. Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court also is considering the question, while at Springfield a bill has been introduced for a court that will sit nights, Sundays, and holidays.

The police jails in Chicago have the reputation of being the worst in the state, and those down town are the worst in the city. A few years ago a former president of the International Prison congress, after inspecting some of Chicago's jails in the loop district, told Judge Olson that in all the prison history of the world he had found no prisons so vile, with the exception of the jails of Turkey of the twelfth century. He may have been stretching it a bit, but the fact remains that they are utterly loathsome.

No Way to Ventilate.

Worst of the lot, perhaps, is the basement dungeon of the detective bureau in La Salle street, half a block from the city hall. Here the visitor stumbles down a wooden stairway into a dank basement. There are five iron cells in a row, each about 6 feet by 8 feet. They face a wall in which are small darkened windows, and off to one side is another window. There is no way of ventilating the interior of the cells, and daylight never penetrates.

It is bad enough to linger in this hole when only a few prisoners are in the cells, but when the jail begins to fill up at 10 or 11 o'clock at night, it becomes abominable. The detectives denounce it as a plague spot. Young and old, first offender and habitual criminal, the physically clean and the diseased are all packed together, often so tightly that most of the prisoners are forced to stand up all night. The turnkey says a week ago one country boy told him he had stood on his feet from Saturday night until Monday morning, unable to sit on the floor even. And in court the youngster was dismissed.

Nearly every night from sixty to 120 men are locked up in the cellroom. Recently after one raid, forty men had to be locked into one cell, with a floor area of about forty-eight feet. It seems incredible, but the lockup keeper insisted the figures were right. This meant each man has standing room of

Ukranians Massacre 60 Poles, Report

VIENNA, Feb. 17.—The Arbeiter Zeitung says West Ukrainians in the town of Sabor yesterday massacred an entire company of sixty Polish soldiers. The Poles were taking the Ukraine conscripts to barracks by force at the time. Martial law has been proclaimed in the region.

Poles and Lithuanians Clash.

WARSAW, Feb. 17.—Several additional skirminishes are reported between Polish police and Lithuanian irregulars, occasioned by the entry of Polish guards into the neutral zone between Poland and Lithuania, under the terms recently laid down by the league of nations council. The casualties were one killed and several wounded.

Official advices show the Poles have entered successively various villages in the area assigned to them.

Admits Part in $500,000 Gem Robbery

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Matthew Darien Biddulph, alias "Mr. Marshall," the wine-giver and jewel-taker in the $500,000 Schoellkopf gem robbery at 64 West 52nd street early Jan. 1, confessed today.

He told a tale of "cheating cheaters," alleging at one time that his two confederates, "Mr. Lewis," and "Mr. McGowan," had held him up and taken everything he had, except $100; but declaring at another time that, while this was false, they had double crossed him and had not given him his share of the loot.

None of the stolen jewelry has been found, but the police expect that "Marshall's" admissions will result in its recovery. The authorities are confident that they can arrest "Marshall's" accomplices within a few days.

"Slickers" Plotted Trap.

The prisoner admitted that a gang of Broadway "slickers," plentifully supplied with funds and good clothing, plotted to ensnare Mrs. Irene Schoellkopf, wife of C. P. Hugo Schoellkopf, a Buffalo capitalist. They had seen Mrs. Schoellkopf about the Ritz-Carlton, where she stopped when in New York, and in the Broadway night places, which she frequented with Frank Barrett Carman as her paid companion and dancing companion.

Knowing her custom of visiting Carman in his apartments, they sublet another apartment on the fourth floor. They found their opportunity in the New Year's eve party, which Mrs. Schoellkopf attended in Carman's rooms.

"Marshall," according to the police, admitted he sold several bottles of Scotch whisky to the guests and later slipped downstairs to tell his accomplices that the party was breaking up and that Mrs. Schoellkopf was leaving.

Seized Her on Stairway.

After one of his accomplices seized Mrs. Schoellkopf on the stairway, "Marshall" admits he took part in the actual robbery, and escaped after leaving the woman bound and gagged on a bed.

According to "Marshall's" story, the leader of the gang was the man known as "McGowan," whose real name is said to be Eugene Moran.

According to "Marshall," he expected to get one-third of the jewels when they were divided. When he insisted, one of the others drew a pistol, while the other scooped up all the jewels from the table, stuffed them into a bag, took all "Marshall's" money, except $100, and left.

LOCK SELVES IN BARRACKS TO KEEP GUNS

Banks and Stores in Seized City Strike.

GELSENKIRCHEN, Feb. 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gelsenkirchen was reoccupied by the French today and the population was advised through military proclamation that it would remain so until the fine of 100,000,000 marks was paid as indemnity for the recent wounding of French gendarmes in a clash with German police.

Martial law conditions prevailed throughout the city tonight, and the situation was pregnant with possibilities of disorder. The local police had barricaded themselves in their barracks to prevent being disarmed by the French.

Many Troops Enter City.

Strong forces of troops began arriving this morning from Recklinghausen, Bochum, and Essen, apparently as the result of a conference held here last night between Generals Degoutte and Fournier.

The most important points in the city, including the postoffice, railway station, and the municipal treasury were occupied. Almost immediately the postal, telegraph and railway services ceased.

According to German quarters, the contents of the cash tills in the railway station were confiscated, likewise 40,000,000 marks found in the coffers of the railway hotel.

Banks and Stores "Strike."

The moment the first troops appeared the proprietors of all the banks, stores and hotels closed their doors. Street car traffic also ceased, under orders from the French, according to the Germans, who attribute to them also the closing of all motion picture houses, bars and public places of amusement. Street traffic has been forbidden between 7 p. m. and 7 a. m.

German War Grows Active.

ESSEN, Feb. 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—The French military authorities in the Ruhr believe that the passive resistance of the Germans is at an end and that the work of obstruction is entering an active phase.

They reached this conviction as a result of the bombing of the Kaiserhof hotel here, the sinking of barges in the Rhine-Herne canal, and the activity of the Nationalists, Communists, and other political parties during the last few days.

The French intelligence service has been informed that the Populist party held a large secret meeting in Essen on Wednesday the gathering being addressed by numerous speakers who urged active opposition to the French and Belgian measures. The speakers are said to have admitted that the policy of passive resistance inaugurated at the instigation of the Berlin government had failed.

German Minister Braces Resistance.

The Center party held a meeting at Munster last night at which, according to the French intelligence agents, it was admitted that passive resistance had been unsuccessful and that the time for active resistance had come. One of the speakers is said to have been a well known agitator from upper Silesia.

The secret visit to the Ruhr of Herr Stingl, German minister of posts and telegraphs, in defiance of the French orders against the entry of cabinet members has had a bracing effect on the strikers throughout the district, particularly those under his ministry.

All telegraph and telephone works are again on strike.

The work of eliminating the German trouble makers continues and fifty-three officials were expelled from the Ruhr Thursday and yesterday for disregarding French instructions. The ober-burgomaster of Dortmund and his assistant, the chief of the railway station there and the district supervisor were among those arrested for disobedience.

Send Burgomaster to Prison.

The ober-burgomaster of Duisburg, arrested by the Belgians on a similar charge, was tried by a Belgian court martial at Aix La Chappelle and sentenced to one month in prison and to pay the costs of the trial.

Another court martial sentenced an Essen police official named Klein to a month's imprisonment and a fine of 150 francs.

Recorder Guyenz of the Essen retail dealers association was sentenced to two years in jail and a fine of 8,000,000 marks. He was charged with disturbing public order by signing a circular in which merchants were exhorted in the interest of feeding the populace to refrain from selling to the occupation forces.

The situation in Essen is tense. The city now is policed by French troops, as the German security police all went on strike when their barracks was occupied.

FRENCH CHAGRINED

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DUSSELDORF, Feb. 17.—The feeling against the French in the Ruhr is growing more strong this evening following heavy sentences imposed on German officials by court martials yesterday. The population is aroused over this course by the French and are stimulated to further resentment by a series of frictions in the past week and now are threatening to give vent to their wrath against the army of occupation.

The French are chagrined over the fact that the German postmaster general, Herr Stingl, succeeded in breaking through the blockade, penetrating into the heart of the Ruhr and conferring with leaders yesterday without detection. The French admit they had no idea of his presence in the district, but they warned that serious consequences await further cabinet visitors if caught.

The visit of Herr Stingl was lightened through the fact that for some unknown reason passes were not demanded as strictly as usual. Herr Stingl appeared at a number of meeting places in Essen, Dusseldorf and Duisburg, where he exhorted the post, telegraph and telephone chiefs to stand pat in their present course.

Gives Germans New Courage.

This visit, plus Chancellor Cuno's speech in Berlin yesterday, where he used warlike terms, often referring to the "front" and the "enemy," have served to give the Germans new back bone. Heretofore sullen and silent, they now are beginning to be fresher and harder toward the invaders and are inclined to give the French "the air" as they pass. This only is serving to pique the French and make them more firm in dealing with the natives.

Chancellor Cuno's speech has caused resentment in the French camp.

The French are endeavoring to disarm the green police, but so far have not been especially successful, having obtained the weapons of only 100 out of 1,500. The green police apparently are avoiding their usual precinct stations and are going about in civilian clothes, so it is impossible to corral all of them.

An American military attache, Betley Mott, will make a tour of inspection in the Ruhr region.

CANADA GRANTS STAY TO WOMAN TO BE HANGED

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The Canadian minister of justice has granted a respite of one month in the case of Mrs. Florence Lassandra, sentenced to hang on Feb. 21 for the murder of Steve Lawson, a constable of the northwest mounted police, whom she shot to death near Blairmore, Alberta, early in November, while the constable was pursuing her and her companion. Mrs. Lassandra was known as the "queen of the bootleggers."

No action has been taken in the case of Mrs. Irene Christensen, who shot and killed her husband on their farm near Edmonton and who is to hang on April 4.

Feeling, however, is spreading all over Canada against hanging since the last two bungles, when two men had to be hanged twice.

BOY SAVED FROM ICY ISLAND, DIDN'T LIKE BEING SAVED

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—It was all wasted, this sympathy and fear for the safety of Arthur Greatrex, stranded three bitter cold days and nights on a barren island in ice clogged Jamaica bay. Take it from Arthur himself, or "Ringneck," as his cronies admiringly call him.

"Oh, boy! I was living the life of Reilly," he said, flanked by an unappreciative family in their home in Brooklyn after his rescue today by hardened seamen who knew too well the treacheries and the dangers of those waters in winter.

"I had a week's food, a bunch of blankets, a roaring fire and half a barrel of water in a swell little cabin. And the weather was great. I had a fine time shooting and going after clams."

POPE ASKS ITALY TO SAVE SCENE OF LORD'S SUPPER

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ROME, Feb. 17.—The Vatican has appealed to the Italian government to save the cenaculum, the place of the Lord's last supper, from being desecrated by a Hebraic archæological mission, which is said to have obtained permission from the Palestine government to excavate in search of David's tomb, which is supposed to be under the cenaculum on Mount Zion.

The Corriere d'Italia, a Roman Catholic paper, prints an article tonight entitled: "Italy must prevent the outrage against the cenaculum."

The writer says it is Italy's duty to stop the excavations, as the cenaculum is the most precious remains of Chrisianity, and excavations in it cannot be trusted to any one by Christians.

FRENCH AVERT BRITISH BREAK ON RHINE ROAD

Accept Offer of 6 Miles of Coal Railway.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Feb. 17.—[Tribune Radio.]—It is reported unofficially in London tonight, but not confirmed by the foreign office, that France has accepted the British offer, which yesterday they declared was impossible. The danger of the withdrawal of the British troops from the Rhine is temporarily averted.

The British offered to allow a limited use of the German railroads in the Cologne area to an extent no greater than their use before the invasion of the Ruhr, which means little, if any, concession, and allow the use of a six mile strip for the transport of coal. The British, however, refused flatly the French demand that they police the lines and allow the French full use for military and coal carrying purposes.

British Threatened to Quit.

Alternatively the British pointed out to the French that if the use of these lines was insisted on, as it is claimed by the French that they have the right to insist under the Versailles treaty, the British would withdraw their troops at once.

The British government is very anxious to postpone any action which might lead to a break with the French until the conclusion of the debate this week on the address replying to the king's speech. A vote on this is always taken as a formal vote of confidence or lack of confidence in the government.

The Liberals and Labor are absolutely united in opposition to the Bonar Law program and a definite breach with France would alienate some of the tories. This explains even the small concession made to the French.

CURBS MEDIATION

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Feb. 17.—Germany has launched secret appeals to the United States and Great Britain to intervene in France's occupation of the Ruhr and mediate to obtain a compromise on the reparations problem.

THE TRIBUNE learns that German representatives in London and Washington unofficially have begun a campaign through big American and English officials, as well as press propaganda, aimed to put pressure on France to consent to evacuate the Ruhr in exchange for a revised reparations schedule for delivery of materials with a moratorium in cash payments, which the Berlin government will sincerely promise to execute.

Simultaneously the French inspired press unanimously gives public warnings, directly aimed at London and indirectly at Washington and outsiders, not to attempt to intervene unless prepared to assure Germany's fulfilling its pledges in any new reparations scheme.

Hopes for Defense Pact.

Premier Poincare is ready to accept any British or American plan for solving reparations if it carries guarantees assuring France's security and treaty rights. Quai d'Orsay believes a modified three power defensive pact may be contrived through such an agreement.

Premier Poincare and the cabinet this morning indorsed Minister of Public Works Le Trocquer's arrangement in London, obtaining the use of the Duren railway for coal shipments and the right to negotiate later for the use of the Cologne junction for troop trains, if it suddenly becomes necessary to reinforce the Ruhr army. Gen. Degoutte will confer directly with Gen. Godley, the British commander at Cologne, tomorrow on the employment of the Rhine main line.

JURY GETS CASE OF WOMAN WHO KILLED DOCTOR

New York, Feb. 17.—The case of Mrs. Lillian Raizen, slayer of Dr. Abraham Glickstein, was given to the jury at 11 o'clock tonight.

Mrs. Raizen confessed, in open court that she killed Dr. Glickstein at his Brooklyn office in December, 1921, "to get back her honor" of which she claimed he had despoiled her.

2—A bomb was hurled at the French headquarters in Essen.

3—The German postmaster general ran the French blockade and stirred up a new telephone and telegraph strike in Dusseldorf and other Ruhr cities which he visited.

WOMAN NOT HIS KIDNAPED CHILD, DR. WINTERS SAYS

Richmond, Ind., Feb. 17.—Photographs of Mrs. Clyde Taylor, wife of a Middleport, O., coal miner, bear no resemblance to Catherine Winters, kidnaped girl, according to the statement of Dr. W. A. Winters, in a telephone conversation tonight. Pictures, newspaper clippings, a telegram and a letter were received by the father of the missing girl this afternoon from Mrs. Taylor.

"Mrs. Taylor wrote me that she will be 19 years old, May 1," said Dr. Winters. "The pictures appear to be of a much older woman and there is not the slightest resemblance to my daughter. I will write to Mrs. Taylor tomorrow telling her that I do not believe she is Catherine."

Catherine Winters would have been 19 years old last Saturday, Feb. 10, according to her father. She disappeared March 20, 1913. Dr. Winters expressed gratitude for the interest taken in the case by persons all over the country and said that he holds hope that some clew may lead to the finding of his daughter.

CRONKHITE GETS SUPPORT TO PUSH MURDER INQUIRY

Washington, Feb. 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Maj. Gen. Adelbert Cronkhite, whose recent enforced retirement from active service coming after the mysterious killing four years ago of his son, Maj. Alexander P. Cronkhite, has developed into a sensation of army history, presented today his story of the two cases to Senators Reed [Rep., Pa.] and Glass [Dem., Va.]. The senators, with others, are considering the advisability of a public inquiry by a senate committee.

The general also conferred with Col. Jennings S. Wise, who, with other former officers of the 80th division, of which the general was the war commander, have urged that something be done in behalf of their former superior officer.

Senator Reed said the conference with Gen. Cronkhite had served to enlighten him on many points in connection with the killing of Maj. Cronkhite at Camp Lewis, Wash., and the retirement of Gen. Cronkhite.

Senator Calder [Rep., N. Y.], who was brought into the matter through a pamphlet gotten out by Gen. Cronkhite's friends, in which it was charged the New York senator, with others, had blocked prosecution of the alleged murderers of Maj. Cronkhite, announced that if an inquiry was ordered he would insist on a thorough airing of the circumstances attending the killing of the officer.

CONFESSES KILLING WIFE.

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Charles Cox, 35 years old, was arrested today and confessed, the police say, that he shot and killed his wife, Gussie Cox, 18 years old, at their home here last night, following a quarrel.

COST OF LIVING IN GERMANY AND FRANCE CLIMBS

Rise of Mark and Fall of Franc Are Causes.

BY GEORGE SELDES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—[Tribune Radio.]—Coffee and tea at $1.50 a pound, shirt silk at $8 a yard and automobiles at three times the prices of two weeks ago in Germany are some of the results of Germany's sensational mark speculation. The prices bounded upward when the mark tripled in value. The Germans now complain that it costs more to live here than in America.

A director of one of the largest American firms in Germany says it now costs the Germans more to buy from the factory here than to import the same article from America. Naturally American companies manufacturing in Germany are doing no business. They are losing money because they must pay workmen at a rate set at 50,000 marks to a dollar.

Business at Standstill.

Practically all business in Germany is at a standstill, awaiting either the stabilization of the mark or a return to the old basis. Under the present circumstances nobody can buy or sell. Stores are practically empty.

Hotel rooms, the rates of which were raised twice in one week and then doubled when the dollar reached 50,000 marks, now cost from $7 to $20 daily, being higher than those of any European hotels. The only decreases in prices announced were those in the iron trade, which were reduced 11 per cent, and the textile trade, reduced 10 per cent.

FRENCH PRICES CLIMB

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Feb. 17.—The cost of living in France has risen 25 per cent in January over the first three months of 1922, according to the statistical bureau. On a basis of 100 francs in 1913 the cost of living averaged 418 francs in 1922, decreasing to 357 francs in the first quarter of 1922 and rising to 447 francs in the last month. Wages remained stationary, although there is agitation everywhere for increases, especially since the cost of bread advanced two sous.

Textiles Up Most.

Textiles increased most, a one franc purchase in 1918 costing 4 francs a years ago, and 6¼ francs today. One franc's worth of food in 1914 cost 4 francs a year ago and 4¼ francs today.

The increases are chiefly due to the depreciation of the exchange and the heavier cost of imports. One pound sterling was worth 47 francs last April, 64 francs at the end of 1922, and 77 francs now. One dollar was worth less than 12 francs last April. It is approaching 17 francs today.

Miners in the Saar, Moselle, and elsewhere are striking for higher wages.

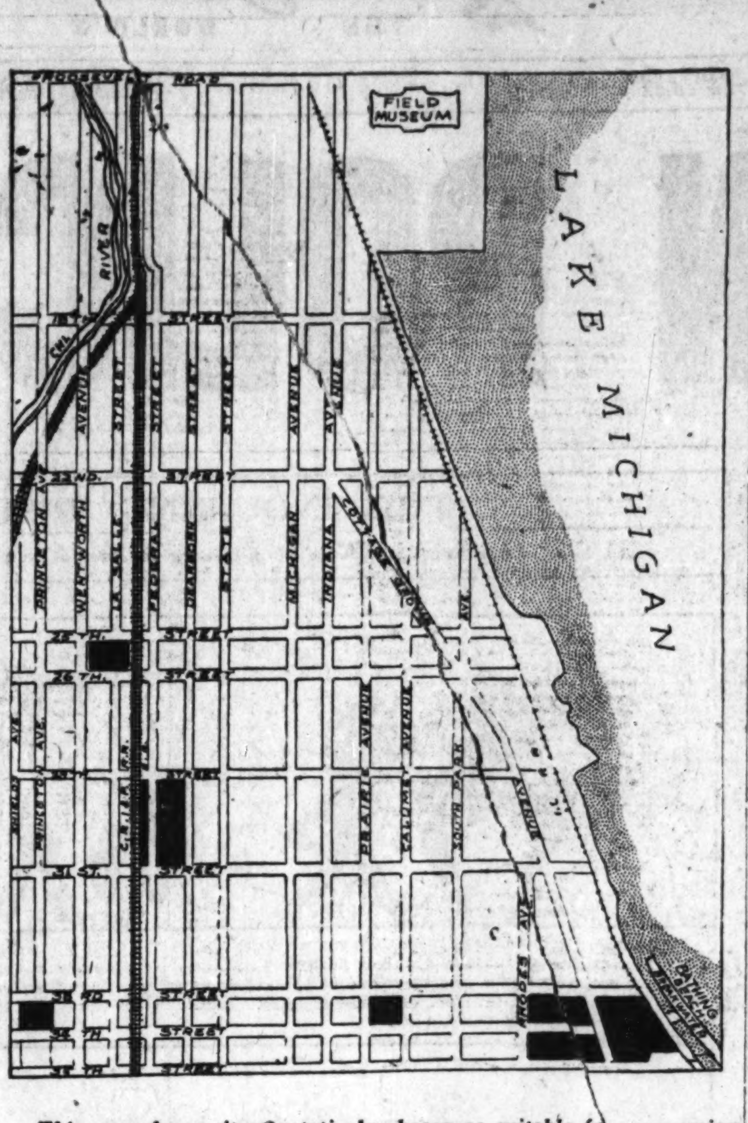
"Stage Struck" Girl Gone, Parents Ask Police Aid

Mrs. Maud Healy, 3937 Lexington street, yesterday sought the help of the police in the search for her daughter, Alice, who has not been seen since she left home on Tuesday to go to the loop. According to the mother, Miss Healy rehearsed with a theatrical company, which afterwards went to New Orleans, and has been somewhat stage struck ever since. Mrs. Healy believes that her daughter may have gone to Hollywood.

"Famous Players" to Face Trust Inquiry April 5

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[United Press.] — Hearings to determine whether the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is guilty of having entered into a conspiracy to monopolize the moving picture industry will be started before the federal trade commission April 5, or shortly thereafter, the commission announced today.

PLAN NEW SOUTH SIDE PARK



This map shows sites tentatively chosen as suitable for conversion into a park which would serve the south side between 18th and 40th streets. Albert Mohr, south park commissioner, states that he recognizes the need, especially of the colored people of that district, for a park, and will work for one if reappointed on Feb. 23.

ROYAL CHAPLAIN HERE; SAYS PRINCE WORRIES BRITISH

England is a little agitated over refusal of the Prince of Wales to marry, according to Albert Victor Baillie, Dean of Windsor and chaplain to the royal family, who arrived in Chicago yesterday.

"In the old days," he said, "it would have been suggested that he marry such and such a person, and pressure would have been brought to bear. Now there is no one to tell him that and the whole nation is hoping that he will fall in love, as did his brother, the Duke of York."

"That is a real love match," continued the Dean, who remarked that the Prince of Wales is a particularly delightful fellow. The king and queen and the rest of the family behave like anyone else, he says, and have set a fine example of how an Englishman and his wife should conduct themselves. "Both the king and queen are much beloved by the whole empire," he added. "They justified the crown as an important part of the national life."

Mexico Plans Border Zone to Keep Out American Vice

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, Feb. 17.—President Obregon today said he believed a Mexican boundary zone should be established on the Rio Grande to prevent waves of American vice from flooding into Mexico.

Mexico has vice enough at home, without opening the door for more from abroad, he said. He intimated that he favored cleaning the border cities, which could be done properly only by shutting out foreign residents in the border zone.

> No sooner met, but they looked; no sooner looked, but they loved; no sooner loved, but they sighed; no sooner sighed but they asked one another the season; no sooner knew the reason but they sought the remedy. —"As You Like It.".

For seventeen years William Shakespeare, musician and vocal teacher, with studios at 410 South Michigan avenue, "sought the reason". Yesterday he found the "remedy" in a suit for divorce filed in Circuit court against Mrs. May Scadding Shakespeare of Toronto, Ontario.

Seven years after their marriage, on Dec. 16, 1905, Mrs. Shakespeare deserted her home, according to the bill, despite Shakespeare's claim that he was "a true, kind, indulgent husband, providing her with all the necessities and comforts of life."

MOHR PLANNING PARK FOR USE OF COLORED PEOPLE

Hopes to Obtain Site on Lake Front.

Recognition of the recreation needs of residents of that section of the south side between 18th and 40th streets by the opening of a park is one of the planks of the platform on which Albert Mohr, south park commissioner, is seeking reappointment to office on Feb. 23. The appointment will be made by Circuit court judges.

The plan which he and other members of the board are working out is to buy two or three blocks in the district near Thirty-third street and the lake front, put in tennis courts and a baseball field and open a way to a bathing beach. Such a park is greatly desired by the colored people, who form a large percentage of the population of that section, Mr. Mohr stated yesterday. Several tentative sites have been picked out.

One Site Offers Beach.

One site proposed is between 33rd and 35th streets, and Cottage Grove and the lake front. At this point there will be a bathing beach across the waterway and beyond the outer breakwater. Bids will be opened tomorrow, Mr. Mohr said, for the outer breakwater.

Other sites that would answer the purposes are at 33rd street, between Calumet and Prairie avenues, at 29th street near Dearborn, Armour square near the White Sox park, and Hardin square at 26th and Clark streets. All these are in the congested colored district.

Mr. Mohr is opposed for reappointment by friends of Bernard Sunny, chairman of the Illinois Bell Telephone company. Commissioner Mohr has been in office for ten years, and during that time has aided in building and improving many small parks.

Sixty-five Organizations for Him.

"I stand for development and improvement of all small parks, playgrounds, and bathing beaches," he said. "I advocate especially a park for the colored folk. It would help 100,000 of these people to enjoy life. The first thing is to purchase a park site and put up buildings for them, then get them a bathing beach. I am not in politics and have spent much time and money of my own in working for the people of the south side."

Mr. Mohr is a boiler manufacturer and lives at 7307 South Shore drive. On Jan. 18 last he was given a testimonial dinner by representatives of sixty-five south side organizations, asking for his reappointment. His present term expires March 1.

Denver, Colo., Feb. 17.—Charles H. Finley, division traffic superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph company, died here tonight after a short illness. He was 64 years old. He came to Denver in 1918 from Chicago, where he was chief operator for the company. He was prominent in Masonic circles here and in Chicago. Mr. Finley is survived by his widow and a son, R. F. Finley of Cleveland, O., and a daughter, Mrs. Grace Roak of Hinsdale, Ill. Burial will be in Chicago.

Paris, Ill., Feb. 17.—Paris Fenton, 13 years old, was seriously injured today as a result of a bullet discharged from a rifle which his brother was cleaning.

NEAR EAST PEACE NO NEARER; ISMET GOES TO ANGORA

Confers with Allies in Constantinople.

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 17.—[Tribune Radio.]—Notwithstanding conversations with the allied commissioners, including Admiral Bristol, Ismet Pasha left for Angora tonight with the situation precisely the same as when he departed from Lausanne.

Ismet repeated that it was impossible to sign the economic clauses of the treaty, which neutral observers admit would enslave Turkey economically, although it was evident that he was willing to concede the allied point of view on capitulations. The allied commissioners reiterated that their governments have not changed their points of view since the conference broke up.

Ismet Fears Rebuke.

Ismet is worried that the assembly, instead of giving him a vote of confidence now, since he will not present them with a signed treaty, will rebuke him for deviating from the national pact, the basis for the organization of the Angora government and the war against the Greeks.

It may be mentioned that the economic clauses, which broke up the conference, are against American interests according to business men here, yet the American observer who lectured the Turks on minorities is said to have failed to protest.

Confers with Harington.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Ismet Pasha, conversing with Lieut. Gen. Sir Charles Harington, the allied commander at Constantinople, reiterated, according to Reuter's Constantinople correspondent, his sincere desire for peace. He emphasized the necessity of reaching a settlement before spring.

THREE TORTURE DEATH SUSPECTS HAZY IN STORIES

Held by Sheriff Until He Checks Up Alibis.

The "giant" foreigner and his two companions seen in the general neighborhood of the snow grave of the Geneva torture murder victim the night the mutilated body was placed in its improvised roadside cemetery were held in the Kane county jail last night for questioning and investigation.

Officially they were charged only with driving while intoxicated, an accusation they frankly admitted. But through the night Sheriff W. E. Orr sought to get information which might clear up the slaying of the young man found dead and mutilated on a knoll a mile and a half off the Lincoln highway last Tuesday.

Sheriff Orr plans to hold the men until he can check up on all angles of their stories. Unless this reveals damaging evidence, however, it is believed the three will be released in a day or two, or at least freed of suspicion in connection with the murder.

"Can't Understand English."

Finally admitting, after numerous denials, that they were the occupants of the old winter topped Oakland automobile seen by many persons and trailed by a posse for four days, the trio persistently denied connection with or knowledge of the slaying. When closely pressed on contradictions in their own stories they sought refuge behind grins and statements that "me no understand Eengleesh" or "me very drunk that night," "don't remember." All are Russian Finns.

The old car was found in De Kalb by Capt. C. S. Rowe of the De Kalb police, who had charge of the search in that town, and E. R. Morris, a DeKalb newspaper reporter. It lay in an old garage and machine shop on Pleasant avenue between Tenth and Eleventh streets, owned by Alex Waisto.

"Giant" Contradicts Self.

Alex is the "giant" described as wiping bloody hands and seeking a gallon of gasoline for a car that already had seven gallons in the tank. Waisto was taken to the police station. He denied being out Monday in his car, but finally when he had entangled himself by contradictions he admitted the drive, and named Jack Maki, 1148 Market street, and Isaac Wainjankaa, 1122 State street, De Kalb, as his companions in a revel in the old Oakland Monday night.

Late in the night they were taken to the morgue and forced to view the remains of the snow victim, but if any of the three had ever seen that mutilated body when it held life he gave no visible sign. "No know him. No see him before. No ever heard of him," was the broken English comment of Alex Waisto, the giant.

Waisto Like Powerful Animal.

Waisto is a powerful barrel-chested man of 6 feet, weighing 200 pounds. His dark brown hair is thinning. His high cheek bones, sharply square chin, and eyes like an iceberg give him a face that might have been cut from a slab of steel. He denied in broken English and splutters of Finnish that there was blood on his hands Monday. He repeatedly contradicted known facts as to the time of his presence in the vicinity of the snow grave, he denied paying for food with blood soaked money, he denied everything except that he was along the Lincoln highway that night with his two friends, and he admitted that only after being shown the futility of denial.

"Me drive Jack and Isaac to Aurora Monday afternoon for booze," he said. "We get to Aurora about 2 o'clock. We go down and see girls at house we know and have lots of whisky and beer. Then Jack and Isaac each buy bottle of booze and we start back.

Run Into Ditch.

"We run in ditch near Geneva and give man dollar to pull us out. Then near St. Charles boys home my car stop. No gas. I go in house, but he have no gas. I drive car on gas in carbureter to next house and get gallon of gas. Then we stop at Elburn garage, out of gas again, and get five gallons and go on. No see any shooting. No see anything. Just drunk and having h—l of a time."

"Where did your car break down?"

"West of Elburn, near De Kalb."

"Why did you refuse to take gas from the garage man who brought it out at Naylor's farm, where you tried to get a gallon? Why wouldn't you let him get near your car?"

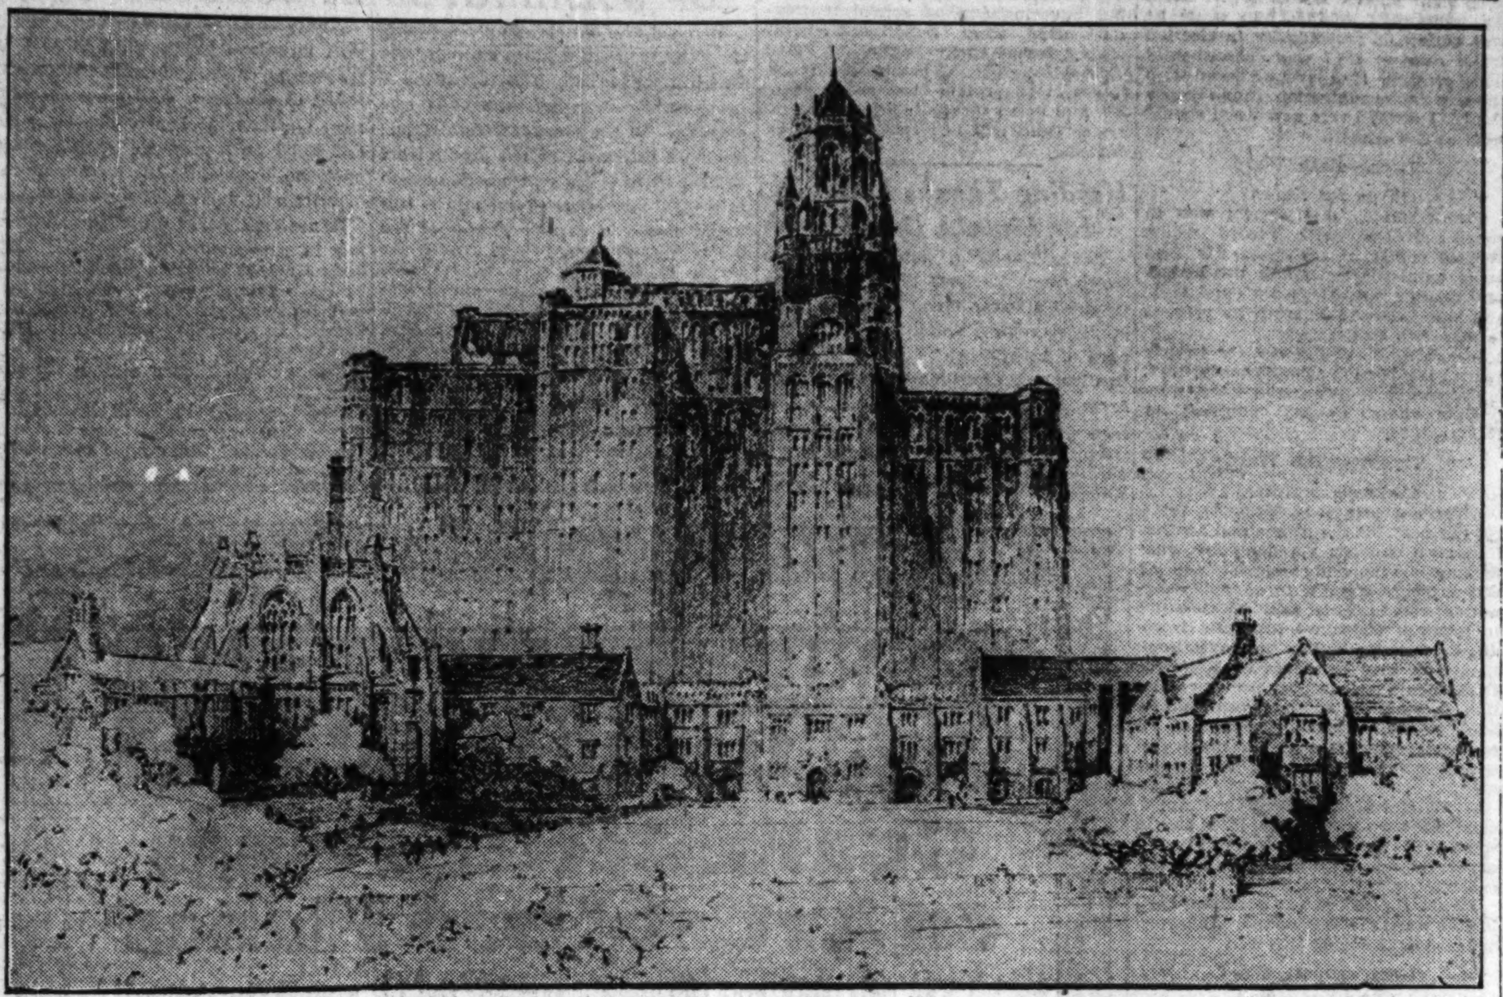
"Me very drunk, don't remember."

"Why did it take you an hour and a half to drive from Naylor's farm seven miles to Elburn; didn't you switch off on the side road where the body was found?"

"Me no understand Eenglesh, good. No know what you mean. Drive straight home."

Waisto runs his garage when he can get business, which, he says is not often, and the others are steel workers.

KEY STRUCTURE OF NEW N. U. CAMPUS



Tentative drawing submitted by Architect James Gamble Rogers for the key building for the new Northwestern university campus at Chicago avenue and Lake Shore drive, construction of which is expected to be begun in the near future. The buildings contemplated and the land will, it is estimated, cost $10,000,000.

BARRYMORES MEET IN FRANCE; VAGUE REGARDING DIVORCE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 17.—"I do not see why people have been asking if Mr. Barrymore and myself are separating," replied Mrs. John Barrymore today when questioned regarding the divorce rumors.

MRS. JOHN BARRYMORE.

Mrs. Barrymore, who is known also as Michael Strange, her pen name, went to Cherbourg to meet her husband, who arrived on the Olympic. She has also given the name Strange to two of her children by Leonard Thomas.

"Anyone familiar with French law knows that a husband and wife are legally required to remain six months together in this country before they can apply for divorce," she said.

Mr. Barrymore, whose name did not appear on the passenger list of the Olympic, told THE TRIBUNE later that he would remain in Europe until summer, but he refused to discuss the divorce report. Mr. Barrymore kept himself in seclusion during the entire voyage.

DRUGGIST LOSES $1,668 TO TWO ARMED BANDITS

Frank Heffernan, 6525 South Maplewood avenue, was robbed of $28 and jewelry valued at $1,640 last night by two men who accosted him a block from his home.

Heffernan told the police that he was walking in West 65th street, between South Maplewood and South Campbell avenues, when the two men with revolvers stopped him. The robbers used a knife to cut a diamond stick pin valued at $800 from his tie. A diamond ring valued at $700 and a watch worth $140 also were taken by the men.

CHICAGO BOYS HELD IN MEMPHIS WANTED HERE

Extradition will be asked, Chicago police announced last night, for Henry Connery, 6234 Winthrop avenue, and Myers Goeb, 6308 Lakewood avenue, who were arrested Friday night in Memphis, Tenn., for the robbery of a grocery store. Both are boys 18 years old.

Plans for their extradition developed out of alleged confessions made by the two in Memphis that they stole $4,000 worth of bonds from the home of Emil Bach, 7415 Sheridan road, on last Tuesday. The bonds were found in their possession.

According to Memphis police, the youths have also confessed a number of flat robberies in Rogers Park and Connery has admitted robbing stores in Baton Rouge, La.

Henry Connery is the son of Michael M. Connery and the nephew of John T. Connery, part owner of the Edgewater Beach hotel. The other youth is the son of Lawrence A. Goeb.

At both the Connery and the Goeb homes last night members of the two families denied that the Memphis reports concerned the Chicago boys. But at neither was a reporter able to see or talk with either youth.

NOTED INDIANA ATTORNEY FOUND DEAD IN HOTEL

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 17.—The body of Charles W. Miller, former attorney general of Indiana, was found today in a room of a local hoted. Mr. Miller's throat was cut, and a half pint bottle containing a small quantity of poison was found in the room.

Henry M. Dowling, Mr. Miller's law partner, said that Mr. Miller was undoubtedly insane.

Mr. Miller was formerly United States district attorney for Indiana. He prosecuted the so-called dynamite conspiracy case, in which forty-two men, many of them labor leaders, including the McNamara brothers, were tried. Thirty-eight men were convicted and two were acquitted. Two pleaded guilty.

HUSBAND ELECTS TO FOLLOW WIFE SENT TO ASYLUM

Voluntary confinement in the insane asylum at Kankakee, Ill., was chosen by John Dado, 82 years old, rather than separation from his 72 year old wife, Fredricka, who was adjudged insane in the Will County court at Joliet yesterday.

"We've been married fifty-three years, judge," Dado pleaded, "and it would kill her to separate us now. Let me go with her. I've got $18,000, and I can pay my way."

Permission was granted when the alienist declared that the aged husband also was on the verge of mental derangement from senility.

$130,000,000 IN FIELD ESTATE, TRUSTEES SHOW

Property valued at nearly $130,000,000 is included in the estate of the late Marshall Field, Chicago's pioneer mrechant prince. This was revealed yesterday when Judge Denis E. Sullivan ratified the investment of income from the estate in government bonds by the trustees of the property, the Merchants Loan and Trust company, Chauncey Keep, Arthur B. Jones, and Marshall Field III.

Approval of the re-investment of the income was sought by the trustees in a friendly suit against fifty-one heirs of Marshall Field and the Field Museum of Natural History, also a legatee. Under the terms of his will, Mr. Field directed that "investments be made with reference to the security of the trust fund rather than the rate of interest or income to be derived." One-half of the estate must be represented by real estate at all times, the will directed.

Investment of $500,000 in Territory of Hawaii improvement bonds, as well as large purchases of Porto Rican bonds, federal farm loan bonds, and Joint Stock Land bank bonds were approved by Judge Sullivan. These securities are exempt from federal tax.

Strip Policeman of Star for Quarrel with Officer

Policeman Patrick Conley of the Chicago avenue station was stripped of his star and lodged in a cell early this morning following a quarrel with Patrol Sergeant Charles Polowski in a soft drink parlor at North Wells street and West Oak street, in which both drew their revolvers. A companion of Conley is also being held.

N. U. TO ERECT 10 MILLION GROUP IN 'WONDER MILE'

Campus to Be in Harmony with Chicago Plan.

Trustees of Northwestern university announced yesterday plans to spend from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000 in the first unit of buildings at Alexander McKinlock memorial campus at Chicago avenue and Lake Shore drive.

When completed this project will form the most attractive urban university campus in the world and will give Chicago a group of new buildings in harmony with the Chicago city plan, a type described as "an impressive combination of commercial and university architecture, intellectual in spirit, yet closely associated with the skyscrapers of the loop."

The new campus, which will house the medical, law, dental, and other schools, is a nine acre tract 500 feet east of Michigan boulevard, in direct line with the northward march of Chicago business. This tract was purchased by the university in 1920 for $1,420,260. The cost of the buildings to be erected there will bring the eventual cost to $10,000,000 at least.

Submits Tentative Drawings.

James Gamble Rogers, designer of the Harkness memorial quadrangle at Yale university and consulting architect of that institution, has submitted tentative drawings for the new buildings. He will come to Chicago this week to develop his plans and consult with the university trustees and with President Walter Dill Scott.

The drawings give a unique conception of the combination of business utility and cultural beauty in a proposed skyscraper building of many stories surmounted by a decorative tower. This building is the key to the whole architectural scheme of the new campus.

The main building will be at the western end of the campus, facing Lake Shore drive. On the north and south will be rows of three story buildings. The great tower building and the smaller ones will ultimately inclose the three sides of the campus, leaving the Lake Shore frontage open for view. The business entrance is to be on Chicago avenue.

Hospital to Be Included.

Elevators and other conveniences of modern business structures will be part of the equipment. The tower building is intended to house the medical and dental schools. A modern clinical and treatment hospital also will be located in the main unit of the group, to be run in conjunction with the schools. The smaller buildings will take care of the growing schools of law, commerce, and journalism, with dormitories and a gymnasium. The first buildings to be erected will be the law and commerce.

The university is opening a campaign for a $2,000,000 endowment fund, which will be devoted to the salaries of instructors, buying laboratory materials, and to similar purposes. Members of the central committee, which will have charge of the financial campaign are Robert W. Campbell, chairman; William A. Dyche, vice chairman; Mark W. Cresap, Mrs. Carl Latham, Edwin S. Mills, James F. Oates, J. Hastie Odgers, George Craig Stewart, and Melvin A. Traylor, trustees. Subsidiary and alumni organizations are being formed.

"There are today enrolled in Northwestern university nearly 8,000 students," said Chairman Campbell yesterday. "Approximately 5,000 of these are enrolled in the several Chicago departments. Many students are turned away every year because of lack of housing facilities. Three of the Chicago departments at present are accommodated in the old Tremont house, 31 West Lake street, in which is also located the very valuable and most unusual E. H. Gary law library. The medical school, the other of the Chicago departments, is located upon the south side.

"The demands upon Northwestern university, as upon most all universities, have been annually increasing. A few years ago the trustees dreamed of a consolidated campus, upon which all of the Chicago professional schools could be united near downtown Chicago, yet far enough away to be free from the hurly-burly of the noisy loop, in appropriate buildings of artistic design, of which not only the university but all Chicago could be proud.

Open Campaign for Funds.

"In an attempt to carry out this dream a site on the lake front at Chicago avenue was purchased, and today the trustees, through a committee of which I happen to be chairman, are launching a campaign for funds in an attempt to make that dream come true.

"We know we have the loyal and hearty support of the students, of the faculties, and of the alumni of the several schools. By the same token, we have confidence that the friends of the university and the friends of education in general will be interested in seeing not only a magnificent educational center almost in the heart of Chicago, but will take personal pride in helping to make a noteworthy addition to the already well developed plans for a 'Chicago Beautiful.'"

Succeeds Brother

John S. Capper, founder of the haberdasher firm of Capper & Capper, yesterday resigned the presidency of the concern in favor of George H. Capper, a brother twenty years his junior.

Although retiring from active business, Mr. Capper will remain chairman of the board of directors. His resignation brings to a climax the career begun at 11 years of age as a $3 a week cash boy.

The first Capper store was opened in the basement of the old First National Bank building in Dearborn street on borrowed capital of $1,600. The business is now capitalized at $1,000,000.

Foreman Held in Death of Workman Due to Blow

Andrew J. Ring, a foreman of the Central Rubber company, 18th street and Long avenue, was held to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter yesterday by the coroner's jury investigating the death of John L. Harder, 2408 South Kirkland avenue, also an employé of the company. It

COLD WHIPS OUT WITH BLIZZARD AND RACES EAST

Moderating Weather Due Today, Bureau Says.

Alaskan cold which has been pounding temperatures below and around the zero mark in Chicago for the last four days will relinquish its frigid grip on the city today, weather bureau prognostigators say.

The subzero wave is scheduled to pass to the eastward across the lakes today. In its place will come milder weather with a general rise in temperature by tomorrow as far south as the Ohio valley and as far east as the lower lake region.

There is prospect, the weather bureau statement issued last night said, that the early days of the week will be marked by moderate temperature for this season of the year.

City Swept by Blizzard.

Zero temperatures bade adieu to Chicago yesterday with a final biting fling in the shape of a driving snowstorm. Chicago and nearby towns experienced a blizzard in the early hours of the afternoon, the wind driving fine snow almost horizontally at times.

A number of automobile accidents were reported to the police, most of which were caused by the dense pall. Pedestrians groped their way along the streets, almost blinded.

Add Three to Cold's Fatalities.

Three more deaths were added to the toll of the cold wave yesterday morning when the bodies of three persons—father, mother, and 15 year old daughter—were found in their home at Dalton, Ill., seventeen miles south of Chicago.

A gas pipe froze during the night, it was found, and later thawing, permitted the gas to flow into the rooms where they were sleeping. William Lamboke, 64 years old; Mrs. Catherine Lamboke, 61; and Miss Agnes Lamboke were the persons asphyxiated.

M. V. L. Warns Citizens in More Indorsements.

M. V. L. INDORSEES

The aldermanic candidates recommended to date by the Municipal Voters' league are the following:

Ward.		Ward.
1.	George Hodge.	26.	Frank Klaus.
3.	Charles F. Brown.	27.	Ald. John Touhy.
4.	Ald. U.S. Schwartz.	28.	Ald. George M. Maypole.
5.	Ald. C. S. Eaton.	29.	Albert J. Horan.
6.	Ald. Guy Guernsey	31.	Stanley Adamkiewicz.
7.	Ald. R. A. Woodhull.	37.	Wiley W. Mills.
9.	Ald. Sheldon Govier.	40.	I. N. Chellew.
11.	Ald. John A. Richert.	41.	Frank W. Barber.
12.	Wm. J. Gormley.	42.	Ald. Dorsey. R. Crowe.
13.	Ald. Joseph B. McDonough.	43.	Ald. Arthur F. Albert.
14.	Michael J. Costello	44.	Ald. Thomas O. Wallace.
19.	Philip W. Yarrow or D. S. McKinlay.	45.	Ald. Leo M. Brieske.
21.	Ald. Dennis A. Horan.	48.	Ald. Frank Link.
22.	Ald. Joseph Cepak	49.	Ald. E. I. Frankhauser.
24.	Merris Seskind.

In the second installment of its report on aldermanic candidates in the election of Feb. 27, the Municipal Voters' league yesterday again emphasized the fact that a large part of the city council will be elected—not merely nominated—on that day.

"Remember," warned the report, "that as far as aldermen are concerned the election of Feb. 27 is a final election and not merely a primary. The result of the vote on that day will settle the character of the council for the next two years. The entire council is being elected this year. Do your part in cleaning up a bad mess!"

Ten More Ward Reports.

The essential parts of the league's comment on the leading candidates in ten more wards follows:

First Ward.

[Vote for Hodge.

George Hodge, publisher of Union Labor Advocate for sixteen years past. Energetic and reputable support.

Ald. John J. Coughlin has a long, bad record.

Third Ward.

[Vote for Brown.]

Charles F. Brown, lawyer in office with Thomas D. Nash. Born in this ward thirty-five years ago, graduate Chicago Kent college of law, 1912; in the late war was thirty-one months in quartermaster's service. Energetic and bears good reputation.

Ald. Robert R. Jackson voted five times for the Faherty experts and against the people; voted to confirm Davis and Severinghaus, and after their indictment voted against forcing them to resign; voted against investigating holdup of city employés in Riverview Park picnic scandal and voted to ask legislature to raise Chicago's tax rate. Has obediently followed the city hall machine ever since he got into the council.

Voters should combine on Charles F. Brown to beat Ald. Jackson.

Seventh Ward.

[Vote for Woodhull.]

Ald. Ross A. Woodhull—His two votes on Faherty's experts were for the people. Voted for investigation of holdup of city employés in Riverview park picnic scandal; voted for confirming Davis and Severinghaus as school trustees, but after their indictment voted to force their resignation. Chairman of harbors committee, which has in charge the development of Lake Calumet harbor. Member with Schwartz and Guernsey of Finance subcommittee which investigated doings of Faherty's experts. Forceful and effective debater. Has exerted influence on the council floor for economy in appropriations.

Lester V. Bratton, salesman of electrical refrigerators and motor cars Born in Plattsville, Wis., 1884; attended Ralston university at Washington; in Chicago seventeen and in the ward fourteen years; energetic and bears good reputation.

Clement L. U. Clemons, lawyer; born in this ward 36 years ago; graduate Notre Dame law department; worked his way through college. In 1915 catcher on Cubs baseball team. Served as chief yeoman in world war; energetic and bears good reputation.

Nineteenth Ward.

[Vote for Yarrow or McKinlay.]

Phillip W. Yarrow, acting pastor of Auburn Park Federated church four months past, and for fifteen months has been state superintendent of Illinois Vigilance association; born in London, 1872; in Chicago 15 and in ward 8 years. Worked his way through Princeton university, 1896, and Hartford Theological seminary, 1899. Pastor of Morgan Park church six years and trustee of Morgan Park Military academy eight years. Mr. Yarrow is a man of action, able and public spirited. Would make a strong member of the council.

Donald S. McKinlay, lawyer, at 105 W. Monroe street; born in Chicago, 1887; graduate Englewood high school and in 1910 of Chicago Kent College of Law; worked in railroad office nearly five years. Law clerk for John S. Hummer and Charles A. McDonald. now judge, three years, and for Francis H. McKeever, attorney for the public administrator, four years; member of Blim, Teed, McKinlay and Siqueland, lawyers, three years; man of character and ability.

Ald. Benjamin S. Wilson voted 100 per cent for Faherty's experts and against the people; voted to force resignation of Davis and Severinghaus. after their indictment; voted against investigating holdup of city employes in Riverview Park picnic scandal. His chief drawback in the council has been too close a loyalty to the city hall.

Twenty-first Ward.

[Horan preferred.]

Ald. Dennis A. Horan voted once for the people against Faherty's experts; voted to force resignation of Davis and Severinghaus, after their indictment; voted to investigate holdup of city employes in Riverview Park picnic scandal, but voted for asking legislature to increase city tax rate.

John J. Logodny, 1648 W. 18th street, clerk in County court; born in this ward, 1885; formerly book salesman and in real estate business. Well spoken of.

Lorenz Meisterheim, salesman; born in Germany, 1872; assistant jailer eight years.

Twenty-second Ward.

[Vote for Cepak.]

Ald. Joseph Cepak voted 100 per cent for the people against Faherty's experts; voted to force resignation of Davis and Severinghaus, after their indictment: voted to investigate holdup of city employes in Riverview Park picnic scandal, but voted to ask legislature to increase city's tax rate: introduced resolution to repeal ordinance forbidding sale of cigarets near school buildings. Made the European junket last summer. Fair voting record, but lacks force.

Louis A. Cejka, machinist, who has run several times on the socialist ticket; born in Austria, 1881; in Chicago and the ward twenty-seven years.

Twenty-fourth Ward.

[Vote for Seskind.]

Morris Seskind, labor editor Jewish Daily Forward, born in Kovno, Lithuania, 1873; in Chicago and the ward thirty-three years, was cigar maker twenty-one years; served as publicity agent for Amalgamated clothing workers and organizer of the United Hebrew trades. A self educated man with ability and a good reputation for honesty.

Jacob M. Arvey, member since 1920 of the law firm of Rabor, Kostner, Herr and Arvey; born in Chicago twenty-nine years ago; assistant state's attorney under Maclay Hoyne, 1919-20; since then law partner of Alderman Kostner, who was member of the Finance subcommittee which had to do with the much discussed purchases of equipment for the fire department, and who incurred criticism for acting as attorney for concerns which sell equipment to the department. Arvey is a young man of ability and energy.

Paul W. Rothenberg, real estate six months past; born in Roumania thirty-eight years ago; was assistant analyst under state food commissioner 1910-13; clerk in board of review, 1918-20. Has been cigar maker, salesman and clerk. An indictment against him while he was acting as investigator in election fraud case in 1913 was subsequently nolle prossed. Has been affiliated with the city hall organization. By no means the kind of man this new ward should send to the council.

Twenty-sixth Ward.

[Vote for Klaus.]

Frank Klaus, real estate; was in council 1911-21, with record which showed continual progress. He had voted against overloading the budget and against the $8,000,000 bond issue and was defeated because he refused to take city hall dictation.

Joseph A. Mendel, florist for twenty years past; born Czecho-Slovakia, 1877; in Chicago forty-five and in ward twenty-eight years. County commissioner 1910 to 1912.

Twenty-eighth Ward.

[Maypole preferred.]

Alderman George M. Maypole; voted 100 per cent for the people and against Faherty's experts; voted against confirming Davis and Severinghaus as school trustees and to force their resignation; voted against asking legislature to increase Chicago's tax rate; introduced the resolution to investigate holdup of city employés in Riverside Park picnic scandal; author of resolution to stop the mayor from holding back election returns. Member of Finance subcommittee on the much discussed purchases for the fire department.

H. W. Harris, 3722 Ferdinand street, druggist; born in Chicago, 1868, and in ward over thirty years; formerly printer; served one term in legislature with good record.

Frank R. Leeby, hat business; born in this ward in 1890; served in quartermaster corps during late war.

Thirty-seventh Ward.

[Vote for Mills.]

Wiley W. Wills, lawyer, 19 So. La Salle street, born in Clinton, Mich., 1869; graduate University of Michigan. Admitted to the bar, 1895; member of school board, 1906-09. For years active champion of municipal ownership and of the initiative and referendum. Possesses the sincerity, courage and ability so much needed in the council.

Eden T. Brekke, member of Brekke Brothers, retail coal, for ten years past; born in this ward twenty-nine years ago. Attended Austin high school two years; was superintendent of parks and playgrounds under Mayor Thompson in 1920.

Alderman John P. Garner, voted 100 per cent against the people, for Faherty's experts. Voted to confirm Davis and Severinghaus as school trustees and after their indictment voted against forced their resignation; voted against investigating holdup of city employés in Riverview Park picnic scandal; and voted to ask legislators to increase Chicago's tax rate. URGES BUILDING SPURT UNTIL 1926 BY SCHOOL BOARD

Every child in Chicago can have a seat in school by the first of 1926 if members of the Lundin-Thompson board of education will put aside politics, boodling, and personal enmities and unite on a capacity construction program, according to Hart Hanson, chairman of the finance committee.

Hanson made that declaration yesterday in advocacy of the proposed 1923 budget, which provides that $11,100,000 be spent for new school buildings. Albert Severinghaus, indicted boss of the board, has pledged his following to kill the budget.

This budget, Hanson claims, for the first time makes the building fund "boodle proof," by eliminating the lump sum for "repairs" and limiting the maintenance allowance to specific cases and amounts.

No Rolls-Royce has ever worn out

THE prestige that is attached to the name Rolls-Royce has existed almost since the first Rolls-Royce was offered to the public. . . . Even to the man who scarcely knows one motor car from another the Rolls-Royce is the symbol of superlative excellence, the hallmark of position and success. . . . But there is a greater Rolls-Royce prestige than this. The man who owns a Rolls-Royce knows it for a motor car that is as nearly perfect as can be made. He finds the evidence of this perfection in better driving qualities, in absolute security, in uninterrupted service coupled with economy in operation and in up-keep. . . . He finds it in the fact that after ten or fifteen years of use, his Rolls-Royce still serves him with satisfaction. . . . This is the real Rolls-Royce prestige. This is why it is an unequaled investment in private transportation.

The national government and the state of Illinois have co-operated with us in this exhibit.

The variety ranges from fish one inch long to giant Muskellunge. From tropical fish of Africa and South America to rainbow trout of the north. From fish—such as "Hellbenders"—that look like a lump of mud to fish with the colors of a butterfly.

That may sound strange, or impossible. But remember, by building up the most tremendous volume ever imagined, and by asking you to "serve yourself", the North American Restaurant has cut its overhead to a minimum. This saving is passed on to you. The actual result is that here you get the finest food imaginable for just about half what other high-class dining places must charge to include "service" to your table.

Our Waffles and Bacon for 25 cents (including crisp Honey Waffles, with 3 strips of bacon, butter and pure maple sap or honey) are only one example of how well you can breakfast here for a small amount of money.

What is true of breakfast is true of every meal—lunch, dinner, or an after theatre supper. Quality of food and size of portions considered the North American is the lowest priced high-class dining place in Chicago.

LUEDER SPEEDS UP CAMPAIGN; RALLIES GALORE

Many Loop Meetings with Big S. Side Dinner.

BY PARKE BROWN.

The so called mayoralty campaign promises to liven up materially tomorrow.

Going into the final week with most of the detailed organization work out of the way, the Republican coalition managers have planned four big downtown theater meetings, several large meetings outside the loop, and a women's meeting to boost Arthur C. Lueder. Other Republican candidates are planning similar demonstrations on a smaller scale.

With no fight in their primary, the Democrats do not expect to put much more energy into their "campaign" than they have for the last two or three weeks, but a big dinner arranged by the Iroquois club in honor of the organization leaders tomorrow night is looked upon as the opening event of the actual election campaign of Judge William E. Dever.

Loop Rally Tomorrow.

The first Republican meeting downtown will be at Cohan's Grand at 12 o'clock tomorrow. Charles W. Folds, chairman of the Chicago Liberty Loan organization will preside and, in addition to Lueder, the speakers scheduled are former Gov. Deneen, Attorney General Brundage and State's Attorney Crowe, the coalition triumvirate.

There will be another noon massmeeting at the Cort on Tuesday and the same theater will be the scene of further speaking on Friday. Wednesday and Thursday, the latter Washington's birthday, are matinee days and downtown theaters are not to be had on those days. But on Washington's birthday there will be a meeting at Glickman's theater, Roosevelt road and Blue Island avenue.

On Wednesday at noon Lueder will speak at a Republican women's meeting at Hotel Sherman where an attendace of 1,000 is predicted. This affair is in charge of the woman's campaign committee of 100 headed by Mrs. Leonard A. Brundage.

South Side Dinner.

Tomorrow evening Lueder will be the chief guest at what promises to be the big evening event of the Republican campaign. This is a banquet at the Masonic temple, 81st street and Exchange avenue, arranged by Oscar Wolff of the Tenth ward. United States Senator McCormick and Henry Ford have said they will try to be present. Other guests will be Brundage, Deneen, Crowe, Gen. John V. Clinnin, Gen. Abel Davis, Hayden Ringer, commander of Bagley camp, Spanish War Veterans, and John C. Garriott, commander of the South Chicago post of the American Legion. William Purdy of the Lueder ex-service men's organization, will be toastmaster.

Roger V. Flory, president of the Lueder Veterans' association, announces the complete personnel of its officers and staff. Some of the new names added to previous lists are the following:

Nathan William MacChesney	Franklin A. Denison
A. V. E. Smith	John V. Clinnin
Guy C. Crapple	H. A. Gano
Francis L. Boutell	Paul S. Hoag

Tomorrow night Lueder will be the guest of the Buck Privates at the Midway gardens.

The speakers for the Iroquois club's dinner at the Sherman will include Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, Judge Joseph B. David, County Chairman Martin J. O'Brien, Charles J. Vopicka, County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer, William L. O'Connell, Frank M. Padden, and William Rothmann.

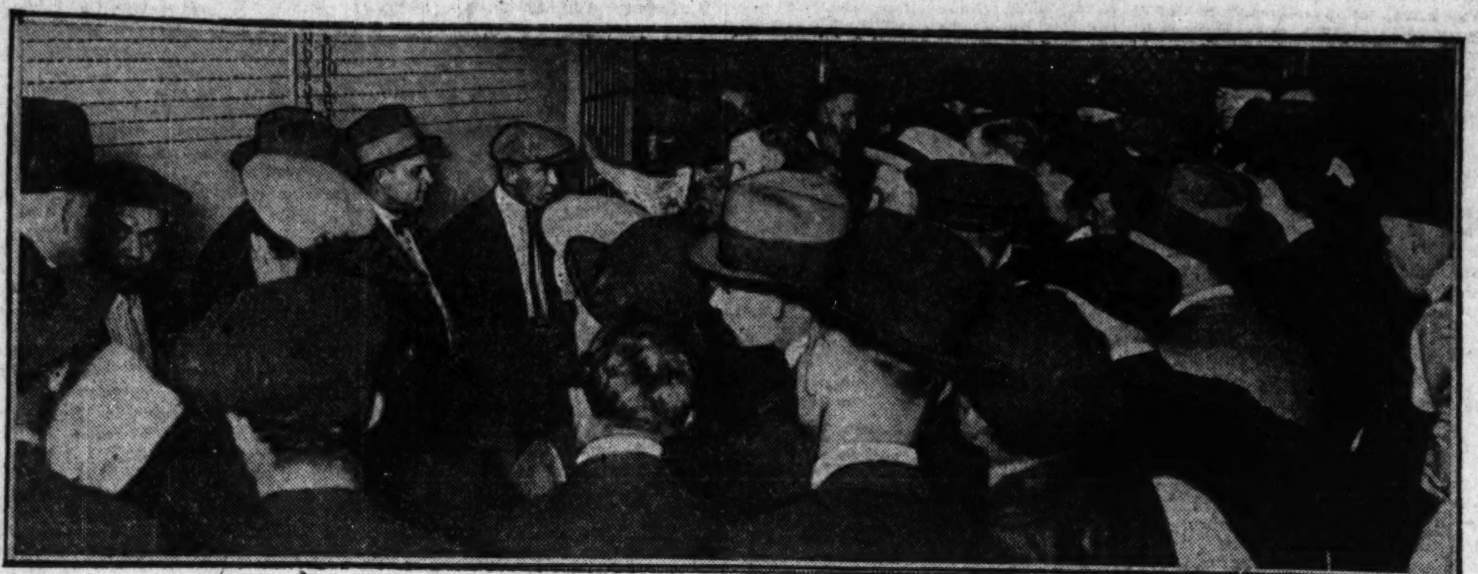
Issue Warrants for 36 Here in Alleged Swindle

Warrants for the arrest of thirty-six men in the Chicago federal district were obtained here yesterday in connection with the prosecution of those concerned in the sale of stock of the Glass Casket corporation in Pittsburgh. Sixty-two men have been indicted in the case on charges of conspiracy to use the mails in a scheme to defraud.

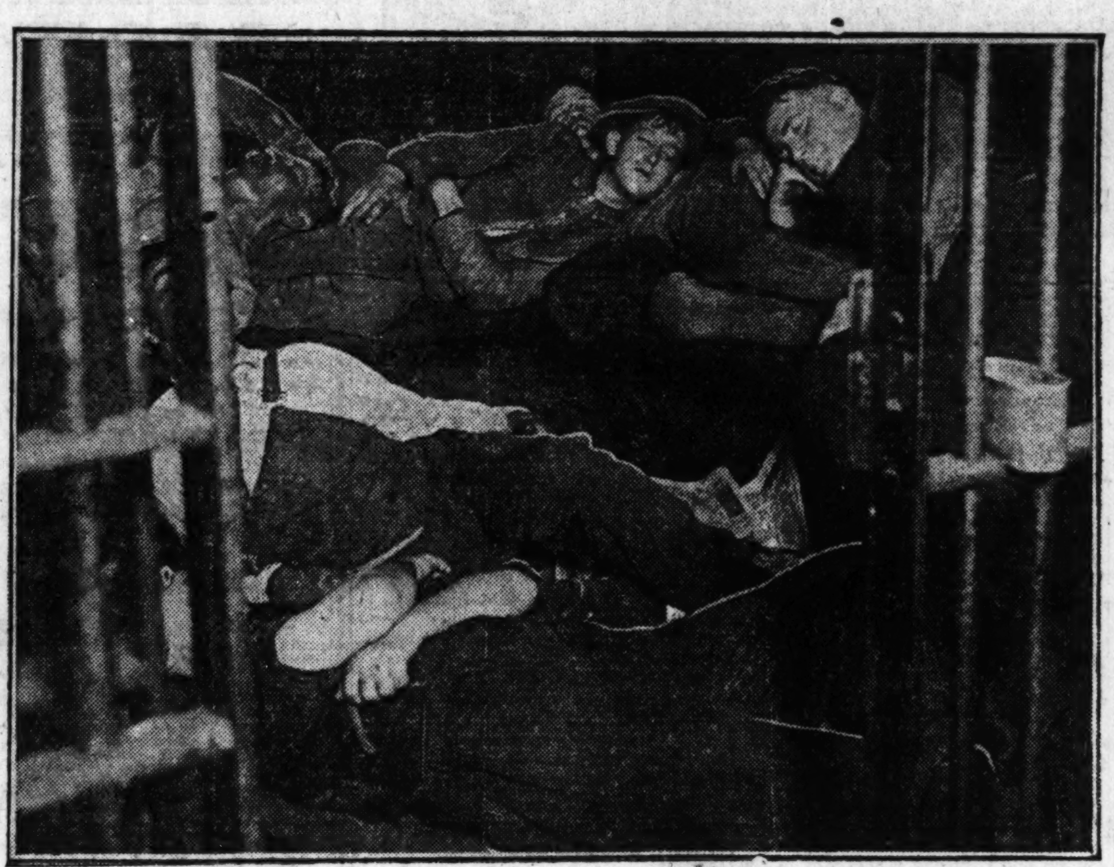
REPORTS CRIPPLE MISSING.

Abe Shapiro, 1445 West 14th street, has asked The Tribune to help find his crippled brother, Samuel Shapiro, who has been missing since Jan. 1. He is described as a hunchback, with brown eyes and hair.

STAND 36 HOURS JAMMED IN LOOP "BLACK HOLE"



Prisoners arrested Saturday nights and taken to the detective bureau and other station house jails remain there until Monday mornings, except professional criminals backed by lawyers using habeas corpus writs. In the detective bureau, which by actual measurement, foot by foot, is known to have been jammed worse than the Black Hole of Calcutta, these men are so crowded that they will have to stand in this position until their release comes tomorrow. Most of them are held on petty charges.



Usually "Black Hole" conditions are not quite equaled, and in that case the prisoners are lucky, for they can get in two nights' sleep if they are willing to become part of the human meshwork on the cell floor.

MUSSOLINI SCORNS BORAH SUGGESTION FOR WORLD PARLEY

ROME, Feb. 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Ratification of the Washington conference agreements by the Italian senate yesterday was marked by a speech by Premier Mussolini, in which he touched upon several topics of international interest.

BENITO MUSSOLINI

Sig. Mussolini characterized Senator Borah's proposal for an international conference as too excessive. He said that Mr. Borah's position did not give him sufficient prestige to compel the acceptance "of his collection of more or less fantastic appeals."

The premier added, however, that if "responsible government officials"—above all, from those governments immediately interested and participating in the European situation—appealed to Italy, he "would not hesitate a moment to respond."

MOVIE CHIEF SILENT ON TALK OF BIG MERGER

Are four famous motion picture stars, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, and Pola Negri, soon to become one mammoth screen constellation?

Chicago was still uninformed as to the truth of this rumor which has been exciting film circles for a month, when Jules Mastbaum, president of the Stanely Company of America, left last night on the Santa Fé for California.

During his twelve hour stay in the city, Mr. Mastbaum, one of the biggest motion picture men in the east, refused to affirm or deny any statements regarding the suggested combination.

"Before I left New York," he explained, "I gave my word that I would make no definite statement before my arrival on the coast."

If the merger is effected Mastbaum, it is predicted, will direct the affairs of the four stars.

Bike Race Physician Accused by Speed Cop

The taxicab in which Dr. Richard A. Roach, 2446 Wilson avenue, a physician at the six day bicycle race, was hurrying to the Coliseum yesterday was stopped for speeding after a long chase through Lincoln park. Patrolman Harry J. Morley accused Dr. Roach of trying to bribe him to drop the matter, and said that when he refused the physician became offensive and had to be taken into custody. Dr. Roach was released later in the day on a cash bond.

'BLACK HOLE' IS RIVALED HERE IN POLICE CELLS

one and a fifth square feet. Chalk this off on the floor and see if the sardine in a can beats it for packing.

Compare it with the Black Hole of Calcutta, the classic prison horror of history. In Calcutta, in 1756, a party of 146 English prisoners were confined in a guard room, eighteen feet by fourteen feet ten inches, with only two small windows. It was an excessively hot night. In the morning only twenty-three survivors were taken out. Pressure, heat, thirst, want of air, had done for the rest.

To figure a bit, the floor area of the Black Hole of Calcutta was about 267 square feet. Each prisoner had about 1.83 square feet of floor space. The area of the cell room at the detective bureau, as paced off roughly the other night in the lack of a tapeline, is about twenty-five by thirty-five feet including the visitors' room. It would give about 875 feet of floor space, and at that it is not all in the clear.

Two of the cellroom attendants the other night said that a year or so ago no fewer than 502 prisoners were herded into this room—it was at the time of the "Red" raids. It sounded foolish, but they insisted 502 men had been herded into that basement dungeon at one time.

This would give an average floor space of only 1.75 square feet per prisoner, as compared with 1.83 square feet in Calcutta's Black Hole. It was an extreme instance, of course, but, although the prisoners at the bureau that time had more ventilation and less heat than those of Calcutta, they were jammed in tighter than were the Black Hole victims. And to put forty men in an 8 by 6 cell, which seems to be not unusual, is packing them tighter than in the Black Hole.

FILMDOM UNFIT INFANTS' CRADLE, KYNE LABELS IT

Author Quits with Bitter Attack on Cinema.

BY EDWARD DOHERTY.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Peter B. Kyne, author of "Cappy Ricks" and other stories, bade good-by to the films today in a speech before the commercial board of Los Angeles. He wasted no words in telling what he thinks of the moving picture industry.

He declared the moving pictures were not an art—"but more like a cannery." He is glad to get out of it. He will write no more stories for the camera.

"The industry," he said, "is not the work of one intelligence, but a composite of a number of alleged intelligences. When some one said to me recently, 'The industry is still in its infancy,' I replied, 'No, the infants are still in the industry.'

Profits Sole Consideration.

"I see no future for the motion picture industry until it establishes a code of ethics. The industry has not developed an art. It has developed a business that is dictated by the profits to be realized from a lurid title fastened to an all too lurid tale.

"Those who control the pictures do not want good, clean, wholesome stories. The pictures being shown are built on the theory of shocking the nervous system rather than by appealing to the heart. We authors have something the pictures need, but they will not take our best work. They deliver shoddy goods.

Had to Peddle Stories.

"I have had to peddle my stories from studio to studio. I've had to sell a story first to the office boy, then to the stenographer, the editor, the director, the star, and then to get it sold I must finally have it shipped back for the decision of the New York business office before the deal is closed.

"I have never made an engagement with any one in the industry but what the engagement was broken. I have never contracted to sell a story but what they have tried the next day to buy it for less than agreed upon.

Authors Are Outlawed.

"I went to the opening of the Metropolitan theater recently; heard Bull Montana make a speech; saw a general 'love feast' all around. But I didn't hear any cry of 'Author, Author!'"

Mr. Kyne had much more to say. He asserted contracts were deliberately broken, manuscripts were spoiled, pictures were made on last year's successes. He said he was insulted when he asked permission to write the subtitles into his own plays. He was asked, "O, do you want the job of title writing, too?"

74 Up in Drive to Rid Madison Street of "Bos"

As the result of a drive to rid the West Madison street district of "bos," of whom business men have complained, seventy-four men appeared before Judge John K. Prindiville in Des Plaines street court yesterday. Sixty-four asked for jury trials, which were granted. The remaining ten were discharged.

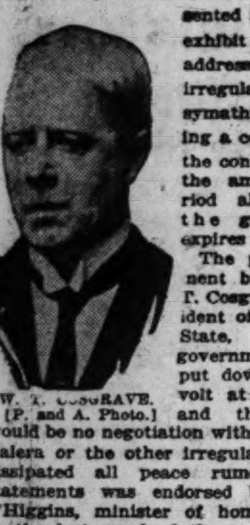
ERIN BIDS REBELS GIVE IN AS WAR TO FINISH LOOMS

Offer of Amnesty Will Expire Today.



W. T. COSGRAVE.

DUBLIN, Feb. 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Dublin's walls today presented a striking exhibit of placards addressed to the irregulars and symathizers, urging a cessation of the conflict before the amnesty period allowed by the government expires tomorrow.

The pronouncement by William T. Cosgrave, president of the Free State, that the government would put down the revolt at any cost and that there would be no negotiation with Eamon de Valera or the other irregular leaders, dissipated all peace rumors. His statements was endorsed by Kevin O'Higgins, minister of home affairs, as the last word of the united cabinet.

No details are yet available as to the result of the amnesty offer. There have been some surrenders of arms, accompanied by guarantees of withdrawal from the fight, but more often irregulars have buried or abandoned their arms and slipped home.

Willing to Free Prisoners.

The main effect is believed to be the disintergration of the republican rank and file, described by Mr. O'Higgins as a "crumbling away." He declares irregulars held prisoner are practically lined up in favor of the amnesty.

The government has advertised its willingness to release such prisoners as a sign of undertaking to abandon armed resistance, provided they can obtain trustworthy sponsors for their good behavior.

Although the republican armed resistance has been weakened by the amnesty offer it is still in existence. It is not known when the military will resume the executions suspended for the last ten days. If all the death sentences were carried out they would be very numerous, but such sentences require confirmation by the commander in chief, and Gen. Mulcahy inquires into the circumstances of each case before passing judgment. The general feeling here is that after Monday the fight will be sharp but short.

Cosgrave Warns Rebels.

Mr. Cosgrave's warning says, in part:

"Let no man be deceived. If any one continues in this unnatural war upon his own people after the expiration of the stated period of amnesty he must be prepared to pay the price in full, for there will be no going back upon this.

"Furthermore, it must be clearly understood that there will be no meeting for negotiations on the part of the government with De Valera, Liam Lynch or any of their collaborators in destruction, male or female."

Continue Train Wrecking.

The Dublin to Calway mail train was wrecked today after the passengers had been ordered out by armed men at Streamstown station. Two freight trains also were wrecked at the same place.

The insurgents in the Arigna mountains are splitting into roving bands to get through the cordon of Free Station troops. Several of their leaders are reported to have been captured near Brumshando.

Annie MacSwiney who was arrested last Monday, is on a hunger strike in Kilmainham jail, Dublin. Her condition tonight was reported to be "as well as can be expected."

500 Sergeants Seeking Promotion Finish Tests

Five hundred police sergeants took the mental examinations for lieutenancies yesterday at the Wendell Phillips High school. Two weeks ago they took the physical tests and it is expected that the lists will be posted within a short time.

$100,000 WEALTH OF MRS. DIAMOND MISSING IN SAFE

Slain Woman's Relatives Hunt Fortune.

Relatives of Mrs. Nettie Diamond, whose husband, Harry H. Diamond, was held for grand jury action at East Chicago, Ind., Friday, in connection with her death from pistol wounds last Wednesday, were reported to be instituting a search for bonds and cash supposed to amount to $100,000, the reputed fortune of Mrs. Diamond. A safe containing her valuables was said to have mysteriously disappeared recently from the office of the Standard Bottling Works at East Chicago.

Search Home of Youth's Father.

Another searching party, armed with a warrant and composed of Pearl Herkovich, 14 year old daughter of the murdered woman by a former husband, and two East Chicago policemen, descended upon the home of Diamond's father, Jacob Diamond, at Gary, yesterday, to search for clothing and other personal effects of Mrs. Diamond. The searchers reported finding nothing.

"It's funny where the things are," said the daughter. "The Diamonds are the only people who had a key to mother's home."

Bloody Coat Taken Away.

A nephew of Mrs. Diamond, who had come from New York City upon learning of Wednesday's tragedy, charged that his aunt's coat, blood stained and bearing bullet holes, had been taken from the hospital before she died. "I think somebody wanted to sell it," said the nephew.

Oblivious to the turmoil created by the shooting, Harry Diamond sat all day in his cell with his head in his hands. He has made no direct confession that he fired the shots which cost the life of his wife and wounded William Armstrong, colored chauffeur, but admits that "if I shot them, I don't remember it."

He had recently obtained European passports for himself and his wife, according to Charles Surprise, United States commissioner at Hammond.

Hints of a "harem studio," luxuriously furnished with rich oriental rugs, valuable statuary and paintings, equipped to entice another man's wife, are contained in the $50,000 alienation of affections damage suit filed yesterday against Florian De Donato, well known architect at 720 Cass street, by Samuel F. Farnsworth, general sales manager for Rueckheim Bros. and Eckstein company.

Simultaneously, Farnsworth appeared before Judge George F. Rush to enter his cross bill to a suit for divorce recently filed by Mrs. Constance M. Farnsworth, 1431 Summerdale avenue. In the cross bill Farnsworth denied his wife's charges of cruelty and countered by alleging that De Donato had entertained Mrs. Farnsworth lavishly on numerous occasions.

CHICAGO LAWYER DISBARRED HERE AND IN NEW YORK

Following action by the New York Supreme court, ordering that the name of Adolph M. Schwartz, lawyer of Chicago, be stricken from the roll of attorneys, his name was yesterday stricken from the roll of Illinois attorneys by order of the Illinois Supreme court. It is charged that Schwartz is a promoter of commercial schemes and that he uses unethical methods of advertising.

Charges against William W. O'Brien, Chicago lawyer, upon which an application to expel him from the bar was based, failed in the Illinois Supreme court yesterday and an order was issued dismissing the information against him. It had been charged that he attempted to bribe the state's attorney of Cook county on behalf of clients.

CHICAGO REGION PLANS FOR CITY OF 6,000,000 IN 1950

Co-operation of Nearby Cities Gained.

Chicago of 1950, with a population of 6,000,000, substantial and orderly in appearance, with adequate sanitary facilities insuring cleanliness and good health, equipped with everything to make work attractive and living pleasant—this is the vision behind the backers of a Metropolitan Planning conference which has been called for March 3 at the City club.

Mayors of fourteen cities in the Chicago district, president of eighty-three villages, chairmen of official boards and commissions and representatives of the leading civic and commercial organizations in the district have been invited. The question to be discussed will be a comprehensive plan for development of the district extending from Waukegan to Gary. The conference will determine whether or not a permanent commission for planning should be created. An effort is being made to get Herbert Hoover as a speaker.

The proposed survey includes industrial, commercial, civic, social, sanitary and governmental problems affecting the whole metropolitan district, with constructive steps recommended toward improving living conditions. A report setting forth the needs of such a survey has been sent to each of the 250 representatives invited to the conference.

According to this report Chicago increased 23.6 per cent during the last decade, while the metropolitan area within ten miles of the city increased 76.3 per cent. The metropolitan district now contains more than 3,000,000 people, and there is no apparent diminution in the rate of growth. Recent estimates of the Bell Telephone company show that the population of Chicago alone will be about 4,000,000 in 1940. By 1950, it is estimated there will be more than 6,000,000 here.

"Within the metropolitan district," the report states, "there are more than 300 local governmental units expending taxes for local purposes—14 cities, 83 villages, 191 school districts, 29 townships, and 31 park districts. There are no less than 98 boards or engineers independently planning and constructing sewers; no less than 119 street or engineering departments laying out and paving streets, highways, and boulevards; no less than 94 legislative bodies [councils or boards of trustees] enacting ordinances and regulating local transportation."

It is the aim to get all these agencies to coöperate in "planning our growth and growing to our plan."

MIDWEST GAINS AS ROADS SLASH FREIGHT RATES

Charges to Coast Cut to Offset Canal Haul.

BY O. A. MATHER.

Through a wholesale slashing of freight rates between Chicago and the Pacific coast the manufacturers of the middle west will be given a more equal opportunity to compete with eastern industrialists for the vast business of the Pacific states. The reduction in freight rates, which is the most drastic yet announced by the railroads, is intended to wipe out the advantage which eastern manufacturers have had through use of the Panama canal.

The western transcontinental roads late yesterday at a meeting in Chicago agreed on the new schedule of rates on certain manufactures, but it is understood to be their purpose to extend the scope of the reduction so that eventually it will include practically all articles in which the middle west competes with the east for west coast business.

Based From Chicago.

The present reduction in rates will apply from Chicago and middle west points taking the same rates to the Pacific coast. Thus the eastern manufacturers, who now derive their advantage from the low steamer rates by way of the Panama canal, will not be able to get rail transportation on equal terms. It is announced, however, that later on consideration will be given to a reduction of rates from eastern territories.

It is no secret that the manufacturers of the middle west have been virtually shut out of the Pacific coast markets because of the high transportation costs for direct shipment by rail. In fact, in many cases it has been found cheaper to make shipments by rail to the Atlantic seaboard and then tranship by water via the Panama canal. But even in this case the middle west shipper was handicapped compared with eastern competitors to the extent of freight charges to the Atlantic.

Canal Traffic Mounts.

At the same time the vastly increasing traffic through the Panama canal has cut seriously into the revenues that formerly were derived by the western transcontinental railroads as the result of the long haul traffic to the Pacific coast. The Panama canal traffic has grown to such enormous proportions that its capacity is already becoming taxed, which is one of the reasons why President Harding recently broached the proposal for the United States to build another canal by the Nicaragua route. This would mean still further handicaps for the western railroads.

The present reduction of freight rates was promulgated at a meeting of the transcontinental freight bureau. The executive officers of all the western roads attended, so that all the roads participated in the conference and the action taken was for account of all.

Proposed by Santa Fé.

The proposal for wholesale reductions was broached by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé railroad, which at the close of the meeting announced the changes. Following is a list of present and proposed rates on some of the principal commodities from Chicago:

GIRL WITH PAYROLL OUTWITS BANDITS

TRIAL OF LUNDIN POSTPONED UNTIL AFTER APRIL 10

Trial of Fred Lundin, Virtus Rohm, and their "gang" was postponed yesterday until after April 10, by agreement of Assistant Attorney General Marvin Barnhart and Attorneys Clarence Darrow and Charles E Erbstein, who will defend Lundin and Rohm.

Darrow and Erbstein appeared before Chief Justice Michael L. McKinley and said they planned to go to Florida soon and did not want trial till they returned. The attorney general wanted to get the case started by the middle of next month, but finally agreed to the delay.

"When we return," Darrow said, "we will take up the question of agreeing on a judge to try the case. We do not want a change of venue from Cook county unless the newspapers say so much that it will be impossible to get a fair jury here."

At present the blanket indictment, accusing twenty-four persons, is on Judge Oscar Hebel's call. Darrow said they would make before him the preliminary motions to quash and for a bill of particulars.

It was announced that the special grand jury would meet again Tuesday night with Roy Trautman, auditor for the Pottinger-Flynn Coal Co., as a witness. He was previously given a jail sentence for contempt of court in refusing to appear as a witness with the books of his concern.

Attorney William H. Sexton of the Bar association said yesterday he and his committee would coöperate with Attorney General Brundage in opposing the suit for an injunction which if granted, would prevent the attorney general from prosecuting the indictments returned by the special grand jury and from continuing the investigating.

G. A. R. CALLS ON LEGION TO AID MEMORIAL DAY

For the first time in its history the Cook County G. A. R. this year will seek outside help to conduct its observance of Memorial day.

Commander John Carmichael was unable last night at the meeting of the organization to find any one to head the committee on speakers to address school children.

"I guess we will have to look to younger men," he said. "We will ask help from the American Legion or some other patriotic association."

It was declared, however, that veterans of the civil war will march in the Memorial day parade.

French Editor Returns to Face Trial for Treason

PARIS, Feb. 17.—Ernest Judet, former editor of L'Ecklair who was sentenced by default to life imprisonment on the charge of high treason while he was a refugee in Switzerland, made good his announced intention to return to France today.

GIRL'S COURAGE SAVES $2,000 IN PAY ROLL HOLDUP

The courage and resource of a 23 year old girl partly frustrated an attempted pay roll robbery yesterday. Although attacked and beaten with a gun, she fooled the bandits into believing that an envelope containing $400 was all she carried and saved a second envelope containing $2,000.

The girl, Miss Eileen Howey, cashier for the Standard Check Menu company, 348 North Ashland avenue, was on her way back from the Reliance State bank, Ashland boulevard and West Madison street. She was alone in the automobile, which she drives herself.

Bandits Block Her Car.

As she prepared to turn into Carroll avenue to the rear door of the plant another automobile, in which were two youths of about 18, blocked her way. "Drive north in Ashland," they ordered her, but Miss Howey promptly shut off her engine. The bandits jumped out and entered her car, one of them grabbing the envelope in her lap.

Miss Howey struggled for the possession of the envelope until one of the men hit her over the head with a revolver. Then she screamed. The men, apparently frightened, snatched the envelope and made off in their car.

Although badly injured by the blow, Miss Howey rushed into the office and delivered the second envelope, which she had kept hidden in her pocket, before calling attention to her hurt. A physician was called who stated that the wound was serious.

Could Have Bagged Them With Gun

According to H. J. Hessell, manager of the company, Miss Howey, who lives at 6601 Yale avenue, has habitually driven to the bank alone for the weekly funds. "If she had had a revolver, I believe she would have captured the bandits," he said.

Four drivers of delivery wagons from loop department stores were held up and robbed yesterday, in every case two bandits being concerned.

Representing themselves as telegraph messengers, two young men rang the doorbell at the home of Mrs. Mary Ralph, 3534 Rokeby street, yesterday and forced their way in when the door was opened. Threatening Mrs Ralph with revolvers they took $8 from a writing desk and two diamond rings valued at $300, from her fingers.

Come and See the New Nash Six Touring Model

This is a specially arranged showing of the new model Nash Six touring car for five passengers.

In three important ways it embodies a commanding advance in motor car construction.

First and foremost Nash engineers have devised a far-sighted refinement in the motor and carburetor system that gives the car greater power, brisker flexibility, and heightened smoothness.

This change also effects a considerable increase in the mileage per gallon of fuel.

They also worked out a tubular type, cross-member frame construction that makes the frame as solid and rigid as a block of metal.

You will be instantly and vividly impressed with the sense of solidity the car gives at all speeds.

And the brakes have been enlarged to a point where the new Nash Six has the greatest braking surface per pound of weight of any American-built Six.

There are a score of other new and interesting attractions. Make your visit right away.

REFORM AND LIBERTY.

We don't doubt that to some of THE TRIBUNE'S readers it seems that our opinion inclines to wrong against right, to vice against virtue, to immorality against good conduct. Rebuke on that score is familiar to us, as the columns of the Voice of the People disclose.

Our views are sincerely held and they certainly do not intentionally incline toward vice, or crime, or evil conditions. We have opposed the Mann act and have been accused, in consequence, of favoring illicit sexual relations. We have opposed acts of censorship and have been accused of favoring immoral literature and entertainment. We have come, after doubt and honest observation, to believe that the prohibition amendment and statutes are not good, but bad for the nation, and we have been accused of favoring the great evils of the liquor traffic and of intemperance. We have deprecated what we believe experience and knowledge of life have proved are unreasonable expectations in the suppression of social vice and have been accused of sympathy with vice. In lighter vein we have said what we thought should be said in favor of boxing and horseracing and have been accused of favoring brutality and the misfortunes of gambling.

If our critics were right, a serious indictment would lie against us, but we are confident they are not right. They are not right because they do not trouble to think all around the subject under consideration, to respect human forces, to understand conditions or an argument based thereon. Moral zeal, abhorrence of evil, unfortunately do not necessarily insure straight or clear thinking or automatically lead to sound conclusions.

We are as much opposed to evil conduct, to vicious social conditions, to intemperance, vice, obscenity, immorality as the sternest of our critics, but we differ with reformers frequently as to fit methods of combating them.

We do not propose to go back over the reasoning we have advanced for the views expressed in these columns on the Mann act, censorship, prohibition, vice control, etc. We shall express these views again when occasion offers. But we can summarize our difference with our critics because it turns upon a single question of principle. We believe the disposition of reform agencies to impose their conceptions of virtue, morality, and wise living upon others by force of law is resulting in invasions of the just liberty of the individual. We believe this is not only mischievous, as proven by human experience, but that it is contrary to the basic principle of our country, which is the principle of individual liberty, of freedom of conscience, of toleration. We believe that reform in the matter of private conscience and conduct must come from within and can be brought about only by the preacher in the pulpit, the teacher, the parent, the influences of church, school, and home.

We sincerely favor all means of bettering human conduct through religious appeal, moral instruction, and education. We believe constructive results are obtained by encouraging wholesome pleasures and teaching the benefit of restraint. We believe that human appetites cannot be abolished by statute and that the resort to force, which it represents, is not only evaded but produces profound evils of its own creation.

It is necessary for society to punish evil acts directly affecting others and the general social well-being. Laws against murder and robbery, laws against flagrant immorality, the influence of which is pervasive, are salutary and should be enforced with certainty and efficiency. But the zeal for reform in this country is not restraining itself within the limits which experience has proved to be practical and wise. It is moving toward old errors and old oppressions because it does not respect the principle of free conscience.

THE PRESIDENT AND PORK.

Senator Caraway of Arkansas, one of the champions of the rivers and harbors pork barrel, is wroth at the suggestion that the President may refuse to spend all the money appropriated by congress in this measure. He says: "Congress saw fit to vote $56,000,000 for rivers and harbors after the President had made his views known. Every senator and representative knew that the President was opposed to the appropriation. Therefore there is no excuse for the President to refuse to obey the law on the ground that congress did not realize what it was doing."

An interesting viewpoint. Representative Stafford of the appropriations committee, an opponent of pork, pointed out that the house swallowed the increase after giving the objectors something like twenty minutes to be heard, and declared that it was jammed through in a manner he had never seen equaled in his eighteen years in congress.

Perhaps congress realized what it was doing. Congress has passed many a shameful pork barrel measure in the past in spite of just protest. But that doesn't mean the people approve organized public waste.

But the glittering gem of Senator Caraway's remarks is the following: "The time has not yet come when all the people are going tamely to submit to the dominancy of the chief executive, and I hope the President's advisers will take serious counsel before ignoring the expressed will of congress."

It seems to us that when the expressed will of congress is to throw away millions of the people's money at a moment when every rational economy is needed, the President can afford to ignore the expressed will of congress in response to the known will of the people. If Senator Caraway and his associate champions of the pork barrel want to raise that issue, we believe the President will welcome it. If dominancy of the chief executive is necessary to check the greed of small minded pork hunters and the system of log rolling localism they maintain, then the people demand the dominancy of the chief executive. The pork barrelers may represent the expressed will of congress. If so, it is a sorry comment on congress. The will of the nation is for economy, and when Senator Caraway threatens the President lest the President refuse to waste public funds he is in need of a guardian.

IS THERE AN END TO WAR?

We select a date arbitrarily. Say the beginning of the sixteenth century. Francis I. was king of France. Charles V. was emperor of the Holy Roman empire, comprising much of what is now Germany. They fought again and again.

Then Charles V. discovered the Reformation in Germany and in 1546 he was in the war of Smalkald or league of Protestant princes. In 1552 he was assailed by a general rising of Protestants and was driven over the Alps by Maurice of Saxony.

At that moment Henry II. of France invaded Germany and took Metz, Toul and Verdun. Here, as afterwards in this chronology, we find names which the twentieth century knew just as the sixteenth did. That is the reason for the editorial. Charles, recovering from the defeat Maurice of Saxony gave him, assailed Metz to return it to Germany, but failed.

In 1589, after a lot more wars which we skip, French internal troubles had reached a calm with the crowning of Henry of Navarre and Philip of Spain was at war with France and England. He fought until his death and his son continued the wars until 1609. Nine years of that peace and the Thirty year war was on and at its end Sweden and France, under Richelieu, were tearing Germany to pieces. Cities were in decay, the country was a desert, people were dying of famine and pestilence and at the time of the peace of Westphalia in 1648 the population of Germany had fallen from a half to a third of what it was in 1618.

Thereupon France turned on Spain and virtually extinguished her pretenses. Louis XIV., the sun king, came of age and marched into the low countries in 1667 to extend his boundaries. He fought two wars, winning the English to his side and forcing the Dutch to cut their dykes, but he did not gain Dutch territory. In a moment of comparative peace he fell on the city of Strasburg in Alsace and incorporated it in France. Then he claimed the Palatinate and his able generals carried war along the Rhine. When his great generals Conde and Turenne were dead he entered the war of the Spanish succession and met Marlborough and Eugene of Savoy. The incomprehensible Marlborough, former court profligate, dimmed the sun of the king, beating him terribly in four celebated battles, Blenheim, Ramillies, Oudenarde, Malplaquet.

More wars, which we skip, and then in 1740 Frederick II. of Prussia decided he wanted Silesia and marched into it and Bavaria, Saxony, France and Spain jumped Austria as soon as he had done so. In 1756 France and Great Britain were ready for their contest for control of the sea and for colonies and Austria, France, Russia, Saxony and Sweden decided to put an end to Prussia as might have been done if the Czarina Elizabeth had not died and Peter III. her successor, an admirer of Frederick, had not made peace.

The American republic comes into being and old France disappears in the French revolution. Republican France is in war with Austria. In 1794 Jourdan's army conquered Belgium. Pichegru seized Holland. Belgium was annexed. The French occupied the whole left bank of the Rhine. The Directory came into power and decided to strike Austria simultaneously in Germany and Italy. Two fine forces were sent at Germany and a shabbily equipped force of 30,000 was assigned to Gen. Bonaparte to whom the Directory was grateful for a few whiffs of grapeshot at an opportune moment.

Then the Consulate and the Napoleonic wars, the Empire, Moscow and the loss of the Grand army, the resurgence of Prussia, Leipsic and Elba, Waterloo and St. Helena.

The congress of Vienna with fear of Napoleon gone, was to make war a forgotten terror of man. Within six years the Greeks had made a rush at the Turks to clear them out of Greece and Europe under Metternick's influence was watching an extermination. That struggle terminated in a Turco-Russian war. The Russians were crushing the Poles in 1831. The king of Sardinia led northern Italians against Austria. Hungary revolted.

France made Louis Napoleon president. He made himself Emperor Napoleon III. He offered England an alliance and the two joined Turkey against Russia and fought the Crimean war. Cavour got Napoleon into an alliance and fought the Austrians at Magenta and Solferino. Prussia and Austria united to make war on Denmark. Prussia and Italy made war on Austria. The Spanish succession arose again and Prussia and France were at war.

Alsace, which Henry II. and Louis XIV. had added to France, was taken back by the Germans. Nineteen fourteen—France, Germany, Great Britain, Russia, Austria at war. Then Alsace back again in France. Now—the French in the Ruhr.

We chose the date of beginning this chronology arbitrarily. It could have been much earlier. It would have shown the same record. No matter where the record begins it is the same. Regardless of changes in customs and ideas, of political thought, economic arrangements, social customs, religious observance, etc., these movements, this contention, has been the history of man.

Neighbors fight. We know they have done so wherever we can find a document, a history or a record which they have left. The human race likes strife. It seeks advantage by strife.

Races of low intelligence and brutal instincts have done so, and that we can explain, but the highest breeds of people have done so, and that we cannot explain. A Pharaoh is being taken out of the ground at Thebes. Many things have changed since he was put away, but not this thing.

It controls man's destinies now just as it did when he used war to get what he wanted or thought he could take. A little girl takes a doll away from her younger sister. A boy likes to beat another at a foot race. Colleges think more of winning a football game than of producing a great scientist. Nations push shoulders against each other and reach out for what they think they can get.

Wells, looking at the history of man with a cold eye from protoplasm to his own birthday, found that this unpleasant reality was a reality. In his maturity he found that it was a reality in France and Flanders. But even he had to add an unrealistic final chapter to his work saying that it would not happen again if people were wise and accepted his suggestion for a league. In most wars there has been a league on one side or the other.

People have been wise many times in the long history of war. The Egyptians were wise, the Greeks, the Romans, were wise. The modern French, Germans, and English are wise. It does not matter. The same thing happens and it does not matter whether king or commoner rules.

We don't like it, but it is folly to deny a force. We suppose the next hundred years contain wars for us. As nations always have fought their neighbors we probably shall fight ours. It seems unbelievable that we shall fight Great Britain. We probably shall and both British and Americans will think that it was unescapable and then that it never shall happen again. War with Japan is not unbelievable. It probably will come. Then we'll think it never will happen again and it will happen again.

Professional soldiers always warn that war is not out of human prospect. They are militarily minded and we do not listen to them. Generals do not mind war. It's their profession. Naturally they think there will be wars. But most of us don't like war. Therefore we think it will not happen. Thinking in that fashion comforts us, but it does not change the nature of contentious man.

If it did we might agree that history truly is divided into two parts, one which covers everything which happened before you were born and one which includes everything which must happen after that revolutionary event. Unfortunately we do not make that much impression on human nature or human events.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

"Luxurious ship engaged in West Indies cruises, to Bermuda, coral bathing beaches warmed by a tropical sun—wonderful sea gardens—gleaming coral reefs—palms and a climate of perennial spring."

(Outside a midwinter snowstorm; fields, same fields, being whitened by it, same woodpile arising a white mound out of it, same firs, oaks, garden and walks being covered by it, same chickadees flirting through it. Inside log fire as usual, fireside chair as usual but the steamship ads and with them a trip on a different ticket.)

"Bahamas—less than three days from bleak winter to perfect June." Havana. Panama. The old town where the Peruvian plate ships came for transshipment to the galleons which Drake and Morgan harried. The ramparts of Cartagena. To the world's fair at Rio, S. S. Western World, Southern Cross.

Orient from Seattle on U. S. President ships. "Spring in the orient. In March Japan is a fragrant mist of plum blossoms. In April cherry blossoms." If A. D. Lasker of the shipping board cannot win over anti-subsidy congressmen with the economic arguments he should persuade them to read his steamship ads. New Zealand, South Seas via Tahiti and Rarotonga. Typee the paradise from which Melville fled because of the call of kind for kind. "China the marvelous, the friendly, the inscrutable."

"Hawaii, foreign as a leaf from the Arabian nights." Egypt and India, to Port Said, Karachi, Bombay, Colombo, Madras, Rangoon, Calcutta. Europe on U. S. government ships—Plymouth, Cherbourg, Bremen. Madeira, Cadiz, Seville, Granada, Gibraltar, Algiers, Athens. The Mediterranean—Naples, cries of fruit venders, lamentations of mendicants, Vesuvius lazily smoking, fishing boats in pairs on the bay, a veranda high on the hill; sleeping muleteers on the Appian way out of Terracina, swallows flying over the Roman forum in the twilight, the Tuscan hills in a rainstorm, Sienna at night when the fifteenth century lives, Florence—the seine fishermen still stand thigh deep in the Arno below the dam and lift and lift and catch nothing.

The ticket to everywhere is used in the fireside chair—six minutes of incredible travel as the steamship ads roll sonorous words before the eye and the imagination gives them their meaning. Then the snow shovel for walks which need reclaiming.

CHANGE INAUGURATION DATE.

The senate has adopted the resolution of Senator Norris of Nebraska submitting to the states a constitutional amendment to change the date of the inauguration of President and Vice President and of the convening of the newly elected congress. It is hoped and expected that the house will concur. Under the amendment, if adopted, a newly elected congress would be assembled the first Monday in January following election and the inauguration would be on the third Monday in January.

There is much reason against and no reason for the delays of the present system. The change would give the President over two months for preparation and organization. That is sufficient. Under the present system it is possible for a congressman to wait thirteen months before beginning his term and sometimes before he takes his seat he is in his campaign for reëlection.

The period of uncertainty in administration and of something like irresponsibility in legislation is bad and without necessity or justification. When the people have created a new government it ought to be put in control with some consideration for time. If the change is not made the country may some day find itself in a serious predicament because of the lapse of decision and policy. A conscientious outgoing President does not want to commit his successor if he can avoid it and by avoiding decisions he may easily create complications.

Editorial of the Day

WORTH OF A MAN.

[Bloomington Daily Pantagraph.]

A leading realtor made a speech before a club in Washington the other day, taking as his subject "Appraisals." His talk had nothing to do with real estate values, however. He spoke of man, rather. He said, what is a matter of common knowledge to biologists, that the body of a man is made up of some water, enough phosphorus to make a couple of boxes of matches, iron sufficient to make about two nails, lime enough to whitewash a chicken coop, and sulphur enough to kill the fleas on one dog, with a few other materials thrown in for good measure. All the component parts of his body if sold for their commercial value would bring about 90 cents and the buyer at that price would not get much of a bargain.

If this man were literally "worth his weight in gold," he would be worth in toto about $45,000, and this sum put at interest at the rate of 5 per cent would bring in about $49 per week; therefore, the man's earning power would be fixed at that rate.

But the same personality which makes one man "worth his weight in gold" will make another man's value many fold that sum. The personality of men is what distinguishes one from another, so that big business today is not so much a battle of dollars and cents on one side and more dollars and cents on the other as it is a battle of one personality against another. That is also why many men with an indescribable something about them march ahead of other men of greater brain but lacking in that very ineffable quality that has a real market value.

MUCOUS COLITIS.

A GREAT many people have mucous colitis, if I am to judge by the letters which come to this paper. Or it may be, while there are not many cases, each case goes a long way so far as consulting physicians and writing to medical columns is concerned. It is easy to understand the latter explanation. Mucous colitis is a chronic disease. It is annoying. It makes complainers of people and, finally, treatment of it is very unsatisfactory.

A news letter in the Journal of the American Medical Association, dated Madrid, Oct. 16, is devoted to a discussion of this and one other disease by Von Noorden of Vienna, who has recently lectured in Madrid. Von Noorden is one of the Viennese authorities of pre-war days, and we are glad to again hear from him.

He says that mucous colitis is very common in neuropathic patients. There is usually a history of neglected constipation of several years' duration. In many cases a period of alternating diarrhea and constipation follows the constipation period. The characteristic of the disease is the presence in the stools of masses of firm, rather dry mucus, this often taking the form of casts of the bowel. The urine contains an abundance of indican. There are all sorts of headaches, rheumatic pains, neuralgic pains, cramps, straining at stools and tenderness over nerves. The condition is not inflammatory. The mucus is poured out, not as the result of inflammation or infection but as a means of protecting the intestinal wall.

The condition is more nearly related to spastic colon than it is to any other condition. The treatment is reasonably satisfactory when the nature of the trouble is understood and the directions are properly carried out. To assist in emptying the bowel, use enemas and irrigations, rhubarb, magnesia and other simple laxatives. The diet should consist largely of vegetables and fruits such as plums. It must be restricted as to quantity, as well as quality. Agar and extract of cascara sagrada are given. In some cases treatment is begun by putting the patient to bed and applying wet packs. The medical treatment consists in giving atropin. Atropin is too powerful to be used, except by a physician, and under his close observation.

People have written to me that they have cured themselves by eating wheat bran and with no other treatment. Others have written that eating wheat bran has made them worse. This contradiction is explainable as follows: The first cases were not far advanced, and had colons that were not greatly irritated by bran. The second group of cases had more irritable colons and bran was too harsh for them.

So far as the Von Noorden treatment is concerned the laity can carry it out themselves except as to the atropin. That they must not undertake except when properly supervised.

TRY LIGHT CURE

M. S. S. writes: "What causes the disagreeable yellow discharge from nose weeks after having a head cold?

"Have used argyrol without success.

"This discharge also drops into the throat causing irritation.

"Gargling brings temporary relief but does not seem to cure.

"Must 'nature take its course' or what have you?"

REPLY.

You have a persisting pus infection in your nose. It is probably located in the nasal sinus.

Try treatment with some one of the forms of light.

MUST TAKE DOPE CURE.

C. R. writes: "A young man, 21 years old, has been in the habit of taking heroin three times a day for about two years.

"Is there anything he can take to cure him?

"What is the best thing for him to do?

"He was a very strong boy and never sick and is in good condition now, only he can't do without it."

REPLY.

Heroin is the very worst form of opium.

The boy must go into an institution at once and take the cure.

His danger is extreme.

PROBABLY NOT WORMS.

X. Y. Z. writes:

"Could pin worms cause a partial obstruction in the colon?"

REPLY.

Practically no.

My guess is that you have mucous colitis.

FEEDING YOUNG BABY.

Mrs. C. K. writes:

"1. How often should a three months old baby be fed? He is a breast fed baby.

"2. When could I start giving him fruit juice?

"3. What kind of fruit juice?

"4. Should it be cooked or raw?"

REPLY.

1. Every four hours until 10 at night and once in the night.
2. At four months.
3. Orange juice or strained tomato juice.
4. Orange juice raw. Tomato juice cooked or not, as it comes from the can.

FOOD FOR DIABETICS.

P. E. writes: What kind of bread and fruit is good for diabetic patients?

REPLY.

Gluten breads and other approved diabetic breads.

Watery fruits, such as oranges, peaches, pears, and apples, in moderation, are allowed.

EAT WHOLESOME FOOD.

Mrs. M. J. L. writes:

1. Will wearing a corset keep one from giving milk?
2. Give diet for nursing mother.

REPLY.

1. No.
2. Eat an ordinary amount of plain, wholesome, substantial food.

It is well to drink some milk.

Many women with young babies eat too much, thinking that heavy eating increases the supply of milk. It does not.

WINTERGREEN CURED CHAPS.

F. D. W. writes: For seventy years that I can remember, I have suffered from chapped hands and cracked finger ends. Have tried grease, with little effect. This winter, while using oil of wintergreen for mild form of arthritis, I discovered that the oil caused the cracks to heal pronto.

SOUTH PARK PROPERTY.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—[Friend of the People.]—I have tried to find out whether the city has bought the property in the 2700 and 2800 blocks of South Park avenue. I have been looking at some property there with a view to buying, but some people told me the city had bought it or was going to do so. J. E. P.

As to the property referred to, we find, after due inquiry, that it has not been purchased by the city. The tract index in the recorder's office shows that the South Park commissioners are maintaining a suit [B-74323, Circuit court] to condemn the east 132 feet of this property as part of the South Park avenue widening. The secretary of the South Park commissioners' office states that the suit is still pending and confirmation is expected at an early date.

JOSEPH F. PEACOCK, Real Estate Agent,

SEEK'S MOTHER'S PROPERTY.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My father died intestate several years ago. It was his wish, though, as my mother and he were separated, that I should have all he had, which was property and cash. I gave half of it to my mother, and then she married, and with this money bought real estate jointly with her second husband. She also bought stock in her own name from some corporation. In case of her death, how could I get the stock which I think would belong to me? Could I get any of their property if she made a will? J. S.

If she, by will, leaves the proceeds of the property which you gave her to her second husband you would have no ground for overturning such will upon the bare facts stated. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DEFINITELY INDEFINITE.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—[Friend of the People.]—When will the Humboldt Park branch of the Metropolitan elevated be extended from Lawndale station west to Ainslie avenue? I have heard rumors that this is contemplated. A. W.

At the present time we have no idea when the elevated road will be extended from Lawndale station, west. This will probably be done some day, but when, I cannot say.

M. J. FERON, Asst. General Manager,
Metropolitan West Side Elevated Ry. Co.

GIVING MOTHER A CHANCE.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A mother of two boys and two girls whose ages are between 17 and 24 wishes to dispose of some property for which the children worked and paid. The mother, of course, stayed at home and did her duties as mother and housekeeper. She is now talking of marrying again and going to the home of her new husband to live. Can she sell the property without the consent of the children? J. C. M.

Apparently she can, from facts stated.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MUST FIND NEW DUMP.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—[Friend of the People.]—Can anything be done to compel the North Shore elevated to stop dumping ashes and garbage down a chute from the elevated structure which happens to be opposite my home? We dare not air our rooms during the day, and the condition is especially disagreeable when there is a west wind. I live in the 6200 block of Calumet avenue. C. B.

The subject of this complaint has been taken up with the elevated railroad's agent and he has promised that the use of the chute in connection with the removal of ashes and other refuse will be discontinued.

FORD'S INTEREST IN MUSCLE SHOALS.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—I do not believe for a minute that Henry Ford's prime motive in seeking to acquire Muscle Shoals is the desire to supply cheap fertilizer to southern farmers. Reputable engineers have investigated the project and say that it cannot be done. Knowing Mr. Ford's past achievements, I would not be so rash as to say that, and I believe, moreover, that Mr. Ford is perfectly sincere in his intention to furnish the said fertilizer, even at a loss, if necessary.

Nevertheless, I believe there is a more fundamental reason than philanthropy for his offer. Mr. Ford has been largely instrumental in putting America on wheels. Does he not now dream of putting America in the air? The cheap, quantitative production of aircraft will be directly and absolutely dependent on a cheap, quantitative production of aluminum. The motor car industry also is becoming more and more dependent on aluminum. Practically all of the aluminum used in this country is produced, at a neat profit, by one company, which has the good fortune to own practically all of the at present workable deposits of aluminum ore in the United States. There is plenty more ore, however, which cannot, at present, be profitably worked. Some of this is located not too far from Muscle Shoals. If Mr. Ford can obtain control of that great development on his own terms it is highly probable that he will be able, by the use of that abundant source of cheap power, to produce aluminum from the low grade ores of that region, cheaply and abundantly.

If that is what he is thinking of, it is obvious why he prefers to talk about cheap fertilizer and the benefits accruing to the public. FACTS AND REASON.

PITILESS PUBLICITY.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—I believe the following subjects are worthy of more public attention:

It would, perhaps, do some good if the arrest of speeders were given more publicity. Some people not desiring publicity might possibly be more careful if they were advertised as dangerous citizens.

Whenever a person is arrested and found carrying a gun, the disposal of the case should be published. What judge tried the case, punishment inflicted; if none is inflicted what influence was used to defeat justice.

It should be a criminal offense for any public official or officeholder of any kind to use his influence to secure the freeing of any person arrested for any crime.

A. H. LEWIS.

A NURSE'S DEFENSE.

Chicago, Feb. 10.—In behalf of a worthy profession of which I have been a member for ten years, I would like to enlighten my readers on the false and misleading statements of Dr. Robinson. Among nurses as all other professions there are always those who are not a credit, but they are a small minority.

"Profiteers of illness" is absurd. If nurses receive $8 in New York it is the only state, as there are still many places only charging $5. The range of prices throughout the states is from $5 to $7, except in mental or contagious cases, which permit $10. When any intelligent person considers that in two days a nurse has given her patient as many hours' service, lacking two, as most women give their employers in one week, $7 a day or $8 does not seem exorbitant, and no one would think of us as being profiteers. A week to us means 147 hours and counting even a ten hour day in other vocations, it is sixty-five hours.

A nurse's board is paid by a patient when in a hospital or hotel, as a great many cases are cared for in the home, in which instance charging her for board would not be considered.

The acceptance or encouragement of receiving gifts for any reason is not countenanced by training schools. A graduate nurse cannot afford to leave a case as her future depends entirely upon pleasing the doctor and hospital, as well as her patient. She would be reported to the registry immediately and unless able to give a satisfactory excuse, her license can be revoked by the state, the same as a physician's.

LOUISE WALKER, R. N.

FIX THE BRIDGES.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—I wish to congratulate THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE on the position taken upon the subject of fixed bridges for Chicago, as expressed in editorials of Jan. 26 and Feb. 10, 1923.

Extracts from a letter which I addressed to the officers and executive committee of one of the leading civic organizations of Chicago upon this subject about a year and a half ago may be of interest, viz.:

"I would suggest that the question of the abolition of swinging or draw bridges and the substitution of stationary or fixed bridges over the Chicago river, from Rush street to 16th or 22d street, be made the subject for the activities of the club.

"A city of 2,700,000 people should no longer be required to suffer and endure the intolerable bridge nuisance.

"There is comparatively little commerce passing through the Chicago river between Rush street and 16th or 22d street at the present time, as the major part of lake commerce moves by large vessels, and taking these great ships of 7,500 tonnage or more through twenty-five or thirty bridges is too slow and expensive a process to make it practicable or profitable. Moreover, with the exception of a few grain elevators, the many industries that formerly had dockage along the line of the Chicago river have been transferred to South Chicago, so that comparatively few owners of property would be inconvenienced or damaged.

"The distribution of package freight can easily be accomplished by lighterage through the river so as to adequately serve the industries located along the banks of the Chicago river and thereby increase the demand and the value of the river front property.

"The swinging or draw bridges are not only an expensive inconvenience to the people of Chicago but also a great expense to the municipality. The construction, operation, and maintenance of swinging or draw bridges is a heavy annual burden upon the taxpayer.

"Provision can and should be made for compensating the property owners who have industries fronting on the Chicago river." BERNARD A. ECKHART.

PUT "BEST SELLERS OF THE AGES" IN BOOK FORM.

Chicago, Feb. 10.—The series of "Best Sellers of the Ages" has been very interesting to me, both as recalling many old favorites and, occasionally, indicating some unsuspected treasure trove. It seems to me that these papers have the true approach to all great literature, that of determining what the author meant to convey and of showing how artistically he has achieved this.

It was my lot long ago to try to introduce high school students to literature and to induce them to pursue the acquaintance. Perhaps nowadays teachers are more successful in these "inducting" processes, but it occurs to me that these essays would be an invaluable help to them, as well as a source of pleasure to mere readers, if they were issued in book form, so I am writing to make this suggestion. "SOLILOQUY FROM "MACBETH."

Tomorrow, and tomorrow, and tomorrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day
To the last syllable of recorded time,
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!

That struts and frets his hour upon the stage
And then is heard no more; it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

Either this wound or shotgun wounds would have cau death, in the opinion of the autop surgeon.

WHAT FAIR HAND PUT STILETTO IN FLYER'S HEART?

Autopsy Over Remington Bares Knife Thrust.

BY EDWARD DOHERTY.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 17.—[Special]—A woman caused the slaying of Earl E. Remington, well known "stunt" aviator and wealthy business man, according to detectives working on the case.

She hired the assassins and watched them at their task while she sat in a little Ford coupe close by the Remington home in South St. Andrews place.

Furthermore, police say the autopsy this morning showed that Remington was not only wounded by the discharge of a shotgun, but that his heart was pierced by a small stiletto, and they declared that a woman's hand probably drove the dagger into Remington's heart. Either this wound or the shotgun wounds would have caused death, in the opinion of the autopsy surgeon.

Start Hunt for Woman.

Capt. George K. Home, who is directing the inquiry, would not say how he had learned of the woman's alleged participation in the crime, but he has ordered his men to find her.

He believes there were three men concerned in the murder; the three who were seen in the neighborhood on the night of the murder. He believes they were paid by the woman.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Taylor, Remington's neighbors, saw a woman sitting in the Ford coupe, as they drove past the Remington residence about 11:30 o'clock.

It was shortly after this that Remington came home, got out of his automobile, started to walk into his home and was killed.

If Capt. Home knows the identity of this woman, or her motive for murder, he is keeping it secret. And at the same time, he says he is searching for another woman, known to have been a close friend of the man who was slain. Her name is guarded. Home says he hopes to obtain valuable information from her.

Rival's Name Withheld.

This woman is said to have played a part in the circumstances leading up to quarrels between Remington and his wife, and Mrs. Remington's intention of getting a divorce. Her attorneys say she had planned to charge her husband with infidelity.

Other angles are being followed. The police intend to question a rancher who had a bitter quarrel with Remington over water rights, and a bootlegger who is said to have supplied him with large quantities of liquor.

Remington is said to have given the bootleggers a check recently—a check that was returned by the bank.

Mrs. Remington, somewhat recovered from the shock of the tragedy, declared today that her husband lived in fear for a week prior to his death.

"He jumped at the slightest sounds," she said, "and asked me to be on the alert for strangers. He was very queer and excitable, but would not give me any reasons for his strange conduct."

Girl Withdraws Charge Against Spanish Envoy

New York, Feb. 17.—Whether "love found a way to heal the breach," as Magistrate Berwager had predicted, or some other power interposed, was not revealed today when Miss Lucille Whitehurst of Georgia recanted her charges against Mariano Vidal, Spanish vice consul, whom she had accused of knocking her down and forcibly taking from her finger a diamond engagement ring she said he had given her. Miss Whitehurst, who claims to be a niece of a Georgia senator, said she no longer would press the charges against Vidal.

Hursen's 3 Funeral-Palaces

Would Fit Into The Art Institute

If you should put Hursen's 3 funeral-palaces into one building, their combined floor area would fit into that of the Art Institute on Michigan Avenue. "Hursen's" is the largest institution of its kind in America. It is one of the wonders of Chicago.

Each of Hursen's 3 establishments in Chicago is built like a mansion. Each is a "funeral-home," with great chapels, lodge and society meeting-rooms, private family sanctums—all furnished with consummate art and elegance.

A mere pretty chapel and an office do not assure you generosity of service, expertness of detail, personality of attention, elegance of equipment, and moderation in price. These things require a small army of specially trained experts, acting under one unwavering, exacting personality. They require massive space, and a big organization. They spell the difference between an "institution" and a "shop."

No matter how large or small the funeral, these facilities are at the disposal of all, at Hursen's, without any charge whatever. Hursen's automobiles are the "most beautiful things on wheels," each especially designed by Hursen himself. There is no extra charge for these over the usual auto hire.

Hursen has been the only fighter against the Funeral Trust. He revealed its many abuses, showed the remedy and actually applied it. Some have tried to imitate him. None has successfully followed him. He stands alone.

With "Hursen" service there is always one invariable rule—that Hursen charges are far less than those exacted anywhere else without a single exception.

NAVY MEN AND SENATE STIRRED BY PACT SURVEY

U. S. Outwitted in Naval Treaty, Expert Writes.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Something of a furor has been stirred up in naval, political and diplomatic circles here by the publication in the Atlantic Monthly of an article written by Hector Bywater, celebrated British naval authority, calling the Washington armament conference a "patent failure" in its main purpose and describing in rather frank manner how the Japanese outwitted the American delegates.

It became known today that the naval intelligence bureau deemed the article so important that it secured 500 copies of it and circularized the higher officers of the navy.

In Congressional Record.

Senator Robinson [Dem., Ark.] laid the article before the senate and had it published in the Congressional Record. Prediction was made that it would be made the subject of some speechmaking in this congress.

"The initial fact that emerges from a survey of the situation today," Mr. Bywater wrote, "is the patent failure of the conference to achieve its main purpose, namely, to check the further expansion of sea armaments in any and every shape or form. The result is that today, barely twelve months after the acceptance of the limitation treaty, a revival of ship building competition seems inevitable if the balance of power as regulated by that treaty is to be maintained. To state the case in a sentence: Japan, by diverting to the construction of cruisers and submarines no small part of the energy she formerly expended on capital ships, will soon be in possession of a fleet of auxiliary combatant vessels superior in some respects to that of any other power."

Mr. Bywater then proceeded to disclose some facts about Japanese naval bases, concerning which he says the American public has been in ignorance. These facts have to do with the fortification of the Bonin islands by Japan to offset the American plan for the development of first class naval bases at Cavite and Guam.

Worked in Secrecy.

As soon as Japan learned that the Washington government was contemplating a naval armament conference it set to work feverishly to complete the fortification of the Bonin islands under the strictest secrecy. By December, 1921, the work was finished.

"Meanwhile," Mr. Bywater continued, "the Washington conference had assembled and Admiral Baron Kato of the Japanese delegation has taken the first opportunity to inform his American colleagues that Japan regarded the abandonment of the Philippine and Guam fortifications as the condition precedent to negotiations for the reduction of her shipbuilding problem. If the United States would agree to this, Japan, on her part, was prepared to suspend her own plans of fortifying her Pacific islands.

"Baron Kato did not add, however, that Japan had just completed its fortifications, whereas scarcely any progress had been made in the development of the American stations at Cavite and Guam.

Did Experts Know?

"Whether the American naval experts were cognizant of the facts is a moot point, but it seems scarcely credible that they would have acquiesced in the status quo proposal for Pacific bases had they known that Japan was already in possession of a thoroughly equipped naval station at the Bonins.

"If they did know this, one is forced to conclude that their protests against the renunciation of the right to put the western islands in an adequate state of defense were overruled by the Washington cabinet on political grounds.

"In any case, Japan scored a signal triump in securing the adoption of the status quo agreement. From her point of view it was a strategical gain of the first magnitude which more than compensated for the reduction of her battle fleet."

OCEAN BABY MAY KEEP IMMIGRANT FAMILY FROM U. S.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—The birth of a baby which the stork left on the liner Rochambeau, is the cause of the detention at Ellis island of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Epstein and three children of Warsaw, Poland, bound for Omaha.

Issuance of passports to Mr. and Mrs. Epstein and two children completed the authorized immigration quota from Poland for February and when the Epsteins reached New York they found that the baby was excluded under the new immigration law. Immigration officials pointed to two valid reasons why the baby is excluded—in exceeding by one person the February Polish quota, and it had no passport. The Epstein passports were for four persons and there were five. So the officials ruled that either the Epstein family must leave the baby behind or else go back to Poland.

GOLD IN TUT'S TOMB OUTDOES ALADDIN'S CAVE

Gems Cover Mummy of King, Dead 3,000 Years

with a roseate hue in the strong gleam of several 200 candle power electric lights. In one corner stand two sentry boxes, containing life size statues of the king which for 3,400 years had been the keepers of the portal of the death chamber, and in this narrow space twenty people sit.

Their faces are already white in a fetid atmosphere, and the artificial light accentuates the unnatural paleness. Sometimes they make jerky remarks, but no one listens, no one answers, and all sit forward, rigid and intense.

Pharaoh's Last Wall.

At the southern end of the antechamber a great oblong slab of grayish white masonry breaks the pink wall that is the objective of the immediate attack. Mr. Carter picks up a chisel and hammer. He turns and attempts to relieve the strain by remarking: "Concert will commence."

He hesitates and orders a light brought nearer, so that the gleam concentrates on the masonry confronting him. The light advances until it plays on the seals on the door like a spotlight on a stage, while the rest of the chamber grows dimmer and more eerie. Suddenly a pick, pick, pick, and clink, clink, clink floats upwards in a not unmusical cadence.

Fancy paints a picture of the dead Pharaoh inside waking from his long sleep and, listening with a startled look as he hears the sound of intruders breaking into his royal privacy. No sound other than the frontal attack on the door breaks the stillness, which is so thick it can almost be felt. Perspiration rolls down faces; dust raises its particles.

Astonished by the Sight.

Mr. Carter seems to have forgotten the tragic notes as he becomes a clever artisan penetrating the concrete. There comes a sharp crack, exaggerated in the cavern to the crack of a pistol, and a piece of masonry comes away. The first breach has been made in Pharaoh's last wall of defense.

Another stone, and then another come out, and Mr. Carter stops. Silently his assistants hand him three torches. He takes one and presses a lever, and looks but an instant, and exclaims in tones which tell more than could whole libraries, "Ah!"

It tells the whole story.

"What!" exclaimed Lord Carnarvon. "What?" asks his daughter, Lady Evelyn, and the silent watchers behind hold their breath lest they miss the response.

Enters the Death Chamber.

But Mr. Carter does not answer. He hands the torch to Lord Carnarvon, who looks, while his daughter seeks to peep past him. Lord Carnarvon draws in his breath slowly and turns with a dawning smile, which spreads and tells what all wanted to know for that eternal hour—the sarcophagus is inside. Lord Carnarvon braces himself and nerves himself and then he wedges in through the jagged opening and steps back to the Pharaonic age—into a small room about five yards square and almost completely blocked up by a huge canopy.

This is the outer covering of the sarcophagus. There is only one great canopy—indeed, there is barely room for it. Gone are the hopes that perhaps three mummies lay in three sarcophagi. Torches flash to the walls, and as the light illuminates square yard by square yard there are exclamations of wonder, delight, and amazement.

An Art Gallery Unsurpassed.

Here is an art gallery perhaps unsurpassed in the world. What an exquisite fusion of color! It is a wonderful hotchpotch of the superstition and ingenious fancy of the incoherent and incomprehensive eighteenth dynasty art in all its richly glowing perfection.

Here is the sarcophagus in all its entirety—its inclosures, its lavishness, its splendor, its pomp, in the sepulcher which to the Amen ritualists was not a tomb but the abode of the dead.

The mummy is sunk deep in its coffin, its sarcophagus and its canopy embalmed and swathed in its bandages to be preserved uninjured until the spirit returned and the human personality was again made perfect—perfect for eternity.

DIED YOUNG, BELIEF

LUXOR, Egypt, Feb. 17.—[United Press.]—Tut-Ankh-Amen, lord of all Egypt 3,000 years ago, died at an early age, experts, who viewed the Pharaoh's sarcophagus, believed tonight.

Mural decorations in the inner tomb to which Lord Carnarvon and Howard Carter penetrated yesterday were found upon examination today to be unfinished. This leads to belief that the catacomb of the king picked out for himself was in course of preparation—which required many years—when Tut-Ankh-Amen died prematurely.

Tomorrow, with ceremony, the official opening of the tomb takes place. Officials of the Egyptian government will take part in the formal entry to the shrine of their king of thirty centuries ago. The queen of the Belgians, here incognito, Lord Allenby and persons prominent in European and American society will go out to the valley of kings for the occasion.

They will enter the inner room, where within the innermost of a series of concentric boxes, the Pharaoh was locked away by his followers after elaborate funeral ceremonies, more than 3,000 years ago. The body of Tut-Ankh-Amen lies undistrubed by the excavators. It may be some time before the mummy can be brought out for the priceless shrines, invaluable to science, that cover the inner case, must be treated with extreme care.

The heat which will make work impossible until autumn comes on in a few weeks.

DO YOU KNOW THIS UNDERTAKER?

If you know an undertaker whose business instead of growing is steadily shrinking, look for the reason. In many cases the undertaker who is handling fewer instead of more funerals each year has only himself to blame.

Perhaps he yields to temptation for the first time after observing some other undertaker in a wholesale dealer's display room sell a casket for 50 per cent more than he had thought an honest price, and decides to try a little profiteering himself. He finds it easy and soon acquires the habit, foolishly thinking that he will never be caught or exposed.

What he does not know is that many of his victims eventually discover that they were robbed, and, while they do not come back to complain or to demand the return of their money, they do not either forgive or forget but miss no chance to warn their friends against him.

Meanwhile his business grows smaller and smaller, and the smaller it becomes the larger the margin of excess profit he must add to each sale in order to make a living. Then some day he learns that people are saying he is so crooked he could hide behind a corkscrew. And he moves to a new neighborhood in a search for more victims.

Yet as in every other business or profession it is possible for an undertaker to build up a big, successful and profitable business by honest dealing as is proved by the record of the Skeeles-Biddle Company, to give to clients the very highest standard of service known to the profession in return for prices considerably lower than any small undertaker can quote, even though he is absolutely honest.

In this business, as in every other, volume is the key to low prices and small profits. The large number of funerals entrusted to our care each month enables us to maintain two beautiful funeral chapels, for the use of which clients pay us nothing, and yet to undersell others by from 25 to 60% and even more in the prices we ask for caskets and funeral supplies.

Residents of the North and West Sides are served just as promptly and efficiently by the Skeeles-Biddle Company as those living on the South Side, and with no extra expense for automobile hire. We make no charge for removals to either one of our two beautiful chapels, the use of which is free to our clients. There is, therefore, no reason for paying a nearby undertaker an excessive price for a casket, whether the finest grade of bronze, copper or Armco metal or one of lesser quality is desired. We furnish a simple, artistic casket for as little as $25.00.

Our facilities for shipping funerals out of the city are unusually complete and will be gladly explained to any one interested.

Do what you can to discourage and exterminate the profiteer who infests every part of the city by urging your friends to investigate for themselves. We will gladly send one of our cars to any address to bring any one interested to our display room for the purpose of comparing our low prices and equipment.

SEIZE KIACHOW AGAIN, JAPANESE DEMAND OF TOKIO

Protest at Outrages of Chinese Police.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, Feb. 14.—[via Manila]—[Delayed]—China's chaos has reached a state where civil war is likely to develop. The new year holidays begin Friday with nothing done toward meeting obligations, only driblets having been paid, such as salaries, etc., while the debt interest is again in default.

Topping this a situation has developed whereby Japan may again occupy Kiachow owing to a recent outrage there by bandits who were incorporated into the Tsingtao police force. Although the Chinese assert that this charge is made to afford a pretext for the Japanese to take action, an inquiry establishes the fact that a bandit policeman robbed a Japanese resident attending an auction sale, and following his protest other policemen beat several Japanese and also wrecked the salesroom.

2,000 Japs Ask Help.

About 2,000 Japanese held a mass meeting in Tsingtao and cabled Tokio for a return of troops and also for a warship. They also demanded the withdrawal of all Chinese police from Kiaochow.

Yukicki Oboto, the Japanese minister at Peking, also protests formally that China is in default on the 40,000,000 yen [$20,000,000] payable for the Shantung railroad, demanding an immediate issue of treasury notes to cover this.

An actual break is likely to occur over Kiangsi province, where Huih Yuan Han, who was appointed civil governor by a presidential mandate, is unable to assume office owing to opposition from Gen. Tsai Chen Shun, who is a protegé of Tsao Kun, the Chihli war lord. Huih Yuan Han has taken refuge in a Japanese hotel at Kiukiang under a heavy bodyguard. Gen. Tsai offers $100,000 for his head.

Factional warfare has been renewed in Szechwan province. Other preludes to a grand blowup include the action of parliament in condemning the military for its suppression of strikes on China's only two north and south railways and a presidential mandate excoriating students for supporting the railway strikers and forbidding student assemblages.

Fear Breakup of China.

Foreign diplomats believe that only a miracle can avert the disintegration of the nation early in the spring, with Japan and soviet Russia taking advantage of China's helplessness, which the Chinese assert is being plotted in Tokio between M. Joffe, the soviet representative in Peking, and Mr. Kajamami, Japanese minister to Poland, who conducted preliminary negotiations in Moscow while en route to Tokio.

This conference included discussion of Sakhalin Island, Amur navigation and fishing rights and the Japanese possession of the Changchun branch of the Chinese Eastern railway after the soviet acquires it through purchase from the Russo-Asiatic bank, for which the Chinese assert Japan will provide funds. All parties deny this but there are good grounds for believing it is true, especially as it is said Japan will resort to all peaceful means to prevent American interest from getting ports on Sakhalin Island under the Sinclair Oil concessions.

MASSANAO HANIHARA.

Massanao Hanihara, Japan's new ambassador to the United States, who stopped in Chicago for a few hours yesterday, is combining romance and diplomacy. His trip from Tokio to Washington is a honeymoon as well as an official journey.

Accompanied by his bride, he arrived in the city yesterday morning, to leave shortly after noon for the capital and his new duties.

"O, how I like America," declared his tiny wife, Mitzu Kao Hanihara, after her husband had declined to comment on diplomatic issues. "I have lived in San Francisco, and now I feel almost as much United States as Japanese."

The new minister is already well versed in the duties of his post; for he spent ten years in the vice ministry at Washington and was one of Japan's representatives at the disarmament conference last year.

CHARGES EFFORTS AT 'SHAKEDOWNS' BY U. S. OFFICIALS

New charges of attempted prohibition "shakedowns" of the Green Mill garden management were made yesterday in Federal Judge Wilkerson's court, shortly after the opening of the trial of Henry Horn, former manager of the garden. Horn is accused of selling whisky to "Count" William D. Yaselli, once considered "ace" of prohibition agents, and Laura P. McClaskey, "lady agent," and companion of Yaselli.

Attorney David Stansbury, representing Horn, told Judge Wilkerson that failure of former Collector of Internal Revenue Harry Mager and State Representative Benjamin A. Mitchell to "put the shake" on Tom Chamales, owner of the Green Mill during the last few days of 1921, caused them to "sic" Yaselli onto Chamales in an effort to drive him out of business.

Says $1,000 Was Refused.

Stansbury said Mager became angry when Chamales refused to pay $1,000 to Mitchell for the privilege of running "wide open" on New Year's eve and morning, 1921-1922. The jury was excused while Stansbury made the charges.

Yaselli and Miss McClaskey later testified that the "Count" made purchases of a pint of whisky from Horn during two visits at the garden—one on May 31 and the other on June 17. Both stated the place was visited as a routine part of a sponge campaign in Chicago, directed from Washington. Yaselli said he had met Mager in New York in 1920 and that he had not seen him again until he was pointed out by Deputy United States Marshall John J. Oros at Colosimo's restaurant on July 3, 1922.

Horn, who now is owner of the Rendezvous at Diversey parkway and Clark street, was the first witness called by the defense. He testified that Yaselli, O'Keefe, a man named Feldman, and two women, came to the garden again on July 6 and that O'Keefe in the presence of Yaselli, offered to "fix the case for four or five 'grand.'"

Plans Attack on "Count."

Horn will resume the stand again tomorrow morning and it is expected a fight will result from Attorney Stansbury's plan to introduce evidence bearing on the credibility of Yaselli as a witness, based on the experience of Miss Betty Johnson, a woman detective, who caused the "count's" arrest at the Beach View inn, Wilson and Clarendon avenue, where she had gone as his companion. Yaselli was charged with violating the state prohibition law and a flask partly filled with whisky was taken from under the table where he and Miss Johnson were sitting. Yaselli said the booze was a "plant."

Miners Lose in Effort to Stop Action of Sheriff

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 17.—The petition of the United Mine Workers for an injunction to prevent Sheriff Don Chafin of Logan county and others from interfering with the organization's activities in that country was ordered dismissed today by Judge George W. McClintic in United States District court.

PASSENGERS GO OVER LAKE FLOES TO REACH SHORE

Muskegon, Mich., Feb. 17.—[Special]. The Goodrich steamer, Alabama, and the Crosby steamer, Georgia, docked here late today after a thrilling battle with the ice fields and gale on Lake Michigan. The two boats carried 32 passengers, all but six of whom made land safely here yesterday afternoon after an exciting trip across the ice fields in a blizzard to the piers, under the watchful eye of coast guards.

The Alabama smashed through sixteen inches of ice in Muskegon lake today in its final lap, after the shifting wind had released it and the Georgia from the ice field which had held them at the mouth of the local harbor here since Thursday afternoon. Provisions were taken to the Alabama yesterday by coast guards as it was imprisoned in the ice.

The big Grand Trunk car ferries, Milwaukee and Grand Haven, also forced their way into the Grand Haven harbor today, after being imprisoned in the ice fields since yesterday.

DRY "PIED PIPER" LEADS 80 HOOTCH SELLERS TO JAIL

Washington Is Combed by Musical Sleuth.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Through the strains of "When Johnny Comes Marching Home Again" from the strings of a violin in the hands of J. L. Asher, Washington's versatile revenue agent, who for a week has been assaying the rôle of a modern Pied Piper of Hamlin, more than eighty alleged bootleggers have been uncovered recently and were arrested today after raids staged simultaneously in every section of the capital. More than fifty-six individual raids were conducted, netting in addition to the prisoners, 3,000 gallons of liquor of all sorts.

Switches His Disguise.

Switching his disguise from ash cart driver and coal deliverer by means of which he recently collected evidence for more than sixty raids netting as many arrests, Asher last week donned the shabby but gay clothes of a wandering minstrel, selected a harp playing companion from the detective squad, George Bauer, and from their limited assortment of old time melodies played their way into the hearts of Washingtonians and on to the trails of bootleg whisky.

Their fingers worn by their unpracticed efforts on the violin and harp, Asher and Bauer, in their quest for evidence, later switched to a grind organ and monkey arrangement. Again they went into other sections as hucksters, the wagons making it more convenient to carry their ever increasing stack of evidence while the cabbage and potatoes covered the liquid booty.

Covers Former Route.

In his new garb Asher went several times over the same route traveled recently in collecting evidence for the raids of a week ago. His disguise, however, was complete and in several instances he obtained evidence from alleged bootleggers arrested at that time.

Lieut. O. T. Davis and Washington Prohibition Chief Ruby directed the raids. More than fifty police and 20 revenue agents took part in the clean-up, leaving headquarters in twelve autos.

I. C. C. OVERRULES FUEL BOARD AS VILLAGES SUFFER

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—Over the protest of Federal Fuel Distributor Wadleigh, the interstate commerce commission today refused to issue general priority orders to expedite the movement of anthracite to northeastern New York and New England.

Seize Coal on Sidings.

Balston Spa., N. Y., Feb. 17.—Acting under authority of Clarence Kilmer, fuel administrator of the fourth judicial district, Deputy Fuel Administrator Thomas Kerley seized three carloads of anthracite from a train on a siding here today. It will be distributed throughout the village. Mr. Kilmer announced that similar authority would be given other local administrators unless the situation was relieved before Monday.

Milwaukee Has Shortage.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 17.—The shortage of coal here is said to be causing many families to abandon their homes and move to homes of relatives who have a supply of fuel. Coal dealers are said to be receiving orders for coal which outnumber deliveries a dozen or more to one.

ROB GIRL OF $6,000 PAY ROLL.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 17.—Miss Anna Schlelecker, bookkeeper at the Wellington hotel, was held up by two unidentified men at the point of a revolver today and robbed of the hotel pay roll of $6,000.

VISION!

MISS ENID MILLER.

VISION IMPAIRED, N. U. CO-ED MAKES UNUSUAL RECORD

Greatly impaired eyesight has not been a handicap to the education of Miss Enid Miller of Oklahoma City, a senior in the School of Speech at Northwestern university, but rather an incentive to remarkable accomplishments, according to a statement of the faculty yesterday.

C. C. Cunningham, who coached her for the debate team on which she won honors, told the story.

"Her mother's eyes have been hers since she came to Northwestern four years ago," he said. "In order to conserve her sight for mature years her mother has read all subjects to her since she began in grammar school.

"Miss Miller has so mastered the art of concentration that she gets a firm grasp of any subject in one reading. To save her eyes she has mastered the touch system of typewriting, and makes all her reports and keeps her notebooks up to date in this manner.

"She has won a place on the varsity debate team. She was complimented upon her excellent work in the recent debate which Northwestern won against the University of Chicago.

"Her vision deprived her of the privilege of using memoranda cards, as the others did, hence she had to memorize a great number of references to authorities. Her references were more copious and accurate than those of any of either team."

Co-ed and Youth Elope, Wed Between Classes

Virginia F. Costello, a junior at the University of Illinois, and Laurence H. Foster, a senior at the same institution, disappeared between classes on Feb. 5. Two hours later they returned, having in the meantime been married in the study of the Rev. Robert Locke, pastor of the Congregational church of Champaign. Mrs. Foster is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Costello of Litchfield, Ill., and the bridegroom the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Foster, 216 North Harvey avenue, Oak Park. Mrs. Foster will continue her studies until graduation, although her husband completes his course next June.

N. Y. DRY LEAGUE MAY BE CALLED POLITICAL BODY

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—William H. Anderson, state superintendent of the New York State Anti-Saloon league, was subpoenaed today to appear before Supreme Court Justice Staley in special term here Monday in connection with the proceedings to have the organization declared a political committee, and as such to file election campaign statements.

With Anderson were subpoenaed the following officers of the organization: The Rev. David G. Burrell, president; the Rev. C. W. Spicer of Gloversville, B. H. Fancher, treasurer; the Rev. George C. Moore, secretary, and Orville S. Poland, superintendent of the law enforcement division of the league.

The officers are directed by the subpoena to bring all books, papers, and records of the league showing how much money the league received in 1922, its sources, and how it was spent, also who the so-called field workers are, and what ministers, if any, are on the league pay roll, and the cost of circularizing candidates in the primary and election, who received the information and cost of distribution.

Col. Ransom H. Gillett, who is conducting the action on behalf of five taxpayers of Rensselaer county, also will inquire into the league's activities in the Twenty-seventh congressional district.

The work of Anderson in the First assembly district of Steuben county will also be inquired into, Col. Gillett said today.

Anderson is now being sued for libel damages by Frank A. Cortright, candidate for assembly on the prohibition ticket in that district.

VOLIVA LIBEL JURY READY TO HEAR ARGUMENT

Closing arguments in the trial of Wilbur Glenn Voliva, overseer of Zion City, charged with criminal libel before Judge Jacob Hopkins in Criminal court will begin on Monday. Both sides rested their case shortly before noon yesterday.

The Rev. Thomas Nelson, pastor of Grace Missionary church in Zion, against whom Voliva is alleged to have made the statements that resulted in the indictment, took the witness stand in the morning and disclaimed all the charges made against him by more than seventy-five defense witnesses.

The Rev. Mr. Nelson stated that he "could not understand why all the people who testified against him could have done so." He further said that the alleged antics attributed to him never happened.

SENATOR FLAYS 'DRY FANATICS' AS EGOMANIACS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—Interference with prohibition enforcement was charged against officers of the Anti-Saloon league by Senator Shields [Dem., Tenn.], in an address today in the senate. He referred to speeches on prohibition enforcement by Dr. Purley Baker, head of the league; Wayne B. Wheeler, its general counsel; Dr. Clarence True Wilson, and others, and asserted that in "fanaticism" for prohibition enforcement they had gone beyond proper bounds.

Senator Shields referred particularly to a reported address by Dr. Baker in which he was quoted as advocating incarceration in jail for twenty federal judges who, he said, were drunkards.

Prohibition "fanatics," he declared, had not scrupled against "villifying" federal judges, members of congress, and others, and some, he said, appeared to regard the prohibition law as their own and not the people's.

Law enforcement was urged by Senator Shields, who, referring to agitation for light wine and beer, said he was against permitting use of any intoxicating beverages.

The senator said that since prohibition there had developed an "aristocracy of bootleggers."

91 WITNESSES TO AID STOKES IN DIVORCE SUIT

Links His Wife with 63 Co-respondents.

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—William E. D. Stokes today summoned ninety-one witnesses to appear against his young wife in the Supreme court next Monday and link her with the sixty-three co-respondents named by him in his suit for absolute divorce.

In his action against the beautiful Helen Elwood Stokes of Denver, the aged multi-millionaire realty owner charges infidelity on more than 100 occasions beginning three months after their marriage in 1911 in Long Branch, N. J.

Although Stokes has spent more than $250,000 in his fight to free himself from his wife, he has paid her attorneys only $22,500, Samuel Untermyer, of her counsel, told Supreme Court Justice Guy and asked that Stokes be compelled to pay $50,000 counsel fees and $25,000 expenses before proceeding with the trial.

$18,000 a Year Not Enough.

"This man is determined with his great wealth to crush this woman," said Untermyer. "The present alimony of $18,000 a year for herself and two small children is wholly inadequate. She has spent every dollar, including her patrimony, to clear her name of the slanderous charges hurled by her vicious and insanely cunning husband, who is obsessed with the desire to ruin her."

Continuing his plea, Untermyer said: "Stokes is worth $7,500,000 and has a yearly income of $192,000. The Hotel Ansonia alone yields him $167,000 annually. He is spending enormous sums on an army of private detectives employed to watch his wife day and night and on professional witnesses.

Says He Slanders Mrs. Stokes.

"Stokes' agents have tried to drag the name of Mrs. Stokes into the Nick Arnstein and the Tex Rickard cases. Others brought into Stokes' suit for divorce by foul innuendo are Jack de Saulles, Joseph Elwell, James A. Stillman, Capt. Philip M. Lydig, and William K. Vanderbilt."

Untermyer asked that allimony be fixed at $50,000 a year. Justice Guy granted an alimony increase to $30,000 a year and $30,000 counsel fees. Mrs. Stokes also was allowed $10,000 for gathering evidence and other expenses. Daniel F. Nugent, represeting Stokes, declared his client was ill of pneumonia, actually "broke," and owned only $700,000 of property which yields him nothing. Justice Guy remarked he was convinced Stokes was worth several million dollars, refused to permit Stokes to amend his complaint by adding a co-respondent to the list, and threw out an affidavit in which Stokes makes what the justice termed "a scurrilous and scandalous attack" on Judge Ben Lindsey of the Juvenile court, Denver.

SUPREME COURT HEARS U. S. REPLY TO CHICAGO PIT

Grain Futures Act May Be Decided This Week.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—In a brief filed in the Supreme court today the government declared that the fundamental question involved in the case brought by the Chicago Board of Trade to have the grain futures act declared unconstitutional was whether congress or that grain exchange should regulate interstate and foreign commerce and the postal laws so as to control the great "current of commerce" flowing between the markets of the world's supply of wheat, corn and other cereals.

The government stated that its position in the present grain future case would be the same as that presented when the packers and stockyards act was under attack.

In that case the Supreme court, in sustaining that law held, the government declared, that "commission merchants and traders, engaged in purchases and sales, identically as in the instant case, constituted a part of the current of commerce which was subject to regulation."

Referring to a brief filed by counsel for the Chicago Board of Trade submitting the views of professors of universities on the advantages of trading in futures as a means of regulating the law of supply and demand, the government placed on file a statement by the department of agriculture "on the practical workings of the grain exchanges and especially of the Chicago Board of Trade," adding that "a grain of practice is worth an ounce of theory." In this connection the government insisted that congress "is a better judge of the common welfare than all the learned faculties of our universities."

MEMORIES OF 100 YEARS FILL WOMAN'S MIND

Sitting in her arm chair by the broad window, in a black woolen dress, her thin shoulders warmed by a shawl, a white lace cap framing her face, Mrs. Carolina Augustin celebrated her 100th birthday yesterday in musing reminiscence of the crowded memories of a century.

Dimmed by the passage of the years, confused by the thronging of events, her thoughts turned from the life that passed before her broad window to pictures of the past. Mostly she thought of her girlhood days, before she left Germany in 1863.

Children of the neighborhood, unable to conceive of any one being so old, came to see and shyly congratulate this woman who was born "even before grandpa." And many letters came to her home at 1839 Eddy street, congratulating her.

So she sat, while neighbors crowded in to wish her "even more happy returns," half sleeping, half awake, living with her memories

STATE BONUS ACT VALIDITY UP TO SUPREME COURT

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The question of the validity of the $55,000,000 soldiers' bonus act was taken under advisement by the Illinois Supreme court tonight, following arguments on the "friendly" injunction suit to test the law.

Assistant Attorney General Rodenberg, at the close of his arguments in defense of the act, asked the court to hand down an oral opinion at the present term, so the service recognition board could be free to continue preparations for payment of the bonus to the 350,000 world war veterans of Illinois if the decision upholds the validity of the law. Although Chief Justice Thompson gave no indication of contemplated action on the request, attorneys in the case believe tonight that the court will hand down an opinion Tuesday.

Result of Adverse Opinion.

Should the court give an adverse opinion, the operations of the service recognition board would be blocked immediately, as the case involves a perpetual injunction restraining the board from putting the compensation act into effect.

The so-called "friendly" action was instituted by Dr. Elmer E. Hagler of Springfield, at the instigation of the American Legion. Banking interests also urged a test of the law before entering the market as bidders for the bonds which must be sold to pay the bonus.

Attacks Act's Constitutionality.

Attorney Noah C. Bainum, law partner of former United States Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman, represented Dr. Hagler in the case and vigorously attacked the constitutionality of the act. As a moral proposition he declared the service men were entitled to every consideration which their government could give them.

At the counsel table with Assistant Attorney General Rodenberg were two attorneys representing the American Legion—Harry A. Newby of Chicago, judge advocate of the department of Illinois, and Howard C. Knotts of Springfield, commander of a local post.

WOLF OF LA SALLE ST. HELD GUILTY ON OLD CHARGES

Faces Maximum Term of Ten Years.

MAJ. HARRY F. HAMLIN.

"Honest John" Worthington's immunity from Chicago court conviction—a charmed career of more than 20 years—was ended yesterday when a jury in Federal Judge Alschuler's court found him guilty on nine-year-old charges of using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

After futile efforts to return a verdict following eight hours of consideration Friday afternoon and evening, Judge Alschuler ordered the jury locked up for the night. Yesterday morning they reported they had found Worthington, the "wolf of La Salle street," guilty on two of the three counts of the indictment. Each count carries a maximum penalty of five years in the federal penitentiary and a fine of $10,000.

Faces Newer Charges.

The charges on which Worthington was convicted were based upon his promotion of the Mercantile Security and Investment company and the American Banking company, through which stockholders were swindled out of large fortunes. First of the offenses charged were committed eleven years ago and indictments were returned in 1914. Two of the government's principal witnesses died during the time the case was gathering dust in federal building archives.

Worthington still faces more recent charges of altering serial numbers on stolen Liberty bonds.

Worthington received the verdict complacently. A veteran of many courtroom sessions, he instructed his attorney, Edward Maher, to poll the jury. He showed no emotion as each juror verified his part of the verdict. Following the poll, Attorney Maher said he would ask for a new trial. Next Friday was set by Judge Alschuler for hearing of arguments.

Prison to "High Finance."

Worthington, who is 72 years old, came to Chicago in 1902 immediately upon his release from Clinton prison, New York. He previously had been sentenced to serve six years in Sing Sing, but was transferred to Clinton, where he was released after serving three years. He was sentenced for irregular practices in obtaining possession of a grocery store.

Despite his New York record, Worthington apparently had little difficulty in getting launched in various "Wallingford" projects in Chicago, it is said.

Then followed a career marked by schemes which cost gullible victims in all parts of the country several millions of dollars. Various courts endeavored to halt Worthington's hurricane finance. At each trial, Worthington sat with pious mein, and met the eyes of jurors with a "hurt expression."

In the trial just ended, Maj. Harry F. Hamlin, assistant United States district attorney, who prosecuted the case, anticipated a similar defense and met it successfully.

IN JAIL TWO YEARS

MME. EMMY DESTINN.

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Mme. Emmy Destinn, opera singer, served two years in an Austrian prison from 1916 to 1918, it became known here today, through a court action she had brought against Edward Berger, a pawnbroker, for $31,000 for alleged misrepresentation of jewelry purchased from him by the diva. The reason for her imprisonment could not be learned. Berger received the decision by default because the singer was not in court.

Mme. Destinn, in the papers filed in the case, said that she had not started action sooner because of the imprisonment. She claims that in 1916 she purchased two pearl necknaces from Berger for $27,000, which were set forth as being worth $35,000. Later, she claims, she found that the pearls were not oriental and worth not more than $8,000. Berger denied the charge but set up the statute of limitations as a defense.

TRY TO SAVE GOLD HOARD FROM FIRE; 1 DEAD, 1 DYING

An attempt to rescue a hidden hoard of gold from the attic of his burning home at 3022 Fletcher street yesterday, resulted in the probable fatal injury of Fred Heller, 70 years old, wealthy eccentric, and the death of his housekeeper, Mrs. Clara Krum, 72.

Authorities believe the fire was started to drive the couple from the house to facilitate theft of the treasure.

Heller, after escaping from the burning building, evaded firemen and returned. When he failed to reappear Mrs. Krum slipped unnoticed through the fire lines in search of him.

Firemen, breaking into the attic found them lying side by side clasping a pile of bank notes and coins.

SHADOW BOXERS

Riches may come and go. Character is eternal. It is the choicest product of man. Genuine good citizenship means standing four square against all the winds which carry graft or any unfair advantage. When that square is broken it is an end to independence, born of good character.

Any man or group of men can secretly pick specific places and times when they may go along with unquestionable influences that will be of profit to themselves and their enterprises. Such men fool neither their employes nor all the people.

No matter how eminent such dexterous and shackled men, or the unthinking part of the public, may think them to be, they are not arriving, they are not helping, they are not doing anything worth while.

They take down great purses by hitting the people below the belt in the dark. They take no part in the moral arena of the world. They are but Shadow Boxers.

Think it over!

ROTARIANS OPEN DRIVE FOR UPLIFT IN CITIZENSHIP

Harding's Message of Approval Broadcast.

Rotary International, an organization of Rotary clubs in 27 countries with a membership approximating 90,000, began a campaign from all club headquarters yesterday in the interest of more intelligent citizenship.

Messages from President Harding, Speaker Frederick H. Gillett of the house of representatives, and Attorney General Daugherty were read at many gatherings and broadcasted over the country wherever the Rotarians could find an audience. The campaign is not political, but is devoted to spreading the broad principles of the responsibilities of citizenship.

Message of President.

The message from President Harding follows:

"The individual citizen's responsibility for executive government begins with the selection of the executive. This implies the duty of every voter to vote; a duty that many millions of them regularly fail to perform. Before that, it implies the duty to vote intelligently, to make the vote represent a deliberate decision based on the claims of the opposing parties and candidates.

"Finally, the executive being duly selected, it implies the obligation to give him the support of all good citizens in every effort of administration of the law. That citizen who regards himself as a model of the civic proprieties, because his present conduct is impeccable, but who does not coöperate with the civil authorities or exert his influence in behalf of the best possible administration of the laws, greatly overrates his own usefulness as a citizen. The responsible officers of government, whether it be municipal, state, or national, need and are entitled to the full and effective support of all citizens in the enforcement of laws.

"If the effort of Rotary should be effective in impressing this conception of the citizen's duty it will have performed a most useful service."

Gillett Upholds Plan.

Speaker Gillett, warning against the political quack and the demagogue, urged citizens to keep informed on questions of legislation.

Attorney General Daugherty said that the individual citizen's first duty is to respect and obey the laws of his country himself."

President Raymond M. Havens of Rotary International sent out his address by radio from Kansas City.

Mystery Surrounds Death of Postoffice Inspector

Savannah, Ga., Feb. 17.—The body of L. C. Chance of Fort Scott, Kas., post office inspector, was found in his office here tonight. He had been shot to death, and had been dead probably forty-eight hours.

The body was found upright in an office chair, the right leg over the corner of a desk. A revolver was found on the draw-leaf of the desk with one shell in the barrel, the cylinder lying nearby.

ZITA STILL INSISTS ON RIGHT TO RULE HUNGARIAN NATION

MADRID, Feb. 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Count Apponyi, Hungarian royalist leader, who recently arrived at San Sebastian for a conference with former Empress Zity of Austria-Hungary, is reported to have been assured by Zita of her determination to maintain her rights and those of her children to the Hungarian throne.

Zita is credited with the intention of addressing a manifesto to the Hungarian people setting forth this determination.

JUDGE COMMENDS K. K. K. AS CURB ON MOONSHINERS

Says the Klan Upholds Americanism.

Severe criticism of "foreigners who come here merely to make money and are ruining the country" was launched by Municipal Judge Henry M. Walker in East Chicago Avenue court yesterday in connection with the case of Mrs. Katie Lawkoski, on trial charged with making and selling moonshine liquor.

Incidentally, Judge Walker indicated his admiration for the methods of the Ku Klux Klan, which, he declared, "goes in and handles a case when and where the police fail."

"You are a travesty on motherhood," charged Judge Walker, pointing an accusing finger at Mrs. Lawkoski. "You have children of your own and yet you persist in destroying other mothers' children by peddling this vile poisonous moonshine to them."

Mrs. Lawkoski lives at 2550 Carmen avenue and had, along with her husband, been found guilty of bootlegging on Thursday and fined $200. At yesterday's hearing Judge Walker reduced the fine to $100.

"Some of these foreigners come here to make money, and find moonshining the easiest way of doing it," the judge said. "I will say that we need the Ku Klux to put a stop to some of these practices. And I'm not a member of the klan either. I couldn't be, because I'm not a native."

Qualifying his statement from the bench, Judge Walker last evening said that what he really meant by his words was that the moral influence of the klan "probably would put the fear of God into a certain class of people who cannot be reached by the police."

"My statement from the bench was intended to have a moral effect. I have no sympathy with an organization that creates religious and racial antagonism. In fact, I am opposed to it."

HOUSE EXPECTED TO O. K. SENATE VIEWS ON DEBT

President May Get Bill by Wednesday.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Senate amendments to the British debt funding bill may be accepted by the house, which will make it unnecessary to obtain the approval of a conference report.

The amendments were discussed at a meeting of the house ways and means committee today, but it was decided to defer action until the return to the city of Representative Burton [Rep., Ohio], author of the bill and member of the debt commission. Representative Fordney [Rep., Mich.], chairman of the ways and means committee, received a telegram from Mr Burton asking that action be delayed.

For Broader Powers.

Mr. Fordney said that he does not like the senate amendment which requires the ratification of all future settlements by congress. He said he believed that the commission ought to have broad power to settle other debts as provided in the house bill.

It was the opinion of Senator Smoot [Rep., Utah], member of the debt commission, however, that the effect of the house provision restricting settlements to "similar but not more favorable" than the British agreement would be to tie the hands of the commission, inasmuch as it is probable that other nations must be given more favorable terms.

Democrats to Figure.

Rather than have to submit a conference report to the senate, which might use it as an excuse to delay action on the ship subsidy bill, it is considered probable that Mr. Burton will recommend the acceptance of the senate amendments.

The only other senate amendment of importance is that which provides for the addition of three Democrats to the membership of the debt commission. If it is to be necessary to submit future settlements to congress some of the Republicans believe that it will be desirable to have Democrats participate in the negotiations.

75 SAILORS SAVED FROM WRECKED SHIPS IN PACIFIC

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 17.—All the members of the crew of the wrecked steamer Tuscan Prince were aboard the coast guard cutter Snohomish at 9 o'clock this morning, said a wireless dispatch received here. Lieut. H. G. Hemingway, commanding the cutter, said the vessel would leave for Port Angeles, Wash., shortly.

The message indicated that the Snohomish had stopped at Clo-oose, Vancouver island, where the thirty-two officers and crew of the wrecked steamer Santa Rita were taken aboard.

SOVIETS EXPORT GRAIN WHILE U. S. FEEDS STARVING

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 17.—While the American relief administration is benevolently feeding 75,000 Russians near Odessa, as well as several hundred thousand farther inland, Russia is exporting thousands of tons of grain to Germany and Turkey.

More than 50,000 tons of grain, mostly wheat and barley, are at Odessa waiting to be loaded, and an equal amount is at Novorossisk. The Vladimir, flying the British flag, is bound for Hamburg loaded with 4,500 tons of grain. At Novorossisk two British steamers are loading. Six steamers have left for Asia Minor to exchange grain for coal.

Col. W. S. Haskell, former head of the American relief administration work in Russia, who is passing through here, states that reports that Russia is exporting grain which could be used for the relief of famine victims are true. He recommends that the American relief administration work in Russia cease as soon as the 20,000,000 tons of supplies now there are liquidated

NAMES CHECKER CAB OFFICIALS IN FRAUD CHARGE

Alleged to have falsified an "inventory list" submitted to the secretary of state when an increase of capitalization was sought for the Checker Cab Manufacturing company, Morris Markin, Michael Glassberg, and A. R. Carlson, president, vice president, and secretary respectively of the concern, were named in warrants yesterday at South Clark street court before Judge Joseph W. Schulman. The warrants, sworn to by Abraham Lomberg, former president of the company, state that the alleged misstatements were made a little over five months ago, when the capital stock of the company was increased to $1,000,000, a jump in five years from $2,500.

A Matter Of Lively Interest

When Miss Dutton opened the new Ontra Cafeteria, in Wilson Avenue, she little thought there were so many residents of Uptown Chicago who would evince by their immediate and constant patronage the liveliest interest in her enterprise.

They have made the enterprise theirs as well as hers. In a day the new Ontra achieved prestige equal to that of the two downtown Ontras, which they were years in acquiring. Surely the new Ontra is filling a long-felt want. Already its commodious lobby has become Uptown Chicago's great central place for appointments—please feel welcome to use this accommodation at all times.

To take dinner on Sundays in the new Ontra has already become a matter of pleasant routine with many families from all parts of Chicago.

On week days, in all three Ontras, the displays of delicious Lenten dishes, so extremely varied as to make enumeration difficult, are giving rise to enthusiastic commendation.

ADMITS BURNS KEEPS 10 AGENTS POSING AS REDS

Raid "Frameup" Denied; Balanow Arrested.

"I never met any one in connection with the raid on the Communist party convention at Bridgeman, and I had no knowledge of that convention or of the raid until twenty-four hours after the raid was made."

This was the denial yesterday of Allen O. Meyers, New York manager for the William J. Burns International Detective agency, to the colorful story of Albert Balanow, alias Bailin, former detective and government operative and "champion double crosser," who charged that Meyers first "framed" the convention of the Communist party of America and then conducted the raid upon it at Bridgman, Mich., Aug. 22.

Prepare for Trial of 21 on March 5.

The testimony of both men has been taken by deposition in the office of William A. Cunnea, Socialist candidate for mayor, in preparation of the trial of the twenty-one alleged "Reds" captured at the convention who are to go on trial for violation of the Michigan syndicalist law in St. Joseph, Mich., on March 5.

The trial previously had been set for Feb. 26, but by agreement of both sides it was postponed yesterday to March 5.

While Meyers was testifying Balanow was arrested on a warrant charging criminal libel sworn out by Meyers. He was released on $5,000 cash bail furnished for him by Ed Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor. The little Russian gave himself up to Detective Sergeant Lawrence McDonough of the detective bureau bomb squad when he was informed that the warrant had been issued.

Reds Get Information They Sought.

And if the state scored in branding the testimony of Balanow false, the defense scored also in some of the admissions Attorney Frank P. Walsh, chief counsel for the alleged "Reds," drew from Meyers.

Mr. Meyers admitted that many of the Burns operatives are "under cover" in the ranks of the communists, and that through the donations of these men to the communist movement the agency itself probably contributes a considerable amount of money to the radicals in the course of a year.

This testimony came up when Mr. Meyers read an expense account of Balanow for several dollars contributed to the Communist party.

"You understand, however," Mr. Meyers said, "we know that the money our agents charge us for such contributions many, many times is not so spent. We have to pay them as expenses simply because we cannot check up on them. It often goes into the agents' pockets."

Efforts of Attorney Walsh to get Meyers to fix an approximate amount paid to agents for such expenses in any specific year brought forth the statement that during the last three years probably ten men a day have been engaged in radical "under cover" investigations; and that a compilation of such "donations to the party" contained in Balanow's reports covering a three weeks' period would be a fair basis to estimate an approximate amount on.

His refusal to answer certain questions resulted in a considerable "battle for the purpose of the record" between Attorney Walsh, Assistant Attorney General O. L. Smith of Michigan and Attorney Grover C. Niemeyer, representing Mr. Meyers personally.

Agency and U. S. Work Together.

In the end Attorney Walsh succeeded in bringing out that Mr. Meyers often dropped his work as a Burns manager to don the badge of the department of justice as a government agent.

Mr. Meyers gave his testimony in a suave, polished manner. He told of many activities, including a trip to Europe, in connection with the Wall street explosion on Sept. 16, 1920, stating he often posed as a newspaper man.

"I 'roped' old Boise Penrose, the late senator, once," he said, with a reminiscent smile, "posing as a correspondent for the Cincinnati Enquirer.

"I have no objection," he continued, "to telling anything I know about this case, but I do object to being used as a tool to spread propaganda to discredit detective agencies or any one else on behalf of a group of people who, I am firmly convinced, are plotting to overthrow the government of the United States."

Mystery Woman in Case.

The inevitable woman entered into the case yesterday also. She sat all day in Mr. Cunnea's office listening attentively to the testimony. Inquiry late in the day developed that no one connected with either side apparently knew anything about her.

She was pretty and very smartly dressed, considerably under 30.

"Who is she?" Attorney Walsh was asked, sotto voce.

"I wish I knew," he came back. "I think the state has planted her in here for some reason.

"Who is she?" to Assistant Attorney General Smith.

"Search me! I think the defense has planted her here for something."

"Who are you?" the young woman herself was asked. "What is your interest in the case?" And her reply was, "Remember what curiosity did to the cat!"

BILL APPROVING BIRTH CONTROL MEETING DELAYS

Organized Opposition Is Not Encountered.

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Members of the judiciary committees of the senate and house are being deluged with letters from all parts of the country urging favorable action on Cummins-Kissel bill proposed by the Voluntary Parenthood league for the purpose of removing from the old Anthony Comstock law of 1873 the prohibition against circulation of contraceptive information. The pending bill is known as the birth control bill.

Contrary to general expectations, organized opposition has not developed, according to its sponsors, who say the appeal for its adoption is growing steadily. Senator Cummins [Rep., Ia.] and Representative Kissell [Rep., N. Y.], who introduced the bills, have received only one adverse letter each up to the present.

Comstock's "Ghost" Protests.

The protest to Senator Cummins came from John Sumner, successor to Anthony Comstock as head of the New York Society for Suppression of Vice. Comstock initiated the old statute which the Cummins-Kissel bill would amend by taking out the words that prohibit circulation of scientific knowledge as to the control of conception.

Although the birth control advocates finally have succeeded in getting the bill before congress, there is a demonstration of official timidity there in dealing with this vexatious social issue in which multitudes of people are deeply interested. Members of both houses realize that the practice of birth control has been growing in this country, particularly among what are called the "upper classes." They know that books, magazine articles and studies have appeared in the last few years dealing with this subject.

Propagandists Are Busy.

About the time the subject was passing from the parlors of the highbrows to the living rooms of the plain people, a force of propagandists started work on congress in deadly earnest for the purpose of striking down the federal laws restricting dissemination of information by Mrs. Sanger and the large number of persons who agree with her. This developed the formation of the Voluntary Parenthood league, with headquarters at 19 West 44th street, New York.

There is a Washington office in charge of energetic and zealous advocates. There is a campaign paper, called the Birth Control Herald, which is described as the official organ of the league. There is a motto: "Nothing prevents us from stating the truth with with a smile on our lips."

For many months the propagandists found congress hard to move. They could not find a member to introduce the bill they had prepared.

Somewhat naively they carried on Herald blank spaces, with an explanation that the members of the senate and house who prove they were "statesmen" by introducing the bill would have their pictures shown in the reserved space. No member of either branch seemed anxious to prove he was a "statesman."

At last Senator Cummins and Representative Kissel consented to introduce the bill. Both Senator Cummins and Mr. Kissel were given first page pictures.

C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Senator Joseph Irwin France [Rep., Md.] is understood to contemplate abandoning that state as a residence when his term as senator expires on March 4 and setting up an office in New York with a view to promoting trade relations between the United States and soviet Russia.

EXPERTS SEEK IN VAIN FOR 'PULL' TO SAVE INCOMES

Fear New Opinion Means a Tax.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The Chicago experts apparently are having difficulty in getting anybody with political prestige to aid them in gaining immunity from income taxes on the $2,742,666 they collected in fees from the city in less than fourteen months. There are those who publicly advocate leasing Muscle Shoals to Henry Ford and other propositions on which there is a sharp difference of opinion, but if there are those who would aid the experts they keep under cover.

The Chicago appraisers sought powerful political influence through a legal channel when the contempt proceedings for refusal to give a government representative information regarding their incomes were pending before former Judge Landis. Those proceedings were halted. They have not been revived. It has been unsuccessfully attempted to drop them.

Mapes Exempted Incomes.

Subsequently Carl A. Mapes, former internal revenue solicitor, gave an opinion exempting these experts from taxes on fees from the city, because he classified the experts as city employés. The opinion was based on unverified affidavits and the opinion itself conclusively demonstrates that the affidavits contained inaccurate and misleading statements.

In pleading for the privilege of employing these particular experts, M. J. Faherty, who hired them, said he wanted outside, independent appraisers of unbiased judgment. He later said he treated them as other contractors—not as city employés.

Aldermen Didn't Know It.

One of these same experts testified under oath that he was not a city employé. The aldermen who appropriated the money to pay them have repeatedly and vigorously asserted the experts are not city employés. Others who have been employed in like expert service have declared they were not city employés and have paid their income taxes.

So the case was reopened and now Solicitor Hartson is writing a new opinion which the experts are afraid will say that they must pay taxes. But the experts have failed to get any politician of standing to come out in the open for them.

SUBSIDY CAUGHT IN WHIRLPOOL OF TALK IN SENATE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Administration leaders failed to hold the senate down to consideration of the ship subsidy bill today. After approving a few minor committee amendments the senate branched off into a four hour discussion of questions bearing on the invalidation of laws by the courts. Senator Owen [Dem., Okla.] and Senator Shields [Dem., Tenn.] occupied most of the time.

Senator Jones [Rep., Wash.], in charge of the subsidy bill, served notice that beginning Monday night he would try to hold the senate in night sessions, to be avoided only by an agreement for a vote on the bill.

Opponents of the subsidy bill made no effort today to displace the measure by bringing forward the truth-in-fabric bill, reserving this move until such time as senators exhaust their ideas as to methods of killing time.

A. D. Lasker, chairman of the shipping board, and John Barton Payne, former chairman, visited the capitol together during the afternoon.

Agricultural Budget of $69,500,000 Passes House

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—The agricultural appropriation bill carrying $69,500,000 was sanctioned by the house today and now goes to the President for his signature. The usual appropriation of $360,000 for distribution of free seed was not carried.

20 "DOPE" RINGS SUPPLYING U. S. WITH NARCOTICS

Part of Drugs Brought from Canada.

St. John, N. B., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—That this port is a concentration point for the smuggling of drugs and that the volume smuggled this winter far exceeds the amount brought through any American port, including New York, is the assertion of Arthur P. Kelly, an agent of the Society for the Suppression of Narcotics.

Owing to the immense amount of drugs smuggled into the United States from eastern Canada, Kelly was dispatched to the maritime provinces to investigate. He has found that twenty American drug smuggling rings are making their importing headquarters here and that the forbidden drugs are being shipped out of here daily to all parts of the United States.

Chicago Headquarters.

One of the biggest rings operating in St. John has a clearing house in Chicago. The personnel of this ring includes two Chicago politicians; the others are members of the Chicago underworld. This ring had done its smuggling through New York, but, owing to the ease with which drugs are smuggled through Canadian ports, the ring has transferred its importing staff to St. John. At present, in St. John there are only two Canadian officials to suppress the traffic in narcotics. The drive has thus far been chiefly directed at Chinese rings smuggling opium through St. John. The "white rings" rarely have been molested.

At present, the Chicago ring has six employés stationed here. Its headquarters have been maintained in what is supposed to be a clothing factory. The manufacturing of men's clothing is utilized as camouflage for the real operations.

Has Regular "Carriers."

The cocaine and morphine handled by the Chicago gang are taken aboard the steamers by the regular "carriers" employed by the ring. Some of these persons go as seamen, stewards, oilers. Officers, also, in some instances, act as "carriers." Other "carriers" travel as passengers, women particularly. More women are used now than ever before. The number is increasing, for women have proved to be efficient.

Working on the docks, often in important positions, are agents of the various rings. An employé of the Chicago ring is a dock foreman. He boards the steamers as they arrive, presumably to discuss the moving of freight, but really to receive a package of drugs from a "carrier" and to deliver the package on shore to a waiting "runner" of the ring. The runner then will carry the package to the clothing factory headquarters.

Trains Also Used.

Leaving St. John daily for Chicago, via Montreal, are two trains. Twice each week a carrier of this ring leaves St. John, bound for Chicago, and carrying a valuable package of cocaine or morphine to the headquarters or clearing house of the ring in Chicago. Women are favored as train "carriers." The women are seldom searched.

One such feminine "carrier," en route to Chicago with cocaine valued at $20,000, was the victim of a tip received by a government official.

The woman carrying $20,000 worth of cocaine was able, by "charming" the official, to escape unsearched. She insisted that the official was mistaken and that she was an actress going to join a theatrical company in Chicago. The official "fell" for her.

Kelly, as the result of his inquiry, says 80 per cent of the drugs used in California by the motion picture colonies and by drug addicts in general now are smuggled through St. John Kelly asserts that since the first of December at least $200,000 in drugs, computed at Los Angeles prices, have been smuggled through St. John for California rings alone.

It is whispered among the gangs that a man connected with the film industry, but who lived in Canada for some years previous to entering that business, is one of the leaders in the ring. He is declared to have profited much more from the drug traffic than he has in the movies.

POOLE TO OFFER FISH TO PUBLIC AT CUT PRICES

Russell J. Poole, secretary of the council committee on high cost and high rent, has made arrangements for the sale of fresh fish to the citizens of Chicago at much below the market prices. In a letter to Ald. Kaindl, chairman of the committee, yesterday he said that the sale of the fish from stations adjoining freight yards will begin the first of the week and that as many car loads as can be disposed of will be handled.

According to the letter, the people of Chicago will be given an opportunity of purchasing fish at about 15 cents a pound. These will be fresh fish, while some retail merchants of the city are selling fish, many of them cold storage, from 40 to 45 cents.

Recently the committee made an investigation of the so called "fish trust" in Chicago and a report showing profiteering and boycotting was going on on a large scale was rendered.

Mr. Poole said that with the support the committee now has from the bigger fisheries, he felt satisfied that the present system would "absolutely bust the profiteering fish trust."

The first stations will be opened at Grand avenue and Kingsbury street, and at 92nd street, adjoining the railroad track in South Chicago. On Tuesday sale of fish from a tent on the ground of the International Harvester company at Fullerton avenue will be begun, while later other stations on the property of big industrial plants will be opened.

SEVEN WIVES?

Reputed to have committed bigamy at least half a dozen times, if not more, Joseph Hajek, 35 years old, a Bohemian, is in jail while the police search for the wives he is alleged to have deserted. So far they have located three and it is expected that investigations will reveal the presence of at least four others.

Hajek was arrested in Madison, Wis., last Monday, where he had gone to visit his latest wife, Nora Schimenek, whom he married on Dec. 23 last year. When she found out that he had other wives living Mrs. Hajek collapsed and is now in a hospital, seriously ill.

At the detective bureau Hajek was confronted with another wife, Marian Sanders, 4600 South Wells street, by whom he had three children. Mrs. Sanders-Hajek immediately identified him as the man who married her ten years ago and afterwards deserted her and promptly went for him, striking him to the floor. The earliest wife so far discovered is Mary Nanecek, whom he married fifteen years ago, leaving her after they had been married six weeks.

Operation Holds Senator Clark of Chicago in L. A.

Rockford, Ill., Feb. 17.—Lieut. Gov. Fred E. Sterling received a telegram from Los Angeles, Cal., today, announcing that Senator Albert C. Clark of Chicago had undergone a mastoid operation. Senator Clark has been in Los Angeles since soon after the Illinois legislature convened.

IDOL OF "SHEIKS" LOSES MATE BY DIVORCE ROUTE

Idol of beach "sheiks" at a dozen summer resorts and noted as the "life of the party," Mrs. Leah Arnold Parkinson was nervous, excitable and cruel to her husband, according to Le Moyne Parkinson, wheel manufacturer living at 5109 Kimball avenue, who was granted a divorce yesterday by Judge Hugo M. Friend.

The couple were married on April 27, 1914, Parkinson testified, and soon after Mrs. Parkinson complained of "nervous prostration" and demanded a rest. The "rest" included a trip to New York, St. Louis and later to a seaboard summer resort.

"I visited her unexpectedly after she had been away ten weeks," declared Parkinson, "and before I met her, I met strange men who were talking of her and the wonderful times they were having. After watching her attempt to dance with a drunken man who collapsed on the floor, I returned to Chicago alone."

After a reconciliation in February, 1922, the couple returned to the Rogers Park hotel. In June, 1922, Parkinson's father died in Indianapolis.

"I asked my wife to come with me to see father," said Parkinson, 'I won't see that pious old fool,' she screamed. When I remonstrated with her, I was showered with toilet articles."

DEATH AFTER SLIPPING ON RUG.

Mrs. Hattie Nordstrom, 78 years old, 4607 North Avers avenue, died in the Swedish Covenant hospital yesterday from injuries received several days ago, when she fell over a rug and fractured her hip.

WOMEN PRISONS FILLED, NEED OF NEW ONES TOLD

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Immediate necessity for establishment of a federal penal industrial institution for women prisoners convicted of offenses against laws of the United States is becoming more apparent every day, Assistant Attorney General Willebrandt said today after a conference with Superintendent of Prisons Votaw. Unless such an institution is provided for at once, Mrs. Willebrandt said, the federal government would soon find itself without a penal institution where female prisoners may be confined.

Within the last year, according to Mrs. Willebrandt, practically all of the state institutions of the penitentiary or reformatory class throughout the country had advised the department of justice that they no longer "can take any more federal female prisoners."

Attorney General Daugherty has advocated and urged the necessity of adopting some plan that would look to the segregation of the better class of woman prisoners.

great Co-operative Sale

A big purchase of latest model Napanee Dutch Kitchenets—secured direct from the factory, at most advantageous concessions, by several hundred leading stores in the localities reached by this newspaper—makes possible this remarkable sale. It offers an opportunity no woman can afford to miss.

These famous cabinets, the finest built, have been drastically priced for quick sale, while the down payments and terms have been made so ridiculously easy that they sweep aside the last barrier to immediate possession.

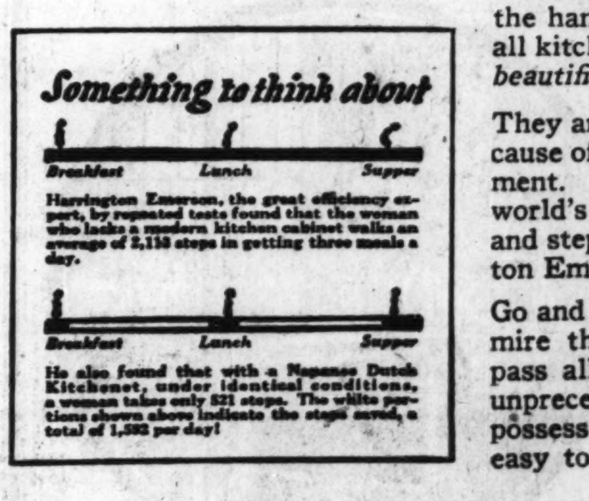
There no longer exists a single reason why you should take 1,592 needless steps a day across your kitchen—as scientific tests prove the average woman does when she is without a Napanee Dutch Kitchenet to assist her!

Escape that "Eternal Grind"

Men have their daily tasks shortened and made easy by all kinds of labor-saving devices. Then why should a woman still be compelled to take three times more steps than necessary, and be tied down to her kitchen for the lack of a Napanee Dutch Kitchenet?

It isn't fair, as any right-minded person will concede—especially now that we have made it so absurdly easy to relieve her from that "eternal grind" of meal-getting.

Something to think about



Harrington Emerson, the great efficiency expert, by repeated tests found that the woman who lacks a modern kitchen cabinet walks an average of 2,113 steps in getting three meals a day.

He also found that with a Napanee Dutch Kitchenet, under identical conditions, a woman takes only 521 steps. The white portions shown above indicate the steps saved, a total of 1,592 per day!

Three times daily, 21 times weekly, over 1,000 times a year, she needs a Napanee. What other labor-saver is so constantly helpful?

Take Advantage of this Sale

Not only do we consider Napanee the handsomest and best built of all kitchen cabinets—real kitchen beautifiers!

They are also the most useful because of their unexcelled arrangement. In fact, they hold the world's record for saving time and steps—as proved by Harrington Emerson's tests.

Go and see them this week. Admire them. See how they surpass all others. And seize this unprecedented opportunity to possess one on terms simply too easy to think about!

ILLINOIS A. C. WINS NATIONAL A. A. U. MEET

BROCCO AND EGG VICTORS IN SIX-DAY BIKE GRIND

BOXING RIALTO READY FOR CLASH WITH REFORMERS

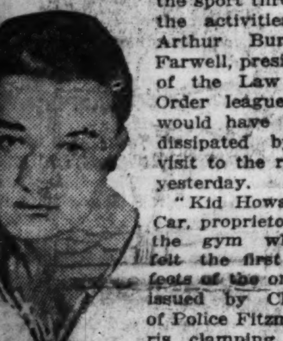
Howard and Mullen Will Push "Showdown."

PAGING HENRY FORD

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—In view of Henry Ford's well known attitude toward Jews, the automobile magnate may be interested to learn that the newest boxing sensation is a young Jew whose nom de guerre is Henry Ford. His real name is Holly Abrams. Henry Ford, the boxer, just recently turned professional, and after half a dozen battles against stiff opponents, he has yet to taste defeat. As an amateur he went into the semi-finals in the national amateur tourney in the bantam class on two occasions, and he was the New England champion of his class the last couple of years. He is considered to "have everything," and other parts of the country will hear from him.

Abrams asserts he took on the name Henry Ford because it was easy to say, and not in a desire to have fun with the multimillionaire.

BY FRANK SMITH.



JOE BURMAN.

If the boxing fans of Chicago had any idea that there was to be less of the sport through the activities of Arthur Burrage Farwell, president of the Law and Order league, it would have been dissipated by a visit to the rialto yesterday.

"Kid Howard" Car, proprietor of the gym which felt the first effects of the order issued by Chief of Police Fitzmorris clamping on the lid, was hustling around his place and exhorting his lawyer over the phone to get his case, as well as that of Joie Boyle and "Kid" Hogan, placed on the calendar for trial tomorrow. The best time that could be secured, however, was Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock before Judge Jacobs.

Smith-Burman Go On.

Jim Mullen, local promoter and matchmaker, who opened with his big guns on the Law and Order league yesterday, was more emphatic than ever that there would be a real "showdown" between those who desire boxing and those who desire otherwise.

Promoters of the Midget Smith-Joe Burman bout on Wednesday night announced that they would go through with their program, and added another bout to the card, which from present accounts looks like a sellout. Jimmy Brady, north side lightweight, who has been away from home for a number of years, has been secured as an opponent for Billy Stearns of Minneapolis in the semi-windup. Brady, whose family name is Bell, was born and raised in the neighborhood of Clark and Division streets, and has a host of friends in that territory. The boys will make 135 pounds at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Smith to Arrive Today.

Smith was scheduled to reach Chicago yesterday, but was delayed on account of the blizzard which swept its way on east. He is expected to arrive today. Burman went through a stiff workout at the Arcade yesterday and appears to be in the best of shape. He probably will be matched with Carl Tremaine at Madison Square Garden, providing he defeats Smith in easy fashion. Tickets for the show may be procured at Blooms, Oakes, Davie Miller's, and the Kedzie Koffee Kup.

Lee [Doc] Tadych, local matchmaker and manager, has taken two St. Paul battlers under his wing and will show them at a local suburban club this week. Buddy MacDonald, a star welterweight from the northern city, will meet tough Mickey Forkins at 147 pounds, while Artie Sherry of the Twin Cities will take on Frankie Osner of Oklahoma at 122 pounds. Tadych shows a lot of clippings which indicate that these two boys are anything but slouches at their calling, and will give a good account of themselves.

[illegible] Christiano, local lightwegiht, left last night for Columbus, where tomorrow night he tackles K. O. Mars of Cincinnati in twelve rounds to a decision.

Frankie Schoell, Buffalo welterweight, who was credited with a referee's decision over [illegible] Schlaifer of Omaha the other night, worked out at the Arcade. Schoell will meet [illegible] Latzo in a ten round encounter at [illegible]barre, Pa., tomorrow night.

The Tommy Gibbons bout scheduled for Chicago on Feb. 26 has been put over and in its stead a Sammy Mandell-Eddie Anderson bout will be staged. These boys went ten hot rounds at Minneapolis the other night and there was some dispute at the conclusion of the bout regarding a winner. Some said Mandell, some said Anderson, and others said draw. These boys have a gang of followers around these parts and should draw big in the Indiana city.

Michigan Aggie Athletics Halted by Scarlet Fever

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

$100,000 BEAUTIES.

IS Willie Kamm, Coast league recruit infielder, worth $100,000, the reputed purchase price, to the White Sox?

As a speculation, possibly. As an investment (for widows and orphans, as the Investors' Guide phrases it), no.

No matter how highly tried, as is Kamm, a minor leaguer has to prove himself in the majors. Kamm is less of an experiment than many of those coming up. Both President Comiskey and Manager Gleason feel sure he will occupy a permanent station at the third corner.

If Kamm proves a whirlwind and enough other material makes good to put the White Sox well up in the first division as a pennant contender, no price is too high to pay for the necessary players. The difference at the turnstiles between first division and tail end positions warrants speculative chances which in any other business would be considered lack of conservatism.

When Eddie Collins came to the White Sox at a sale price of $50,000, bonus of $15,000 for signing, and five year contract for $15,000 per year, a total investment of $140,000, it was considered the height of extravagance. Yet Collins was just what was needed, the nucleus of the world's champions of 1917 and what should have been the world's champions of 1919.

Of Kamm's purchase price of $100,000 part of the amount undoubtedly is represented by other players to be given in exchange. That is customary. Just how much we do not know.

South side fans will await with keen interest the first local appearance of their $100,000 beauty.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

During a great hour of reding, in which eight of the best teams in the country participated, Maurice Brocco, the fast Italian rider, and Oscar Egg, Swiss expert, last night won the six day bicycle race which has been in progress all week at the Coliseum. The team finished one lap ahead of the field.

ALFRED GOULLET.

Second place went to Alfred Goullet and Bobby Walthour, while third place was earned for Horan and Thomas, two laps behind the winning combination. Grenda and Kockler finished in fourth position, but both tried hard to regain the ground lost earlier in the race.

Walthour Starts Jam.

Never before in the history of six day bike racing in Chicago did local bugs enjoy such a wild hour of riding as that which wound up the race.

As early as the first sprint Bobby Walthour, who has been a favorite with the crowd all week, started the jam, but took Egg right with him. The two teams lapped the field when the third sprint was started. From this time until the finish it was one jam after another, and the riders never once got off their wheels.

Starting the final hour with a one lap lead, Egg and Brocco never once started a jam. All they did was to chase, being content to hold their advantage. They rode a steady and consistent race and their riding all week stamped them as the best balanced combination in the race.

In the final hour the riders took part in twenty-five sprints, but near the close they showed the effects of the strenuous grind. During the last sprint Egg, Kockler and Grenda fell on the north turn, but none was seriously injured. Luckily the spill took place on the bell lap when the rest of the field could ride high and around the fallen riders.

Cover 2,461 Miles.

During the week the riders covered more miles than in last November's event. The total mileage of this race was 2,461 miles and 1 lap, while that of the fall grind was 2,400 miles. The extra mileage was due to the excellent riding of the Belgian teams and the German combination, who made the riders hit a fast clip all the way.

The two Belgian teams, however, withdrew from the race before the night jamming began.

The Coliseum was packed to capacity long before the final hour of riding took place. Even standing room was at a premium.

The riders depart today for New York, where they will take in the six day grind which starts two weeks from tonight.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." For today's question Stanley G. Lambert, 241 West 46th street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

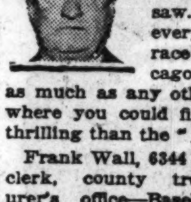
The Question.

Does a six day bicycle race interest you?

Where Asked.

Coliseum.

The Answers.



John Downey, 5043 South Hermitage avenue, manufacturer—Absolutely. I think six day bicycle races one of the most interesting spectacles I ever saw. I have attended every six day bicycle race ever held in Chicago. I like the sport as much as any other. I don't know where you could find anything more thrilling than the "jams."

Frank Wall, 6344 Lakewood avenue, clerk, county treasurer's office—Baseball was my favorite sport, but I have fallen for the game of bicycle racing. It is certainly thrilling when you see these riders going into one "jam" after another.

George Offerman, Sheriak hotel, actor—I gave up a week's engagement to see this six day race. Those "jams" are the most thrilling thing on earth. In fact, I haven't had a wink of sleep since the race started. It will take me a month to get back in shape. O, boy, let's have more of these bike races!

James Campbell, 2755 Fulton street, plastering contractor—I like bicycle racing. It livens up our spirits. We need something like this in large cities. I like it because it is such a beautiful example of the value of physical fitness.

Billy Mysels, 1515 Lunt avenue, furrier—In my estimation, bicycle racing is about the greatest of all sports. It illustrates the vitality and grit of well trained athletes. I thought I was sacrificing by sitting up six consecutive nights, but that is nothing compared with the test of endurance of these athletes.

Southern California Wins in Coast Track Games

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 17.—The University of Southern California eight man relay team won the one mile open relay at Occidental college today, Charles Paddock, world's champion sprinter, negotiating the final 220 yard lap in 22 seconds flat, making the Trojans' time for the event 2:58 2-5. This time was said to break the former world mark of 2:59, set by Illinois A. C., of Chicago. The race was part of the Pacific Coast A. A. U. relay carnival.

Southern California won the meet with 38 points, Occidental being second with 16.

Paddock won the final heat of the open 100 yard dash in :09 4-5.

Chicago Crushes Ohio, 27-17, Illini Upset Purdue, 28 to 26

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Illinois had revenge on Purdue tonight by handing the Boilermakers the same dose Coach Lambert's men gave the Illini at Champaign several weeks ago, defeating Purdue in a hard fought game by a score of 28 to 26. The contest was nip and tuck from beginning to end.

The visitors had better luck in working through Purdue's defense than did the Boilermakers in working the ball down the floor through the opposing team. Guillion made several spectacular shots for Purdue. The visitors led, 16 to 12, at the end of the first half. Purdue tied the score at 23 all in the second half but the visitors finally took the lead again and field it. Lineup:

After another counter from Ely at the opening of the final session, the Purple made its stanchest stand. Stegman dropped in one, Jimmie Paterson followed suit, and Russell Rapp set the crowd on edge by a third spectacular basket. The Wolverines, however, soon found themselves, and Northwestern was thereafter held in tow.

Capt. Ely was the main scorer of the game with seven baskets and five free throws. He missed three attempts at the foul basket, the only ones neglected during the game. Lineups:

WOLVERINES, 27; PURPLE, 13

Michigan swooped down on the Purple at Patten gym last night, displayed superiority in both guarding and basket shooting, and wound up proceedings by storming the Northwestern goal for a decisive 27 to 13 victory. Except for a few minutes at the opening of the second half, when three Purple ringers in a row rattled the Wolverines a bit, Coach Maury Kent's five never menaced the winner's lead. A basket from the middle of the floor by Harry Kipke opened the fireworks. It was followed by three from Capt. Gill Ely and by the end of the period Northwestern was trailing, 16 to 4. The Purple netted one ringer in the first period, which was from Walter Stegman.

CHICAGO, 27; OHIO STATE, 17

Columbus, O., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Pulling away from a 14 to 12 drag at the end of the first half, Chicago walloped Ohio State's basketball team, 27 to 17, for the second time this season. It was the Buckeye's eighth defeat in nine games. Throughout the first half Ohio led by an average margin of 3 points. Barnes and Dickson were guarded off and on by two men. Miner of the Buckeyes registered a perfect tally of six free throws, while Barnes was erratic with his free throws, missing three of five attempts in this half.

At the beginning of the second half Barnes broke loose and sank a basket which tied the score. He followed with two free throws, and Yardley dropped in a basket, making the score 18 to 14. The Buckeyes were cracking on the defensive. They pulled away from Dickson and popped on Barnes. Like a flash Dickson came shooting down the floor and on two tries dropped in two baskets. The rest was easy.

Coach Harold Olsen then flooded the floor with substitutions. Miner strengthened his hold on second place in the Big Ten individual points scoring column, making his total 101 points. Funk of Iowa, which team was idle tonight, is still leading with 102 points. Lineup:

AT the dinner given the Royal Caledonian Curling club by Chicago curlers last Friday night at the University club, Col. Robertson-Aikman, captain of the visiting players, said they had heard many stories on their tour, most of them at the expense of the Scotchmen, so he would tell one on Chicago.

A family was about to move to Chicago, he said, and the little daughter of the house when saying her prayers, said: "God bless mother, God bless father, and goodby, God, we are going to Chicago."

According to Mr. Jacks, three players were recently dismissed from the team by Principal Corey because they kissed a fair admirer in the school. When Principal Corey failed to lift the ban, the three culprits turned in their uniforms and other members of the team refused to toss another ball until they were reinstated.

The victory of the Tri-Color club team was the greatest ever scored in the national event.

SEE BIRTH OF TURF BODY AT DERBY DINNER

BY FRENCH LANE.

Chicagoans will celebrate the possible return of thoroughbred racing with a Derby banquet at the Hotel La Salle tomorrow night. Officials of the Washington Park Breeders' association are to be in charge and several hundred business men, sportsmen, and race enthusiasts will be in attendance.

Out of the banquet is expected to come the organization of a racing association which will operate a track in or near Chicago that will compete with the best in America. Judge Joseph A. Murphy is to arrive tonight from New Orleans with a party of prominent race officials and thoroughbred owners, and will be in charge both at the business meeting of the Washington Park Breeders' association Monday afternoon and at the banquet, which starts at 7 o'clock tomorrow night.

Peabody May Be Elected.

While many of the preliminary details have been worked out by the charter members of the association the actual organization will take place at tomorrow afternoon's session. No slate of officers has been selected, but it was hinted yesterday that the presidency would be offered either to Jack Peabody, son of the late Francis S. Peabody, or to Montefiore Stein, well known Chicago broker and long a follower of thoroughbred racing and breeding.

A special effort has been made to interest various polo leaders throughout the country in the new association, and polo is very likely to take on as much importance at the proposed new plant as racing. The selection of racing dates for the coming season and the making of plans for a national or international polo meet this year will be among the subjects that are to come up for action. The association plans only thirty days of racing each season, with the plant available for other branches of sport and athletics during the remainder of the year.

Out of Town Reservations.

Big parties are coming to the banquet from New Orleans, Louisville, Cincinnati, Lexington, Baltimore, New York, Detroit, Toronto, Memphis, Havana, and St. Louis, according to the list of reservations.

Harry G. Cassady is chairman of the finance committee and Byron W. Everett heads the organization committee, and they will act with Judge Murphy at tomorrow's business session.

The draft of the racing bill, which will soon go to Springfield for action in the state legislature, is complete, but members of the Chicago Washington Park club board of directors will spend some little time in a study of its various clauses before submitting it for the vote.

A preliminary survey show the brightest outlook in a number of years for favorable racing legislation, according to early reports made to members of the new board.

The feature race of the day developed in the 1,100 class, in which Ralph Sidway of Buffalo, N. Y., driving Arab VII., was the victor.

CHICAGO'S BOY SKATERS BEATEN BY MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Chicago's schoolboy skaters went down to defeat by 160 points this afternoon in their dual ice meet here with Milwaukee's youthful ice stars. The events were held at the Arena indoor ice rink. The final total of points scored was Milwaukee, 260; Chicago, 100.

Robert Friberg, skating a brilliant race in the 220 yard dash in the grammar school division, and L. Einert, traveling the 440 yard distance in the senior high school class in 43 seconds, were the only Chicago lads to capture firsts.

Donald Carlson looked like a winner in the 440 yard grammar school event until the final lap, when Carroll Davies, Milwaukee's latest youthful ice star, took the lead at the final turn and set Carlson back for the only second place captured by any Chicago skater.

Two Others Take Thirds.

C. Ewert and M. Larson, in the senior high school division, were the only other two Chicagoans to score points for their side. Ewert annexed a third in the 440 yard race and Larson finished third in the three-quarter mile.

The individual star of the meet was Frederick Oesterrich, who scored 50 points for the Milwaukee team with a first in the three-quarter mile event and second in the quarter mile race. Oesterrich is a junior in the high school division. Walter Peters, a high school senior, shared the day's honors with two seconds, scoring 40 points by himself.

Of the six events on the programm, all of which went four and five heats before the finals, Chicago's entrants figured on the scoring end in but four. The Milwaukee junior high school speed boys left their Windy City invaders out in the cold in both the quarter and three-quarter mile events, giving them the jump on the meet by 120 points in these two races.

No Records Are Set.

The time in all events was fast, but no new records were set. The indoor ice seemed to hamper the Windy City skaters, who have been used to competing outdoors. The inclosure around the rink made it necessary to skate close on the turns and resulted in several spills in the preliminary heats, but in the final events only one race in the senior high school division was marked by a fall.

M. Larson, finishing third in the three-quarter mile senior division, skated a great race and came within a few inches of overtaking the two Milwaukee leaders, Hy Everts and Walter Peters, but lacked the strength to make the necessary spurt on the home stretch after the final turn.

Mayor Dan Hoan was among the spectators and acted as honorary referee of the meet. He complimented the Milwaukee boys for being the first to score a victory over Chicago's classy field of skaters, who until today had won all intercity meets in the last four years. Summaries:

ICE BOAT RACES ARE SPOILED BY HEAVY SQUALLS

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

Building ice boats was easy, but sailing them against a stiff northwest breeze was another thing, boys of seven playgrounds found yesterday, when they tried to compete in a series of races, the first of their kind ever held for Chicago playground boys, at Garfield Park. Afterward, the boys decided long and constant practice was needed before acquiring the iceboating art.

Old Boreas blew up his nicest northwest winter squalls, and the program of four events was boiled down to one event. The only event staged was the lull before the wind race, the Franklin Park entry, captained by Joseph Novem, winning two out of three heats. Edward Kennelly, piloting the Holstein Park craft, won the third heat.

There were spills aplenty and several times the inexperienced skippers crossed sails and skidded across the lagoon in a tangle. Seven craft competed, and the smaller boats had the best of the sailing. The big, heavily canvassed racer from Sheridan Park was wrecked early in the afternoon and forced to withdraw.

The races were planned by Director E. E. Dygert of the west parks.

"The races yesterday were more of an experiment than anything else," Dygert said. "Next year we expect to have a regular regatta, and the West Park board is preparing plans, with the Franklin Park winning boat as a model, to be distributed among the boys early in the year, to guide them in their work."

U. High Cleans Up Midway Meet; Senn Juniors Victors

BY TED ISERMAN.

University high walked away with the laurels in the closing installment of the series of three interscholastic indoor track meets held by the University of Chicago by copping 28 points in the final events of the series yesterday afternoon and last night at Bartlett gym. University scored a grand total of 64 marks, Hyde Park ranking second with 46, after taking fourteen last night, and La Grange third with 38.

In the junior division Senn beat out Oak Park by 3 points, scoring a total of 27 points. Lane was third with 21.

Goodwillie Earns Most Points.

Goodwillie of University High with 31, was high point man of the series, taking prizes for individual performance in the 220 low hurdles and 50 yard dash and being the chief runner on the Midway prep school's winning relay quartet. Sexton, the colored flash of Hyde Park, did not cope with his opposition as successfully as was expected in the senior events yesterday and failed to win a first.

Williams of Hyde Park ran a sparkling race in the half mile run and beat Mullen, La Grange, in 2:13 2-5.

Oak Park had been counted the strongest team in the junior class, but the stellar performances of Blomberg, Greenberg and the Senn relay quartet left the suburbanites three points behind. Oak Park juniors failed to win a single first yesterday.

ILLINI COP MEET AS NOTRE DAME RUNNER SPILLS

Notre Dame, Ind., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Notre Dame and Illinois went into the mile relay tied at 45 points tonights and the Illini won the dual indoor meet, 50 to 45, after the third Notre Dame runner, leading by a foot, stumbled and fell. Illinois took six firsts, Notre Dame and one was tied. Cox of Notre Dame was high point man, winning the half mile and placing second in the mile.

Paul Kennedy, Notre Dame miler, sprung the sensation of the meet by pulling away from Wells at the half mile and winning by twenty yards in 4:29 4-5. Cox followed Kennedy for second place in the mile, and came back in the half mile to nose out Hall at the tape after Hall had passed Barber, who took third place.

The usual Illinois strength in the distance runs was lacking and Notre Dame outscored the visitors, placing two men in the mile, half mile and two mile events. Brady's 22 feet 3¼ inches broad jump and Collins' 12 foot pole vault were other features. Summaries:

MICHIGAN, 65; CHICAGO, 30

Michigan tracksters romped away from University of Chicago, 65 to 30, in a Big Ten conference dual meet at the Midway last night. Five Bartlett gymnasium records were broken and another equaled, Hubbard of Michigan, causing one to fall by navigating the low hurdles in :06, and equaling the high hurdle mark of :06 3-5.

Capt. Egil Krogh, Chicago, lowered the mile run record by 7 1-5 seconds, grinding the distance in 4:25 3-5, and in the half mile Reinke of Michigan bettered the conference indoor record, turning 1:56 4-5, with Krogh a close second. MacEllevan, Michigan, added three-fourths of an inch to the gym high jump record with 6 feet 1 inch, and Martin, Michigan, bettered by one second the record of :52 3-5 in the quarter made by Brickman in the Northwestern meet, Jan. 21.

Chicago's only other win was in the relay, Stitt, Masek, Jones, and MacFarlane taking first in 3:30 2-5. A. Brickman, the Maroon ace hurdler, yielded to Hubbard in both low and high events, and Stitt, counted on for a win in the quarter, was outclassed.

Michigan, counted on as a possible winner of the conference title in track, showed as well in the field events as in the track work, allowing Chicago only three thirds in the field events. Summaries:

NEWS AND NOTES OF THE OUTDOORS.

THE way these game inspectors talk about tossing around millions of fish, dumping so many million here and so many carloads there, is somewhat confusing to the average angler who thinks in terms of six or possibly ten at a time, the bag limit. For instance, Ed St. Clair was telling me the other day about 8,000,000 lake trout being hatched in the state hatchery at Spring Grove, Ill. That listens like considerable fish, doesn't it? In fact, I can hardly grasp the idea of 8,000,000 in one bunch.

Some time, Ed, I wish you would figure out how long a line they would make if you laid all those fish out when they were, say, a year old. Tell me the length of that line and I reckon I will be able to visualize that 8,000,000 trout. They're planning on hatching even more bass this year at the hatchery than they did last season. Ed tells me that 500 more healthy adult bass were moved from Meredosia to Spring Grove last month, which ought to mean a 100 per cent increase in the output of the hatchery during the coming season. There is news which is not hard to take, as it will mean more fry for northern Illinois lakes.

I have been trying to get some estimate of the number of fish that were rescued by the game and fish department of the state from the back waters of the Illinois. You will remember a mention of this work in the column some days ago. But no one will hazard a guess. One game inspector said that even if he did take a shot at estimating the number, it would be such a big figure that nobody would believe and I reckon he's right, at that.

In this connection it is interesting to note that in the Beardstown [Ill.] district the water containing the trapped fish was drained into large ditches and then these ditches were seined, fish captured, loaded onto auto trucks with watertight bodies and hauled to the Illinois river. To give you an idea of how many fish were trapped in the backwater of the Illinois, the state fish car [taking nothing but game fish] would be loaded in less than a couple of hours. Some fish! It would be difficult to find a more worthwhile piece of work than rescuing these finny tribes from shallow backwaters in which they would have eventually died, as many of the ponds and holes dried up. More power to the rescuers, say we!

While on this subject of fish, which brings to mind balmy days with rod and line, "it's June in Miami" and all that sort of dope, I want to expose to you a part of a letter I just received from Gene, my northland guide, who, according to the latest reports, is wintering at about 60 degrees north latitude. He writes: "Just arrived in town [Whitehorse] yesterday with a dog team. We were ten days coming in, as we had to snowshoe most of the way, breaking trail for the dogs. It took us three days from Silver to Bear Creek, so you know what kind of time we were making. [From Silver to Bear Creek is about thirty-four miles.] We have had not a very bad winter so far. The coldest it has been to date [Jan. 16] was 50 below zero. It is about 40 below here this morning."

No, Gene, that's not so bad, not so bad—if you like it. Bnt I guess we won't complain much about our weather—not after reading that 50 below stuff.

NOTES OF THE GOLFERS

BILL JACKSON of Olympia Fields won the Leon Errol trophy at the Henrici indoor golf school, defeating Hugo M. Oppenheimer, former Idlewild champion, 1 up, after a thrilling duel over the thirty-six hole route. Going out in 17—15—32, Jackson had a lead of 2 up at the halfway mark, but Oppenheimer cut this to 1 at the twenty-seventh hole and squared at the twenty-ninth. An ace on the thirty-second hole gave Jackson the match, as the last seven holes were halved. Oppenheimer came home in 31, Jackson taking 34. Frank Craven was referee.

Fred W. Hill of Skokie had low score of 28—31—59 in the qualifying round for the Randolph trophy at the Henrici school. The first three rounds can be played any time this week by mutual agreement.

The snowstorm yesterday drove the golfers to the indoor school in flocks, the Fair, Boston Store, Bob MacDonald's, Hub, and Capper & Capper nets being crowded to capacity.

The famous Lakewood course in New Jersey, the scene of many famous tournaments, has been turned into a public course with a daily fee of $2.50.

Otto Hackbarth of Cincinnati and Alec Cunningham of the Toledo Golf club were visitors at the MacDonald school yesterday.

It will cost the golfing public $2 each to see the finals in the national amateur, open, and women's championships. The United States Golf association has boosted the price in the hope of keeping the attendance down to reasonable proportions.

CHICAGO CURLERS PLAN ICE RINK TO GET STEADY PLAY

Members of the Chicago Curling club are planning to construct an artificial ice rink so that it will be possible for them to play through the winter regularly. This season they have had only about four weeks of play. Estimates of the cost of installing a refrigerating plant have been made. William Currie, the veteran Milwaukee skip, who came here to see the Scotch curlers play, said the Cream City players were planning to buy or lease a piece of ground and put Milwaukee again on the curling map.

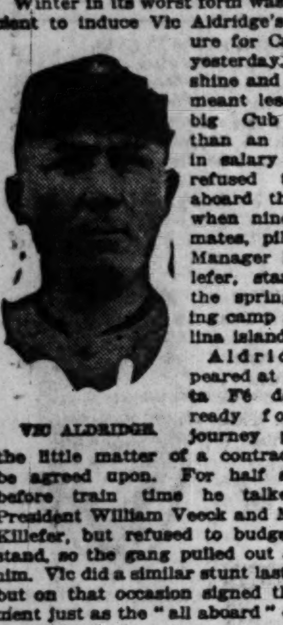
ALDRIDGE SULKS IN COLD AS CUBS LEAVE FOR COAST

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.



VIC ALDRIDGE.

Winter in its worst form wasn't sufficient to induce Vic Aldridge's departure for California yesterday. Sunshine and warmth meant less to the big Cub hurler than an increase in salary and he refused to get aboard the train when nine of his mates, piloted by Manager Bill Killefer, started for the spring training camp at Catalina island.

Aldridge appeared at the Santa Fé depot already for the journey provided the little matter of a contract could be agreed upon. For half an hour before train time he talked with President William Veeck and Manager Killefer, but refused to budge in his stand, so the gang pulled out and left him. Vic did a similar stunt last spring, but on that occasion signed the document just as the "all aboard" call was sounded.

Odds Say He'll Weaken.

Just how the Aldridge tangle will work out President Veeck doesn't know. The club offered him a flattering contract and it is doubtful whether this will be increased. Aldridge hinted that he would go back to his grocery store at Indian Springs, Ind., but it is a good bet that inside a few days he'll come back and signify his willingness to sign up and go west to join his mates.

Although Aldridge maintained a disturbing attitude, the day was not entirely spoiled. President Veeck received word from Nick Domovitch, the star Los Angeles southpaw, that he had signed his contract and would await the arrival of the first squad in Los Angeles Tuesday morning. The day previous Nick had been reported a holdout, but evidently the spring ball fever got him and he entered the fold.

One Other Holdout.

There is one other holdout on the club, but President Veeck prefers to withhold the identity of the athlete because the difference probably will be wiped out in short order.

Of the men who beat it out of here yesterday only one is a total stranger to Chicago fans. He is Charles Stauffer, a bulky right hander purchased from the Bridgeport, Conn., club last fall. Other fellows in the party were: Pitchers Ernie Osborne, Tony Kaufmann, George Stueland and Howard Keen; Catchers Bob O'Farrell and Charles Hartnett; Infielder Friberg, Coach Dugey, Trainer Lotshaw, and Manager Killefer.

Before departing Killefer said he had instructed Shortstop Bernie Viveiros, who lives at Oakland, Cal., to report at Catalina Tuesday. The youngster was called to join the first squad because of the absence of Hollocher, who is ill. With Viveiros on hand Killefer will have a complete infield to work with the pitchers and catchers.

YOUNGEST OF CLUBS

Chicago's Cubs for 1923 may not win a championship, but they will carry off one honor. They will be the youngest major league club in the history of the sport.

No team in baseball history, not excepting that of Connie Mack the first two years of his effort to rehabilitate the Athletics, has been as young as Killefer's Cubs.

The average age of the players on the roster now is 23 29-31 years, which includes Grover Cleveland Alexander, who, at 36, is the grandpaw of the team. The average age of the pitchers is 24 years 4 months, the average age of the catchers 23 years 8 months, that of the infielders 24 years 2 months 20 days, and that of the outfielders 22 years 9 months 2 days.

15 Born Since 1900.

Fifteen of the players on the list have been born since 1900 and the kid of the bunch is Martin Dumovich, who is 19. There are four of them who cannot sign their own contracts, being under 21—Fitzgerald, Weiss, Martin, and Viveiros—while Nick Dumovich was 21 on Jan. 2 and several others are just ready to cast their first vote.

The decrepit, doddering veterans of the team are Ray Grimes, the first baseman, Aldrich, pitcher, both of whom are 29, which almost constitutes senility with the Cubs, and Kelleher and Miller, who are 28.

Building "Ten Year Team."

The experiment of Bill Veeck, president of the Cubs, and Bill Killefer, the manager, is one of tremendous interest in baseball, for the reason that it is really the first time (with the exception of Mack's attempts) that any one has tried to build a ball club from young, green material without calling upon trained and experienced talent to steady the youngsters.

Veeck and Killefer are building a "ten year team"—and of the material at hand, if it steadies and comes through as it promised to do last year, the team will last ten years with comparatively few changes or additions.

PARIS, Feb. 17.—[By Associated Press].—Battling Siki remains light heavyweight champion of the world by decision of the International Boxing union today. Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Iowa's swimming team defeated Illinois, 36 to 32, tonight. The final event was necessary to give Iowa the victory, the score being 30 to 29 in the Hawks' favor until they took that event, the 100 yard dash.

PARIS SURPRISED THAT MOLLA MAY NOT PLAY THERE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 17.—The husband of Molla Bjurstedt Mallory caused something of a sensation tonight by announcing that Molla probably would not play in the Riviera tennis matches with Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen.

"She did not come to France with the idea of playing," declared Franklin Mallory. "She has never formally entered herself in the Riviera matches. She only came here because she had a severe attack of bronchitis and her playing will depend on her recovery. She has improved very little since leaving. She will have to feel much better in order to play."

Dodges Interviewers to Shop.

Mr. Mallory carefully sheltered his wife from all interviewers today, following arrival at Cherbourg on the Olympic last night.

"We are going to the Riviera Monday," Mr. Mallory said, "and she will decide in a few days whether she will play. At any rate she will certainly wish to see Mlle. Lenglen play."

The Mallorys spent the day seeing Paris and dodging reporters.

Purple Students Criticized for "Heckling" Officials

Heckling at referees' decisions at Northwestern university, which turned a recent wrestling meet into a near riot and resulted in tense moments at two basketball games, was yesterday made the object of sharp criticism by Athletic Director Dana M. Evans and Cage Captain Harold McKenzie, both of whom issued statements condemning students for the practice and pointing out that the officials alone run athletic contests. The practice has developed into a habit this winter.

Disagreeing with an official was termed "dangerous" and "exceedingly unsportsmanlike." Director Evans and McKenzie made it clear that they were standing by the referees, and that they were highly disgusted with the vociferous comments, such as "Throw him out," "He's rotten," "He's an egg," and others which emanate from the student section of the bleachers.

Director Evans Disapproves.

"The crowds cannot see all the fouls that are made," states Director Evans. "They are acting wrongly by disapproving of a decision when they have no way of knowing what is going on."

In the Iowa-Northwestern game the practice was evident and caused Referee Berger to foul the Purple team several times. It was with difficulty that the game progressed. Referring to this incident, Director Evans says: "The referees for conference games are selected by conference authorities and they are always men of experience and ability in officiating. The one in question, Mr. Berger, is a personal friend of mine, and I can attest to his fairness in making decisions."

McKenzie Speaks for Players.

Capt. McKenzie spoke for the players. His statement had a tinge of humor, as it laid stress on the need for every score obtainable. "The members of the team cannot afford to have their attention diverted from the game by the booing and catcalls directed at the referee," says McKenzie. "Committing fouls cannot always be avoided, but to have a foul called against the team when no player is responsible is most disconcerting."

The first notable appearance of the heckling habit at Northwestern was at the Purple-Illinois wrestling meet when for a time it looked as if the students would take things in hand.

BOBBY WAUGH HAD EVERYTHING BUT A MANAGER

This is the ninth article on great boxers who failed to win the title in their divisions and the reasons why.

BY SIDNEY SUTHERLAND.

In analyzing Bobby Waugh's career it is not difficult to decide why he never wore the lightweight crown. One has only to call the roll of championship requirements to discover the absent quality. But it is not so easy to explain why one so generously gifted otherwise did not overcome what was, on its face, only a minor deficiency.

In the ring game "post mortems" are a bore and "alibis" give birth to merriment. Yet one is tempted to lament that so extraordinary a fighting machine as this lad never enjoyed the rewards and honors that go with the title.

To recall Waugh in action and then to reflect on how slight a hurdle kept him from the heights is to experience the shock one feels at seeing a rare vase lying shattered on the ground, or on discovering that the owner of a beautiful profile has the pockmarked cheeks that vaccination would have saved her from.

A Marvel of the Ring.

Of none of the boxers heretofore discussed in these articles could it be so truly said that he "had everything." Nature never constructed a more perfect specimen of the first class pugilist. A brain that operated with the speed of light; a punch that was a baby Big Bertha; a superinstinct for glove fighting; skill and footwork that were like a cat's; a left hand that has seldom been equalled; natural weight; correct form, and the requisite vicious disposition to win by a knockout if possible—all these and many other links in the chain of greatness were Waugh's.

Born in Ft. Worth, Tex., in November, 1893, Bobby's record begins in 1910, when he knocked out eighteen men and decisioned his only other opponent. In 1911 he stopped fourteen men, including that modern Joe Grimm, Stanley Yoakum; won two, and drew six times, twice with Charlie White. Although only 18, he was fighting many fifteen and twenty round battles to a decision. No hothouse plant for friendly referees to nurture in nauseating, short, no decision bouts was this boy!

Five knockouts, two wins and two draws in 1912. In 1913, still meeting some of the best lightweights of the day, Waugh won seven, drew two and scored his first defeat. He was 21 when he cantered home a winner in seven bouts, drawing in two and registering four no decision meetings.

Whipped Two Ex-Champions.

Bobby's "big" year was 1915. Ad Wolgast, as dirty as ever, fouled him after taking a terrific lacing for six rounds; Battling Nelson, another former champion, lost a twenty round decision to him; while Bennie Cordova, Stanley Yoakum, Len Rowlands and eleven other crack boxers were easily defeated.

In 1916, 1917 and 1918 the Texan continued his spectacular career. Often he won, sometimes he lost, frequently he whipped his conquerors in return bouts, some of his contests were no decision; but in none of his battles did he fail to show his superlative class, or cause his admirers to amend their prediction that he was destined to win the title.

Then, one morning, Waugh and his friends awoke to the stunning realization that he was an "old man," so far as fighting was concerned; that the crown had been passed from Wolgast to Ritchie to Welsh to Leonard while he was fiddling along in Dixie rings; and that he was never fated, at his age, to take that crown from so remarkable a king as the New York Hebrew.

Reason for His Failure.

Chagrined by this distressing discovery, they set about to learn what had happened to keep this master from his deserts. Some attributed it to one thing, some to another. The reason is this:

Gifted by birth, inclination and development with every needful qualification, Bobby Waugh was kept back by bonehead management. In his "big years," when, beyond all doubt, he could have whipped either Welsh or Leonard, he never had a manager who had brains enough to get them into a ring with him. Fighting was his forte; he had to leave the rest of it to his managers, and they failed him grievously in so slight a thing as meeting a champion's terms, agreeing to anything to get the chance to meet him—and win.

Pathetic Story Is Told.

There is a tragic feature in this connection which may throw some light on Bobby's failure. The story runs that Jim Corbett, on a theatrical tour in 1911, saw the newscomer stop Tommy Dixon, hailed as the next featherweight king, in fourteen rounds.

"There is a real champion!" Corbett is said to have exclaimed. "I'd like to handle him. Don't let any two-by-four manager ruin him; when I finish this tour I'll come back and steer him to the title."

Bobby, it is said, waiting for the oracle of fistiana, the great Corbett, to come back to him, never thereafter seriously attached himself to any manager. But Corbett never came back, and the Texan's career was blasted.

Today Waugh is boxing around the same old "coffee and——" circuit, only his wise old brain getting him by with younger and sturdier lads. In a financial way he has nothing to show for all his great battles, thousands of dollars having gone to the upkeep of his family. Reports from the southwest say that that family resembles this republic—noisy with bushwah cheers for the departing hero, but niggardly in tangible gratitude when he comes home from the wars.

(The next article will tell the story of Sam Langford.)

Midwest League Cage Meet Plans Completed

Officials of the Midwest Basketball league announce that full arrangements have been completed for their first annual championship tournament on March 29-31, at Broadway armory. At the next meeting tomorrow night at 180 West Washington street, entry blanks will be ready for distribution. The big meet is for teams averaging 145 pounds and over. These will be divided into classes A and B, the former including teams fairly well advanced in the game, and class B and C, junior teams.

SUDDEN END PUTS TREMAINE-CURTIN BOUT UNDER CLOUD

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Insistent demands for an investigation of the sudden termination of the Johnny Curtin-Carl Tremaine fight at Madison Square Garden last night were heard among ring fans today. So few there were, even among the Jersey man's supporters, who professed to have seen a foul blow delivered that there was outspoken opinion that the Cleveland bantam had so hurt Curtin with the last blow landed—a left hook to the stomach—that the latter counted it a good place to stay down and raise a cry of foul.

Heavy betting on the outcome of the fight included much wagering that the bout would not go beyond six rounds, although scheduled for twelve. This gave the whole affair a decidedly unpleasing aspect.

ZBYSZKO WORRIED OVER EUSTACE BOUT

Jack Herman, manager of Stanislaus Zbyszko, who will meet Alan Eustace in a double windup mat bill at the Coliseum Tuesday night, is wearing a worried look these days. He realizes that he may lose a "meal ticket" if the giant Kansas downs his man, and during the training hour each day he is glued to the ringside watching the former champion during his workouts.

Herman remembers the two victories Eustace has over Zbyszko and doesn't want it to happen again. In addition to the two wins, Eustace has a draw with the veteran Pole to his credit. Stanislaus is leaving no stone unturned to get himself in the best possible shape. This is something he has not done for any match in recent years.

George Calza, the Italian titleholder, who meets Dick Daviscourt in the other half of the double windup, is a magnet who should pack the Coliseum with mat enthusiasts of every nationality. This youthful marvel's work has aroused a lot of interest, and his actions against the Californian will be watched closely.

If Calza beats Daviscourt, he says he will be ready to take chances in finish matches with all in his class. The westerner recently flattened Champion Ed Lewis for one of three falls and if the Italian can beat him, he should have no fear of any of them.

It was rumored yesterday that the promoters will make an effort to secure Lewis for a date here and it is more than probable that one of the winners of Tuesday's double windup will cop the engagement, if Lewis can be induced to come here.

CHICAGO FIREOS AND ST. LOUIS IN HANDBALL PLAY

Plans have been completed for a handball tournament which will practically determine the national fire department championship. The tourney will be staged on courts at St. Louis and at engine house No. 32 here. The first games start here Friday. Walter Kamman, John Stratton and R. Ward will be the trio representing the Mound City fire fighters, while the local hopes are being carried by James Biggy of engine 107 and John Moran of hook and ladder 9.

The Chicagoans will play at St. Louis March 2 and 3.

WILLARD OFF ON STAGE TOUR

New York, Feb. 17.—Jess Willard, former world's heavyweight champion, left tonight for Detroit, where he will open a twenty day theatrical tour. His itinerary includes Detroit, Grand Rapids, Cleveland, St. Paul, Omaha, Kansas City, Wichita, Tulsa, Memphis, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, and Baltimore.

Billy Edwards Defeats Glover in Mat Match

Topeka, Kas., Feb. 17.—Billy Edwards of Nebraska City won in broken falls from Ernst Glover in a wrestling match here last night. Edwards took the first fall in forty-five minutes with a body scissors and hammerlock and the third in eight minutes with a leg scissors.

ATHLETES MUST BE ADRENAL OR PITUITARY TYPE

Science by Dr. W. A. Evans; Words by Hugh Fullerton.

ARTICLE III.

Every athlete engaged in competitive sports or games is either of the adrenal or the pituitary type, the pituitary because of size and bulk which mistakenly lead to the conclusion that size constitutes ability. The purely pituitary type never is a good fighter nor a great athlete. Large men, however, are not all pituitary and only the super-pituitary type "giants" resulting from abnormal or diseased pituitary glands is considered.

The adrenal type furnish the fighters, the aggressive, determined, and seemingly tireless boxers, football players and others. These have normal pituitary development, combined with normal thyroid activity and an excess of adrenal secretions.

Athletic coaches, trainers of boxers, football teams and wrestlers might save much time and get better teams by consulting with the biological experts in selecting candidates. A diseased or abnormal development of the pituitary gland can be discovered by the X-ray and such are useless in combat. Football coaches could avoid wasting time on the class unscientifically called "big slobs," the huge, nonaggressive, bulky fellows who are the despair of coaches because of their lack of aggressiveness, the pituitary type without adrenal development.

Detected in Two Types.

This pituitary abnormality [often disease] can be detected in two types. If the abnormality comes in infancy the result is giantitis—the bones long, large, heavy. If combined with superthyroid development also accompanied by fat. If, however, the diseased condition starts later in life, after the bones have hardened and no longer can grow in length, the result is squat, heavy, broad type with huge hands, feet, heavy skull and powerful bones.

Wrestlers, almost all, are of the pituitary type—powerful, slow, less sensitive to pain than normal beings. Some have the adrenal development also. Frank Gotch, for instance, was normal pituitarily, but with super-adrenal development. He had both the strength and the fighting instinct; therefore, he was able to defeat those of the pituitary type who overmatched him in size and weight.

Among the fighters, almost all are adrenal in type until we reach the heavyweights, where for generations size and sheer strength have been sought.

Willard and Fulton Not Fighters.

Almost any expert biologist who has made a study of glands could have informed Jess Willard and Fred Fulton that they were not fighters, because both are of the distinctly pituitary type—easy going, lacking in aggressiveness, without desire to hurt an opponent.

One of the most famous big men in football history was of that type. His disease developed after he started playing football. Although of huge size, he became entirely useless, excepting for bulk, as a linesman. His teammates diagnosed the case wrongly; they said he had been helping ladies across the street too long. As a matter of fact, his pituitary gland had become abscessed and overcrowded the small space assigned it inside the skull.

Jim Jeffries was of the normal adrenal type, sluggishly adrenal, but abnormal as to his pituitary. The abnormality evidently started after childhood, resulting in breadth, power, and manifested itself in lack of aggressiveness and increasing slowness, lack of coordination between eye, brain, and muscles which marks all such cases.

Battling Nelson, "Kid" Lavigne, Stanley Ketchel, and Dempsey are perhaps the best examples the prize ring has produced of the superadrenal type. Unfortunately the adrenal gland cannot be analyzed by the X-ray, but must be studied through reactions, but in these cases the action of excitement, or injury, of the self-defense instinct has been exactly the same as in other animals of fighting nature.

Addison's Disease Frequent.

This type usually breaks early, is subject to nervous smashups and other symptoms which, according to the scientists, follow over excitement of the adrenal glands. Also the rare disease known as Addison's disease is found to be more frequent among athletes of the combative type, subject to continual and long sustained overexcitement of the adrenals than among others.

In the next article K. O. Adrenal vs. Kid Pituitary for the heavyweight championship of the world.

FIRPO ARRIVES IN NEW YORK NEXT WEDNESDAY

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Luis Angel Firpo, the giant Argentine fighter, will arrive here next Wednesday from South America to prepare himself for his fifteen round bout with Bill Brennan at the Garden on March 12.

The bout surely affords Firpo a splendid chance to set himself close to a battle with Dempsey. If by any chance he should slip over the old crusher on the veteran he will surely command more respect in any claims that he might make for a championship encounter.

Firpo is a big fellow, with not much knowledge of scientific boxing. However, he's an awful hitter, which of course is the best asset for any fighter. It might be that he will furnish the crowd with a large surprise by upsetting Brennan.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

BY A. R. METCALFE

RESCUE BIDS UNIFORMLY ADVANTAGEOUS.

RESCUE bids are so uniformly advantageous that it is amazing that any players of experience should fail to use them. There is always risk of loss in a no trump declaration when the hand held by dummy is below the average, but that risk is decupled when the cards in dummy are almost worthless.

Even with the magnificent no trump holding of east in the deal which follows that declaration could only have yielded one odd, while the result of the take out is shown below.

West secured a small slam.

The declarer had a problem confronting him from the start. It was quite likely that the club led by north was from a short suit, and the answer to that usually is a trump lead, but in such a case west could only hope for five trump tricks, three clubs and one heart.

By increasing the number of trump tricks, however, it was possible to make game even though he secured only a couple of tricks in the club suit. North could have saved one trick by leading a trump after winning with the ace of hearts, but at that time such a lead appeared to be the giving up of a sure trick in the trump suit.

The declarer handled the situation with skill throughout, being careful that the third lead of clubs came from his own hand, so that if north trumped the trick it would not be necessary to play the high club from the east hand. Quick thinking is taught in the following deal:

West secured ten tricks.

West won the game and contract at trick one by throwing his king of spades on the adversaries' ace. Had he played the nine of spades north would have followed with another of that suit at trick two and south would have trumped and led clubs.

This would have given north and south eventually one spade, one heart, two clubs, and one diamond. West knew that north must hold at least six spades, and when dummy put down the jack it was almost certain that north must have seven. The chief object of the play by west was to prevent south from leading through the once guarded king of clubs. North did not dare lead either the queen of spades or a small spade at trick two and naturally switched to clubs.

Manner is of the first importance in a play of this kind. If, after south had played to the first trick, west had hesitated a moment and then put on the king of spades the situation would have been betrayed to north.

It is a good plan for the declarer to rearrange the cards in dummy before playing to the first trick in order to give himself a little time to study the general situation.

"HEART-THROBS"
—by an ex-President

EXACTLY thirty years ago I founded the firm of Capper & Capper in a little shop no larger than our present office. It has since grown to be the largest concern in America devoted wholly to fine "Men's wear."

To me it has been a "Romance"; business can be that to a man who loves it, and I have certainly loved this business.

There comes a time when older men should make way for the younger, more ambitious workers; when a man gets comfortable in life, he is apt to extend himself less, and is prone to rest secure on "laurels already won."

Capper & Capper should live for a thousand years, and will, if each succeeding head makes way for a younger man at the right time. With these thoughts in mind, we have always had our workers who were worthy, acquire stock in the concern.

My brother George—20 years my junior—succeeds me as President. I shall be "Chairman of the Board."

George H. Capper is a rare type; his equal I have yet to meet in our line of trade—full to the overflowing in the "Spirit of Service"—almost too much so, if that can be; understanding as not all men understand, that great successes are made where the thought of money making is forgotten—at least largely so. That, if you give all of yourself—all you have in you—to the service of your patrons—they will shower you with their bounty, and material reward comes as a matter of course.

The business of Capper & Capper has always been the marvel of our competitors—if I may call them so—unable to understand why the public flock to our stores. It is wonderfully inspiring, but wholly explainable. They have abiding faith in the institution, and as long as we serve, just so long will the monument stand.

I look back on the thirty years with mingled emotions—pride in our work—the sweet thrills of victory, but that which is uppermost is—gratitude.

MOTORDOM

Winter's Worst Offering Fails to Stop Motors

Improved Engines and Road Maintenance Meet Blizzard.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

MIDWINTER in concentrated form failed last week to stop or even seriously delay the great system of motor transportation which has grown to be Chicago s most important commercial factor. Official traffic checks made on the chief arteries leading into the city showed that freight tonnage was maintained at almost normal weight through the worst veloped their maintenance service to ment of passenger cars, although restricted by cold weather discomfort, was greater than during any like period in highway history.

Improvements in automobile engines, designed to overcome cold weather ignition and carburetor troubles, and the systematic organization of both state and county highway forces in winter maintenance and snow removal, made the automobile showing possible, according to traffic experts.

They noted, too, that closed cars carried the bulk of passenger traffic, outnumbering open models on the road nearly ten to one, and illustrating the increased motoring utility promised by 923 coach designers.

Several of the main trunk lines entering Chicago carried an average of 00 trucks daily during the week. Peak loads on these roads during the building season reach 1,025 trucks daily and a total of 2,000 vehicles of all kinds in each rush hour. The usual ratio in the movement of passenger vehicles and trucks is five passenger cars to one truck. Last week the average was reduced until it approximated two to one.

Highway authorities believe that it is fully as essential to keep the traffic moving through the winter months as it is in warm weather, and have developed their mainteance service to that end in Cook county. The state highway department is responsible for snow removal and maintenance work on all paved roads completed under the bond issue and state aid while the county organization has charge of the work on the unpaved sections of the system and on county connections.

Seven working crews are assigned to Cook county by the state highway department. Each is equipped with a blade grader attached to a powerful truck and with other equipment designed for the rapid clearing of the roads. The county has one crew on call at all times and can throw scores of men and teams into the field on emergency.

Although neither state nor county road guards have been called on for heavy duty, thanks to unusually mild weather and the light falls of snow this season, it was found last week that their efficiency had not been undermined by lack of action. Officials of both departments declared that motor traffic in Cook county can be kept moving under any weather conditions that may arise.

His Own Coue.

Henry Challand of Aurora has been cured of an attack of influenza through the use of his automobile, according to his own report. Challand, who celebrated his 100th birthday recently, said regarding his cure:

"They told me it was my last sickness, so I had them get out the automobile and I began a round of visits. In no time I was all right. That's the best remedy for sickness I know of, getting away from yourself. Worry is a fertile soil for bad health crops."

In Germany Red Cross first aid stations are making their appearance on the corners of Berlin streets where traffic is heavy. The stands contain bandages, lint and other hospital necessities and are fully equipped for any emergency.

Tourists Escape State Inspection Through New Law

THE doors of California are to be syung wide and a welcome extended to every tourist who wishes to bask in its sunshine, according to Will H. Marsh, director of the state division of motor vehicles.

The system of compelling those who enter California's borders to submit their cars to officers of the department for immediate engine inspection is to be abandoned. Residents of other states entering California will be asked to register their machines and will be granted an emblem from the state showing such registration upon proper identification.

Until they desire to register their machine under the laws of California or transfer it to a resident of the state, engine inspection will not be demanded. For this reason the head of the department sounds a warning to all dealers and all contemplated purchasers of machines registered from other states that no such purchase should be made unless the machine has been properly registered. To do so is taking a long chance which may result in loss to the buyer.

The tourist privilege is granted in order that the visitor may travel unmolested by traffic officers, but such registration in no wise guarantees the title of the car in its operator.

Collects Gas Tax.

December collections from the 2 cents a gallon tax on gasoline in South Carolina amounted to $75,828.90, according to figures announced by the tax commission. The amount collected for the preceding nine months commencing with March was announced to be $691,203.75, making $767,032.65, the total amount in 1922 for the ten months in which the tax was imposed.

One-half of this amount was credited to the general fund, to be used for defraying the ordinary expenses of the state government, and the remaining half was distributed to the counties to be used exclusively for the construction or maintenance of roads.

STEPHENS SEDAN, 5-PASSENGERS, $1895

STEPHENS DISTINGUISHED ITSELF AT THE SHOW

In spite of the fact that 1922 was the largest automobile year, twice the number of Stephens motor cars were purchased in Chicago during the first half of February, than in the entire month a year ago. This is significant evidence that the Stephens has set the pace of 1923 motor car values.

Moreover, other exhibitors at the Auto Show studied every detail of Stephens construction with unusual concern and admitted that Stephens specifications had never been matched at Stephens prices. A prominent engineer declared that, regardless of price, only one chassis exhibited at the Coliseum could compare with the Stephens.

Every detail of mechanical and body design has contributed to the wide-spread approbation which has been accorded Stephens motor cars for 1923. Most important among these are the Stephens motor, with its intake manifold inside the cylinder head, Delco ignition, Timken axles, Gemmer steering gears, Mather springs, Fedders radiators, beauty and balance of coach-work, luxurious appointments and completeness of equipment.

The Stephens five-passenger Sedan at $1895, illustrated above, and any of the other Stephens models listed below are unprecedented values in motor car history. An inspection will convince you.

PARTIAL PAYMENT PLAN

This is a voting stock. Is preferred as to dividends. Is cumulative as to dividends—now paying $1.00 per share quarterly, which is more than 7% on the price of $55.00 per share. This stock is traded in on both the New York and Chicago Stock Exchanges. Is good collateral for a bank loan.

PIGGLY WIGGLY Stores now operating in 41 States and Canada—1,241 stores now the total—located in 388 towns and cities.

$65,000,000 00 were the sales of PIGGLY WIGGLY Stores for 1922—expect to exceed $100,000,000.00 for the present year.

First PIGGLY WIGGLY Store established at Memphis, Tenn., six years ago, 48 now operating at that city—only National Chain of Grocery Stores in United States operating both East and West of Mississippi River—from Pacific Coast to the Atlantic—from the Great Lakes to Key West, Fla.

PIGGLY WIGGLY STORES, Inc., owns and operates 659 stores located in the towns and cities marked (*).

$31,000,000.00 were the sales of this Company for 1922 — expected to exceed $60,000,000.00 for present year.

This Company also operates Variety Stores in Memphis, Tenn., Chicago, Ill., Norfolk, Va., Nashville, Tenn., Chattanooga, Tenn., and Terre Haute, Ind.—these stores are extremely profitable and many more will be established during the present year.

CLARENCE SAUNDERS is the originator and founder of PIGGLY WIGGLY and is President of PIGGLY WIGGLY STORES, Inc.

It is desired by Mr. Saunders that PIGGLY WIGGLY customers and friends be the real owners of PIGGLY WIGGLY Stores, and for that purpose has acquired in the open market a block of Class "A" Common Stock, which is now offered to them at a price materially under market quotations at this time.

Mr. Saunders has determined to keep this stock out of the hands of speculators and have it held by the real investor who will enjoy the profits of the PIGGLY WIGGLY STORES.

It is desired that wide distribution be had on this block of stock, and that this may be accomplished it is offered at this low price. Arrangements have been perfected so that this stock may be paid for on a partial payment plan, upon the basis of $25.00 cash per share, and 3 notes at the rate of $10.00 per share due June 1st, Sept. 1st and Dec. 1st.

This is to be a quick proposition, subject to withdrawal without prior notice, as soon as this particular stock is sold.

PIGGLY WIGGLY is the greatest merchandising plan ever used in the distribution of Food Products. The experimental stage has been passed—it is now a sound investment and the prospective earnings of PIGGLY WIGGLY STORES, Inc., certainly make it appear that big dividends will be paid in the future on this stock.

No organization has ever in the history of the country had such a remarkable growth as PIGGLY WIGGLY—what has taken twenty to thirty years for other businesses to achieve has been done by CLARENCE SAUNDERS and PIGGLY WIGGLY in six years. And in six years this organization will exceed in magnitude and profit any other merchandising company in America.

How many times have we heard somebody say, "If I had been one of those lucky fellows who had some of the original stock of 'So and So,' how different would my position be now in the world."

This is not new stock, but on the contrary is the original stock of this Company and not the kind that is usually handed out to the public after somebody else has got the big profit.

To get on the ground floor of any big proposition is the opportunity that comes to few, and then only once in a lifetime—this is that opportunity for you.

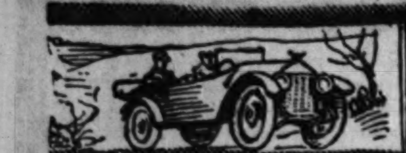
PIGGLY WIGGLY INVESTMENT CO.



MOTORDOM

Nation Invests $45,000,000 for Through Highway

Lincoln Way Report Shows Traffic Increase of 100,000 Per Cent.

IF the five or six intrepid souls who undertook to cross the American continent in a motor car in 1913 join the caravan of 15,000 or 20,000 cars which in 1923 will flow east and west along the Lincoln highway between the two coasts, they will appreciate a marvelous difference.

Practically the whole history of American road building on anything like a national scale is held within the last decade. When the Lincoln highway was nothing more than an idea—a hope—in 1913, many ridiculed the visionaries who foresaw the expenditure of so vast a sum as $20,000,000 on the road between New York and San Francisco within a period of twenty years.

In the nine years ending with the advent of 1923, over $47,000,000 had been expended on the improvement—enough at an average of $20,000 a mile to construct 2,350 miles of the route, or more than two-thirds of it. More than two-thirds of it has been built, if by "built" is meant the completion and opening of a road satisfactory for the traffic of the present.

Each year since the inauguration of the work of the Lincoln Highway association has seen the construction of between 7 and 10 per cent of the total distance and has witnessed the extension of adequate maintenance over a longer and longer mileage of the completed work. The eleven states traversed built 235 miles of the route with the aid of the federal government in 1922, this work costing in total $4,678,041.71, or an average of practically $20,000 a mile. Maintenance during 1922 cost $1,368,126.39, so that the total amount expended on the betterment of the route last year was $6,046,166, an amount slightly less than the average of the last five years.

When will the Lincoln highway be completed? The answer, according to the association, is—"never." Increasing traffic necessarily means continued reconstruction to more adequate specifications. Traffic volume has doubled nearly every year since the dedication of the route.

At the recent annual meeting of the board of directors it was estimated that by the end of this year, taking into consideration the existing contracts, over $50,000,000 will have been expended on the improvement of the highway. It was further estimated that at least $20,000,000 more, an amount equivalent to that it was assumed ten years ago would complete the route, will necessarily be invested in additional improvement to open up a road satisfactory for the traffic across each state.

From these estimates it is evident that bringing the road to a satisfactory status of improvement will require a total expenditure of some $70,000,000. At the rate of five or six million dollars a year the first completion of the route can be foreseen about the end of 1925. The route will be in splendid condition for the greater part of the distance long before that. It would be open in its entirety without the possibility of any real difficulties for the heavy traffic of 1923 were it not for the refusal of one state to complete a short and important link. As it is, the coming season's traffic will have to take its chances as usual on the short Utah desert stretch.

Mutual Benefits.

Many other lines of business have profited from the activities of the automotive industry, which is now represented by a salesroom, garage or filling station in every town and at almost every cross road in the country, it is pointed out by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

The automobile industry uses 4 per cent of the iron and steel, 9 per cent of the finished roll steel, 22 per cent of the aluminum, 12 per cent of the copper, 17 per cent of the tin, 2 per cent of the lead, 83 per cent of the upholstery leather, 40 per cent of the plate glass, 80 per cent of the rubber imported, and about 80 per cent of all the gasoline.

Special Units.

Of the 305 leading cars and trucks, only 101 make their own engines, 11 their own carburetors, 2 their own ignition, 70 their own clutches, 97 their own transmissions, and 83 their own rear axles. All the rest have these parts made for them by unit manufacturers.

WORK-BENCH WISDOM

BY ERWIN GREER.

AMONG the hardest working units in the mechanism of the modern motor car is the rear axle. The function of this part is not only to help carry the weight of the car, but also to transmit the power. Whenever the car is in motion the rear axle is the scene of intense mechanical activity. It will be obvious that this part of the mechanism should have the most scrupulous care.

Rear axles fall readily into two distinct classifications—dead axles and live ones. It is live axles which are used on all modern passenger cars. The term "live" simply means that the axle turns. Dead axles do not turn, and they are only used on vehicles having double chain drive.

The floating axle is not called upon to bear any of the weight of the car; it simply transmits the power to the wheels and takes a little of the torsional or twisting stresses. The floating axle has its bearings outside the tube, so that the wheels really rest on the tubes and not on the shafts. In this type of axle the shafts may be removed without disturbing any other parts.

When it comes to the types of gears used in transmitting power, it is found that the passenger cars of today employ three—straight bevel, spiral bevel, and two speed bevel. During the last few years the spiral bevel has come rapidly to the front until today it is the most popular type. There are obvious reasons for this, its quiet running and general efficiency being the leading ones.

The car owner who has experienced that most tenacious trouble commonly known as "rear axle trouble" will not need the advice to do everything possible to guard against it. Many serious troubles may develop in this unit, and only the utmost care will obviate some of them. Axle shafts sometimes break or are twisted out of their proper shape. Bearings are sometimes crushed. The differential gears are peculiarly liable to chipping, which may very probably result in the ruin of the whole unit.

As is generally the case, the principal item in the proper care of the rear axle is lubrication. Never make the mistake of using grease in this part, as used to be the rule. Oil is the proper lubricant for the rear axle. Once or twice during the running season the rear axle should be drained, and, after being flushed out with kerosene, fresh oil should be put in. Note also that while the part should be kept well filled with oil all the time, an excess is not desirable, for the extra quantity is likely to work down and into the braking system. Sometimes it is necessary to place felt washers in the axle tubes to prevent the excess oil working out in this way. Many modern cars have holes drilled in the end of the tubes to allow excess oil to drain out, and it is possible to drill holes in this way when they have not been provided by the car maker.

Find Violation of Through Street Law Is Common Danger

THE Chicago Motor club has made a check of the cars crossing the new "through streets" and finds that about 80 per cent of the drivers pay no attention to the stop signs.

The streets where motorist must stop before crossing are:

North La Salle street, from West Ohio street to North Clark street into Lincoln park.

Addison street, from Sheridan road west to its terminus.

North Ashland avenue, from Irving Park boulevard north to its terminus.

Greenview avenue, from Irving Park boulevard south to Clybourn avenue.

East and West Ohio street, from Lake Shore drive west to Orleans street.

South Park avenue, from East 22d street to East 33d street, and from East 51st street to East 91st place.

East 57th street, from Cottage Grove avenue to Stony Island avenue.

Woodlawn avenue, from East 44th place to East 67th street.

Jeffery avenue, from East 67th street to South Chicago avenue.

North Central Park avenue, from Franklin boulevard to West Grand avenue, and from West North avenue to Cornelia avenue.

North Laramie avenue, from West Washington boulevard to West North avenue.

Uniform Color Scheme Adopted as Street Guide

MOTORISTS motoring to Washington, D. C., will find no difficulty in following the main arteries of traffic in the capital as a result of color band markings for the main routes, worked out by the American Automobile asociation and adopted by the District of Columbia commissioners. Funds for painting these color bands on the lamp posts along the routes through the city have been appropriated and the work of outlining the main arteries of travel has started.

The color band scheme, which has already been adopted in the New England states, New York, and Pennsylvania, is declared by experts to be the simplest practical plan of routing a traveler through a strange city, and, as many other states are planning to install this system, it is not unlikely that the time is close at hand when a motorist can follow a given color line from coast to coast.

As an aid to the street markings the A. A. A. has erected suitable signs at the main entrances to Washington explaining the proper color to follow to reach a given destination. Streets and highways running north and south will have a blue strip on the lamp posts or telephone poles. East and west thoroughfares will be marked with a red stripe. Avenues running diagonally will bear a yellow stripe. In each case the top of the band will be exactly six feet from the ground and the width will vary from sixteen inches for a single color to twenty-four inches where the triple combination is used. A two inch band of white at top and bottom will accentuate the colors.

The system of marking will start from zero milestone, a permanent monument located directly south of the White House.

These color bands are designed to aid the through traveler in avoiding the congested traffic of the downtown section while at the same time leading the visitor close enough to the heart of the city to make the finding of any desired location easy.

A NATIONAL INSTITUTION

1898 MOTOR INDIANA TRUCKS 1923

The One Sure Way To Judge Truck Values

DIG DEEP when you compare truck values. Look not only for quality units but also for a QUALITY MANUFACTURER. A strong manufacturer is your best assurance of a high-quality truck: Read INDIANA'S qualifications:

1. STABILITY: A strong, old-established company, founded in 1898—a quarter-century of steady, solid, substantial growth.
2. FINANCIAL STRENGTH: Ample capital and strong resources, assuring the advantageous buying which makes INDIANA values possible.
3. EXPERIENCE: Twenty-five years of successful manufacturing, of which thirteen years have been exclusively devoted to the manufacture of high-grade motor trucks.
4. POLICIES: A fixed determination to build nothing but the best, to put value and service ahead of all else, and to give the utmost for the money.
5. SCOPE: A nation-wide institution in manufacturing, sales and service; eleven strategically located factory parts-depots covering the entire country, and hundreds of distributor and dealer parts-stocks available in as many cities.
6. PERFORMANCE: Thousands of INDIANA Trucks in service in almost every country—many of them in daily operation 10 years and longer, and many that have gone a hundred thousand miles and more.

The strength and experience of the INDIANA Organization is reflected in the remarkable performance records of INDIANA Trucks.

Does Your Motor Lack PEP?

The usual cause is a few thousandths of an inch wear on the cylinder walls, resulting in:

Loss of Power
Excessive Gas and Oil Consumption
Carbon Accumulation
Spark Plug, Valve and Carburetor Trouble
Excessive Bearing Wear and Noisy Operation

The cure is in having the cylinders properly reground. Pistons—traveling up and down the cylinders about 2,000 times per minute—wear out like a set of tires, and regrinding is the only cure for their worn surfaces. 97% of all cars contain "ground" cylinders—because manufacturers know that this process produces the longest wearing cylinder finish—which means economy of operation.

A Reground Motor Is Better Than New

A new motor after running several thousand miles becomes thoroughly seasoned—all casting strains have been relieved and it is time to carefully regrind the cylinders and refit them with new pistons and rings. The consequent increase in efficiency is marked and the life of the motor is greatly increased. Give your motor a new lease on life by patronizing

You Will Find the Real Car Underneath the Hood

Beautiful bodies are much to be desired—but faithful dependability of chassis units is absolutely essential.

If you are to select your motor car wisely—lift up the hood and examine closely the units from which the chassis is built. In few automobiles can value be so definitely measured as in the Columbia Six. Make note of the mechanical units with an established reputation for dependability and long life it provides. Then seek the same units and features on other cars—and compare the prices.

The average price of cars using such widely known units as Continental Motors, Timken Axles, Auto-Lite Electrical Equipment is $2,000—yet all of these specialized products are available in the Columbia Six at less than $1,000.

Let this be your invitation to examine the new Columbia Six—to ride in it—to drive it.

Form your own opinion from the car's performance, and then decide for yourself if there is any reason why you should pay more for a thoroughly good automobile.

MOTORDOM

800,000 Novices to Be Initiated in Motor Lodge

Makers Expect Output to Reach 2,525,000 Cars.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Based on a careful survey of conditions which have existed since the beginning of the present year, at least 800,000 new automobiles will be required in 1923 for new owners, or persons who never before operated a car. The total estimated demand for the year will be 2,525,000 passenger cars, according to manufacturers.

In the commercial car field the percentage of trucks needed for replacements is not quite so large as in the passenger field. About 125,000 commercial cars will be replaced within the next ten months if business conditions continue on an even keel, while 1,650,000 passenger cars must be replaced. A 135,000 demand will be sufficient for the export trade, which brings the total requirements for the year up to 275,000.

The General Motors units should collectively turn out 460,000, the estimates say. A group of other big producers, consisting of Dodge, Durant, Studebaker, Maxwell, Hudson, Essex and Nash, should collectively turn out 725,000, which would leave a total production of approximately 190,000 for all other manufacturers of passenger cars now in active business.

Of cars built in 1923 it is estimated that 34 per cent will sell for less than $500, 33 per cent will be in the $500 to $1,000 class, 19 per cent in the $1,000 to $1,500 class, 7 per cent in the $1,500 to $2,000 class, 3 per cent $2,000 to $2,500, and 4 per cent for cars selling above $2,500.

Of the estimated output of 275,000 commercial cars, Ford will produce about 45 per cent, or 125,000. General Motors quota should be about 15,000, the remainder being distributed among other manufacturers.

In the Detroit district production is limited only by the freight car shortage in some cases, and the capacity of factories in others. The unusual fine buying spirit evidenced at the big shows is reflected in the increasing production schedules in local plants. There still remains a decided shortage of skilled labor in many of the largest plants, and plants are also seriously hampered in many cases by a shortage of plate glass and satisfactory automobile steel. The shortage of plate glass is steadily increasing, due to the increased production of closed cars.

An early resumption of manufacturing operations in the Wills-St. Claire in Marysville and the lifting of the receivership are looked for as a result of a decision on the part of Boston bankers to proceed with an immediate reorganization of the company. It is estimated that the Wills company can break even on a 6,000 car annual production which should not be a difficult task now that the car is established. The plant has a capacity of 18,000 a year.

According to the belief of Capt. "Eddie" Rickenbacker, the prices of automobiles are now down to bed rock, and companies from now on will show a tendency to increase prices. Capt. Rickenbacker, vice president of the Rickenbacker Motor car company, looks for a general price increase throughout the industry before the first of June.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." For today's question Marshall W. Moreau, 4156 Washington boulevard, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Should autoists be required, by an ordinance, to apply skid chains when the streets are slippery or icy?

Where Asked.

Madison and Dearborn streets.

The Answers.

George C. Maier, 2041 Tremont street, clothing cutter—Don't know whether an ordinance is necessary or not, but skid chains should be a part of every autoist's equipment, and they should be applied the moment streets get in a dangerous condition—there's no question about that. Too many people are being killed nowadays, and anything that helps safety along should be indorsed.

Herman C. Pahlke, 6329 North Paulina street, chemist—I'll tell you, I never use chains. I drive a truck most of the time, and I know how to stop. When making a stop many people slam on the brake and release the clutch at the same time. This locks the rear wheels and makes runners out of them. If you keep the machine in gear your wheels have a new hold on the pavement every instant, giving better brake effectiveness. The trouble is, people wait till the last instant before applying the brakes.

W. F. Barrett, 3633 North Oakley avenue, jewelry salesman—I don't believe in that ordinance idea. You might be only a couple of blocks from your home when it started to rain. You are not going to stop to put on chains, and in those two blocks you are liable to get picked up for violating the ordinance. Every driver should have chains with him, but good judgment should dictate when they should be applied.

W. A. Bertman, 163 West Washington street, tool manufacturer—Yes, by all means. Chains are inexpensive, and it is easier to put on chains than to bother with an accident later. A number of times I have been missed by a few inches at corners by skidding cars driven by reckless drivers, who seem to be trying to cut the buttons off your clothes. With some of those drivers they ought to apply something more than skid chains on the wheels.

T. J. Gabriel, 2106 South 49th court, paymaster—There should be an ordinance for some people who are too lazy to put chains on, for their own protection, as well as others on the streets. They are afraid of a little work; afraid of soiling their hands. A man gets out and changes a tire because he can't run on a flat tire. If he knew he was going to ruin his car without chains he'd get out and clamp on the chains.

Railroads Reap Annual Harvest from Auto Trade

FEW industries have benefited more than the railroad from the growth and substantial success of the automobile industry.

"Railroads may lose some traffic now and again, but it is more than offset by new business," Alfred Reeves of the N. A. C. C. told traffic men last week. "The four leading places in carloads of manufactured articles on the railroads are for petroleum and its products, iron and steel, automobiles and parts, and cement. All of these are due to some extent, directly or indirectly, to the manufacture and use of motor cars.

"Third place in shipping last year was occupied by automobiles and parts, because the industry gave the railroads more than half a million carloads of automobiles, motor trucks and parts, not including tires, with an estimated freight bill of $125,000,000.

"The wealth of every city has increased tremendously as a result of the automobile industry. The best buildings and the finest looking salesrooms on the best thoroughfares house the modern vehicles. We have had garage construction, both private and public, on a gigantic scale.

"Next to schools, nothing is so important to the nation as transportation. There were no real advances in transportation for 1,800 years prior to Fulton's steamboat."

TRANSPORT FACILITIES.

There are 259,000 miles of railway in the United States, 18,000 miles of suburban electric lines, and more than 2,750,000 miles of highways which connect up every town and hamlet in the country.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

TWENTY Chicago firms have launched another campaign toward the standardization of automobile service with the organization of the American Cylinder Grinders' association. This new industrial group is composed of all cylinder grinding concerns and specialists equipped with standard machinery. Its chief function will be to protect the motoring public from defective motor parts and undesirable workmanship in the grinding of engine cylinders.

Buick produced its millionth motor last week, according to announcement made by H. S. Daniels at the Flint factory. The motor will be installed in the millionth complete car as a feature of the company's twentieth anniversary.

Speed tests on the frozen brick oval of the Indianapolis speedway last week proved that the Rickenbacker stock touring car has a range up to eighty-three miles an hour. The test was made with top and windshield up, complete equipment, and a full complement of passengers.

P. J. Pollock has been appointed sales manager for the Stainaker & Johnson company, 2634 Michigan avenue, distributors of the Earl car.

A nation-wide carburetor service is the aim of the Tillotson Manufacturing company, which is establishing new stations in every part of the country for the benefit of motorists. The Beverly Automotive company, 325 East 21st street, is distributor for the Toledo concern in the Chicago territory.

Oakland Asks You to Measure Value on a Known

Mileage Basis

Confronted with so many different motor cars—particularly in the light six field—it is mighty comforting for the motor car buyer to have such a definite and accurate standard for measuring motor car quality as that afforded by Oakland's new "Mileage Basis" plan!

With this plan, you can determine, in advance, the actual number of satisfying miles an Oakland Six will deliver free from repairs or replacements.

Features of The Plan

An Oakland 6-44 will travel at least 40,000 miles before its main crankshaft or connecting rod bearings require attention.

Its special steel alloy valves will not need grinding short of 15,000 miles. It will average from 20 to 25 miles per gallon of gasoline and from 15,000 to 25,000 miles per set of tires.

Moreover, in addition to these things, Oakland continues its special written, 15,000 mile engine performance guarantee.

*Let us explain the com*plete details—and then weigh these Oakland figures in the light of your own past experience with cars of other makes. You will then appreciate what high quality of materials and what precise workmanship are built into the Oakland "6".

National Automobile Shows and the R&V Motor Company

By H. A. HOLDER, President

The largest automobile shows of the country have been held. It is now possible to judge their effects. Some manufacturers question the large investment of time, effort and money put into them. But I cannot conscientiously feel in sympathy with ideas that point towards the discontinuance of these shows. I am convinced that the open competition of these shows is the greatest possible stimulant and inspiration to the manufacturer who is honestly striving to serve the public better in his particular field.

The Test of Approval and the Guide To Development

At the shows, by its interest or neglect, the public registers its approval or disapproval of the product. This attitude of the public furnishes an unerring guide for the manufacturer's future course. He can correct his errors of development and determine the lines on which his future progress in the industry must set. The shows furnish the opportunity for fair impartial comparison free from an atmosphere of individual influence or bias.

The worth of the automobile shows is to my mind conclusively proven by the whole-hearted support of the public, as demonstrated by this year's record attendance. This attendance intensifies my conviction of the economic importance of the public exposition of the latest progress in the automotive industry.

All Knight Motored Cars Show Great Development at Shows

Naturally, I am prejudiced because our company specializes in Knight Motor cars. But discounting my own personal enthusiasm as much as possible, it seemed to me that Knight manufacturers as a whole showed progress and vitality much above the average. I believe the impartial observer, the open minded motorist, was impressed with this fact.

Knight manufacturers are few in number — there are only three of us. But we three are among the eldest automobile and gas engine manufacturers in the country. Knowing the poppet valve engine full well, from actual practical manufacturing experience and use, we have shown our persistent faith in the Knight engine's greater possibilities by continued progress in designing and improvements.

Our faith and optimism in the Knight engine is justified and encouraged by the growing public appreciation of the value which the Knight engine gives. This appreciation was strikingly emphasized when value became the most important buying guide to careful motorists in 1920 and 1921. It was during this period, in my opinion, that Knight engines became firmly established in the minds of thinking buyers.

Knight Engine's Greatest Endorsement

The Knight engine has received its greatest endorsement for reliability, and economy in operation by the decision of the interests behind the new Chicago Motor Bus Lines to adopt R&V Knight engines exclusively for their products. This company will be the largest bus operating company in America, besides being of the first importance as a motor bus manufacturer.

"Brass Tacks" facts alone influenced this decision. When profits are wholly dependent upon maintaining accurate schedules and upon cost of operation, the choice of a motor is of vital importance. Close study of R&V Knight performance over long periods of time, furnished the proof that inevitably lead to this choice. The experience of the Fifth Avenue Coach Company, of New York, which has used R&V Knight engines exclusively for many years, has proven to the satisfaction of the Chicago operators the merits of our claims.

R&V Knight Six Emphasizes Value

The R & V Motor Company this year continued its unbroken representation of its product at the automobile shows. But never in its twenty years of show representation has it been so well satisfied with results as this year.

In advance the company realized that competition would be keener than ever in history. But it was not stampeded into the thought that the public idea of value could not get beyond first cost price. The company felt that the careful buyer wanted to buy real long time value—not just a price.

So instead of cutting cost of production in order to sell price, the company increased cost of production. It has of necessity increased price approximately 15%, but in so doing, it is my conviction, that it has increased value to the buyer at least 50%.

Manufacturers of any article can build to a price, and each can give for that price very nearly the same value as the other, in labor, materials, and performance. Price and price only controls the product, if price is the controlling thought of the maker.

Building The Best All Around Automobile Ever Produced

On the other hand one may build for an ideal to make the best all around automobile ever produced. Into such construction, must go years of experience in designing, in construction, in quality—in workmanship, and in the selection of every detail which will give to the user the one value which is all values combined, namely: Satisfaction with both the finished product and its necessary first price.

That has been the one thought behind our new R&V Knight Six. Not one cent has been wasted on fads or fancies for "selling appeal," and not one penny spared on essentials that our experience, as one of the oldest manufacturers of automobiles in the world, has taught us would give value in service.

Full Support to the Engine Sealed and Guaranteed for 2 Years

The result is, in my opion, the best all around automobile in America, primarily because of the high development of our new R&V Knight engine. This engine alone would uphold my claims if surrounded with ordinary units. But it does not stand alone.

No car as a whole received more attention from technical engineering experts, writing up exhibits at the automobile shows, than the new R&V Knight Six.

All points of chassis and body construction can be seen and appreciated at our stores. They show what intelligent design and expenditure of money, keeping value, not first cost in mind, can accomplish.

The one thing that cannot be seen is the inside of our engine and the long life that is built into it.

That long life is there. To prove it—to show our faith and sincerity, we have placed on the engine our sealed bond, and this unusual guarantee.

We guarantee, that for full two years from date of purchase, neither user nor dealer shall have one cent of renewal or repair expense on this engine, regardless of mileage run, except such repairs or renewals as are caused by neglect or collision.

The elimination of repair expense thus guaranteed, and the promise of uninterrupted service are factors that no careful buyer can afford to overlook. A visit to our stores will show details of construction. A demonstration will reveal remarkable performance. Call at any of our stores for inspection and demonstration This will interest you even if you are not at the moment in the market for a new car.

Prices On R&V Knight Six Cars

The necessary price to user under present market conditions is $2850 and $2900 for our all season permanent top R&V Knight Six, and $3500 and $3700 for fully enclosed models.

I am proud of what our organization has produced and hope for it a careful investigation from judges of real value. Our market is necessarily limited to those who are able to meet the first cost, but I am satisfied to let our future rest on their judgment of the value we give as compared to any other value at any other first cost.

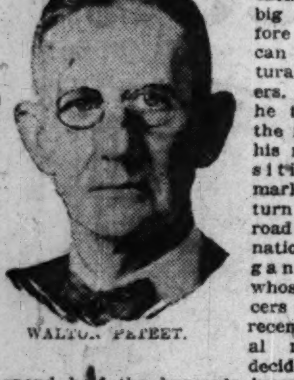
FARM AND GARDEN

Farm Bureau Out to Promote Co-op Marketing System

By Frank Ridgway.



WALTON PETEET.

WALTON PETEET, recently appointed director of the coöperative marketing department of the American Farm bureau federation, is out to tackle the big job before American agricultural leaders. When he took up the reins of his new position it marked a turn in the road of the national organization whose officers at the recent annual meeting decided to spend half the bureau's income this year in promoting coöperative marketing.

Though Mr. Peteet has been at his post only a few days, he has a fairly definite idea of what he expects to do. The work is not new to him. He comes from Texas, where he showed southern farmers that the commodity coöperative plan, operated so successfully in California, could be put to use in the south. During the last few years he has played an active part in organizing growers of cotton, grain, hay, perishables, and live stock.

Agriculture Out of Step.

Up to now the bureau's chief interest has been the organization and educational angles of coöperative marketing. Now fundamental principles followed by Pacific coast farmers in the marketing of their products are to be studied.

Mr. Peteet says the problem of agriculture is not for farmers only, but for all classes to solve. Agriculture is out of step with modern progress.

"For two generations," he says, "there has been a revolution in industry. It has changed from individual to group basis; we now have group production and distribution of all industrial products. On the other hand, agriculture has remained individualistic in production and distribution.

"We hope agriculture will always remain individualistic in production," he continued. "This is necessary in order to preserve country life. But it is absolutely essential that farmers change the distribution system to a group basis. That's our task, which means coöperation."

Calls Rochdale Plan Mistake.

He points out the mistake farmers in this country—particularly midwest producers—have made in trying to apply the principles of the Rochdale system in selling farm products. The farmers' elevator movement is a good example of this, said the leader.

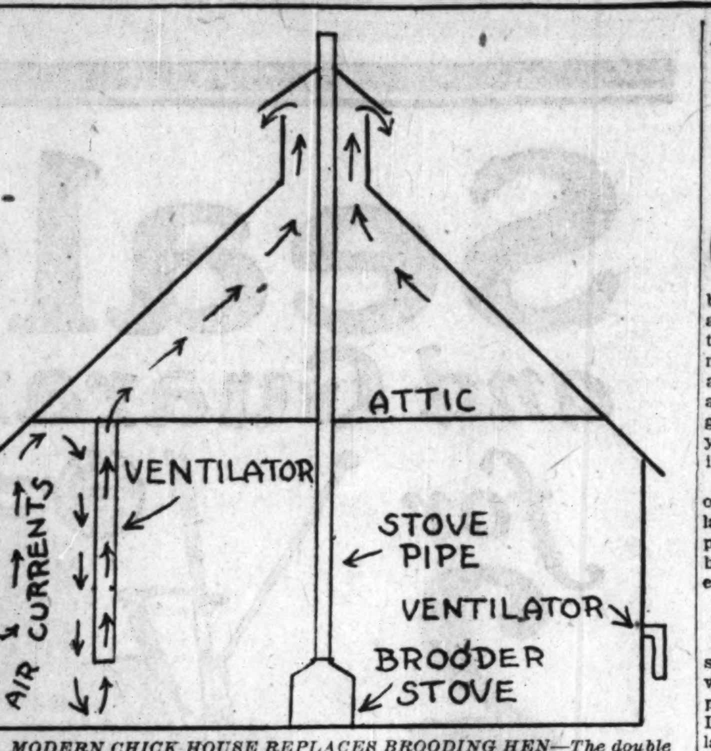
"About the time the Rochdale plan was being developed in England by workmen," says Mr. Peteet, "farmers in Denmark were forced to work out a new system in selling their crops and live stock. Their plan worked and is still working. It's effective on the Pacific coast in this country, too. Thirty years ago farmers there were forced to sell their products individually in order to escape economic disaster, and they learned how to adopt Danish coöperative fundamentals. The same system with modifications was adopted later in the south in the marketing of tobacco and cotton."

Mr. Peteet points out that America has a definite body of doctrine on agricultural production. "Ever since Abraham Lincoln signed the bill creating agricultural colleges, scientists have been at work developing a sound body of doctrine on growing crops and raising and feeding live stock.

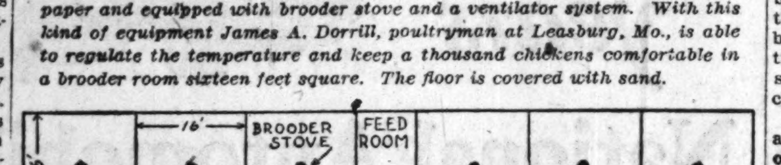
"But there is no body of doctrine on distribution," he adds. "There is no national system of group marketing. It will be the work of this department to develop the coöperative body of doctrine to establish authority on collective distribution of farm products. There are two phases to our new work; first, to stimulate and promote coöperative marketing of all products grown on the farm; second, to unify and coördinate coöperative marketing agencies over the country."

Each commodity will be studied separately and a coöperative system of marketing designed to distribute efficiently and effectively for the benefit of both the producer and consumer. Potatoes probably will be the first product to be tried.

The income of the potato grower in Minnesota is determined by his relation to the grower of tubers in Maine or some other section. They must work out their problems together, is Mr. Peteet's theory. The main idea is to merchandise agricultural products instead of dumping a twelve months' supply on the market within three months after harvest.



MODERN CHICK HOUSE REPLACES BROODING HEN—The double walled brooder house above is covered and lined with three ply roofing paper and equipped with brooder stove and a ventilator system. With this kind of equipment James A. Dorrill, poultryman at Leasburg, Mo., is able to regulate the temperature and keep a thousand chickens comfortable in a brooder room sixteen feet square. The floor is covered with sand.



FLOOR PLANS FOR HOME OF 6,000 BABY CHICKS—One thousand baby chicks are comfortably housed in each one of the six rooms, and with the feed room between the trios of brooding rooms the labor problem in feeding, watering, and managing the young peepers is greatly simplified. Sand used on the floors as a litter is a great aid in keeping the quarters clean and free from disease pests. This arrangement of brooding rooms is used on James A. Dorrill's Missouri poultry farm.

Making Market Laws Uniform.

Legislation which provides for collective financing and marketing of pooled farm products under contract has been adopted in seventeen states, and bills with this provision are now being introduced in the legislatures of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio. The act was written by Aaron Sapiro, California attorney, an authority on coöperative marketing. Officials of the American Farm Bureau federation are encouraging states to adopt the principles of this act, in order to make coöperative marketing laws uniform throughout the United States.

POULTRY TIPS

Representatives of sixteen hatcheries in Iowa recently organized the Iowa Baby Chick association, and elected B. E. Manville of Iowa City to head the combine, which will have for its purpose the standardization of flocks from which eggs are bought. There are fifty-four hatcheries in Iowa. According to estimates, the sixteen hatcheries represented in the new organization will turn out about 3,000,000 baby chicks this year.

If your hens do not produce more than ninety eggs each a year they are not making a profit, according to L. L. Heller's figures in a recent issue of the Cook County Farmer. At present prices the ninety-one egg hen is merely producing a profit of one egg in twelve months.

He adds: "The hen which lays 200 eggs a year is yielding a profit of 110 eggs and is worth as much as 110 hens which lay ninety-one eggs each. Records prove that 30 per cent of the hen population are slackers and do not pay for the feed they consume." It's the pure bred birds, properly housed and fed, and culled intelligently that pay.

Warmth and Fresh Air First Aids for Baby Chicks

ONE of the advantages in keeping pure bred chickens on a large poultry farm is that both the baby chick and incubation egg business can be profitably developed along with egg production on an extensive scale. There is a growing demand for eggs from pure bred hens, and chicks that are well bred. Eggs and chicks from mongrels or low grade flocks are in less demand every year because even the beginner learns it pays to start with pure bred stock.

Hennery owners who are operating on a large scale are able to fill either large or small orders, and if they have pure bred birds they have little trouble in disposing of all good fertile eggs and strong chicks.

Ventilation Highly Important.

Large hatcheries can be operated successfully only where there are warm brooder houses well heated and properly ventilated, says James A. Dorrill, who handles 3,000 pure bred layers and turns out thousands of baby chicks on his poultry farm at Leasburg, Mo. All during February and the early part of March he is kept busy tuning up his incubators and getting brooder houses ready for the early spring hatch of 4,000 or 5,000 baby chicks.

His first job in the spring is to get all of the two year old birds on the open range and feed them mixtures that will put them in ideal condition for producing eggs for the incubator, looking after the mating to make sure that all the eggs will be fertile. Eggs that are laid by hens on the range, getting plenty of exercise, produce much stronger chicks than those of birds that are confined.

Hatch in April.

"I start my incubators between the 10th and 25th of March, so they will hatch from the 1st to the 15th of April," said Mr. Dorrill. "I have ten incubators that hold 600 eggs each, and I have all of them going at the same time. From the 6,000 eggs I am able to save an average of 4,200 chicks, which I consider a fair average for the early hatch."

As soon as the chicks hatch and are thoroughly dry they are removed to warm brooder rooms, which are kept at a temperature of 100 degrees Fahrenheit, almost as high as that of the incubator. The temperature is gradually decreased until the chicks are given their first feed. It is not allowed to go below 95 degrees. During the next three or four days the temperature is decreased gradually until it is down to 90 degrees at the end of the first week.

Regulating the Heat.

"Regulating the temperature and keeping the brooder room warm are the most important factors in getting baby chicks started right, and this cannot be done unless the house is properly built," adds the Leasburg poultry ranch manager. "I built the brooder rooms and equipped them with stoves and a ventilator system so that I could control the temperature and avoid sudden changes that chill or overheat the chicks. I have six brooder rooms in a row, three on each side of the feed room. Each room is 16x16 feet. The walls are made of double boards, one inch lumber, and covered on the outside and lined on the inside with three ply roofing paper.

"With a kerosene brooder stove in the center of each room I can keep 1,000 chicks comfortable with a small amount of labor. I have ventilators with 6 by 6 inch openings coming in at the opposite corners of the brooder rooms, and in the other two corners stovepipes are installed to carry the warm, stale air out. The lower ends of the pipes are 18 inches above the floor, and extend up to the attic. In this way I have a constant supply of fresh air coming in; the stale air going out through the stovepipes to the attic and on out through the ventilator on top of the roof. I never use hovers around brooder stoves, for I keep the temperature so well regulated that the chicks are comfortable in almost any part of the room. When it is not raining they are allowed to run outdoors if it is too warm in the brooder rooms."

Must Not Feed Too Soon.

Mr. Dorrill's farm is far enough south—Crawford county, Missouri—to permit early chicks to run in the open. Around Chicago, however, it would be necessary to use a cool room adjoining the brooder room.

On the Dorrill farm the chicks are not fed until they are about 72 hours old; never before they are 48 hours old.

"For the first feed I found nothing better than sour milk," says Mr. Dorrill. "About the third day I give the chicks all the sour milk they will drink, along with a small amount of chick feed. Water is not given until the fourth or fifth day. About the second day after the first feed I begin with a commercially prepared starter mash. All of the feed is dry except milk, and I feed it in enamel pans. Never feed milk in tin or galvanized iron vessels," advises Mr. Dorrill, "because there is too much danger of the chicks' getting a dose of metallic poison.

"I use the starter mash for the first six weeks, then add larger grains, getting them on to a growing mash by the end of the tenth week. When the birds are about four months old I begin to use the laying mash, withdrawing it when I see they are developing too rapidly. I finish with large grain before removing them to the laying houses in October. As soon as I get them there I begin to prepare the pullets for heavy winter laying. I try to get them plump and fairly fat before the heavy laying season."

Sand scattered over the floors of the breeding rooms is one of the most effective litter materials that can be used in keeping the quarters clean, according to Mr. Dorrill. He uses the sand instead of straw or other litter materials.

Will Gather Facts.

National Farm bureau officials are fostering a movement which provides for a fact finding commission or some other body of investigators to gather data regarding the European situation, so the American farmer may be assured of a strong market for surplus crops this year.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Domestic developments continued yesterday to dominate the course of stock prices, little or no attention being paid to the foreign situation. Sales of copper at 15¾ cents a pound, the highest since 1920, and another increase of 10 cents a barrel for mid-continent crude furnished speculators for the advance with additional ammunition in their campaign to boost prices. Reports of an early advance in tire prices also were circulated.

Coppers were in great demand in the final dealings. New high records were established by Kennecott at 42⅜, Inspiration at 40¼, Cerro de Pasco at 46½, and Ray at 15⅝, while Utah and Chile duplicated their previous peak prices of 70 and 30¼, respectively, slight concessions taking place in some of these at the close. The net gains range from fractions to a point.

General Motors was again active, creating a new top of 15½ on sales exceeding 15,000 shares. Baldwin established a new top at 142, but dropped back to 140½ at the close, where it was off ⅜ on the day. Studebaker crossed 120 again, but was unable to hold the gain and sagged to 119⅛, off ⅜ on the day. United States Steel also closed slightly lower.

California Petroleum was the most vulnerable to selling pressure, dropping 2 points to 84⅛, selling being influenced somewhat by unconfirmed reports of the discovery of salt water in some of the California oil fields. There were several other weak spots, notably American Brake Shoe, Columbia Gas, Gulf States Steel, Sears-Roebuck, and American Locomotive, all off 1⅛ to 3 points.

The preferred stock of the Steel and Tube Company of America yesterday broke from 104 to 101½. The decline was explained after the close of the market, when it became known that the Allied Chemical and Dye corporation will take action next week to enjoin the Steel and Tube company from selling its assets to the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company under an agreement dated Jan. 6. In banking circles it was said that the Allied Chemical owns a 20 per cent interest in the steel company and that it probably is dissatisfied with the terms agreed on by the officers of both steel companies.

There has been evident during the last year a growing appreciation of the constructive movement now in force in the republic of Mexico. The first striking evidence was the Mexican debt refunding settlement. In yesterday's news there appeared another item which attracted the attention of Wall street in the announcement that the Southern Pacific system has finally found the time ripe to complete the construction of its 1,000 mile line down the gulf of California coast, connecting Nogales on the north with Guadalajara on the south.

Howard Elliott, chairman of the board of the Northern Pacific railway, will attend a conference in Chicago, beginning Monday of attorneys and officers representing the Northern Pacific, Great Northern, and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad companies to consider the proposed consolidation of the three roads, a hearing on which will be heard before the interstate commerce commission on Feb. 26 in Chicago.

A survey of corporate maturities in the month of March, 1923, accomplished today in financial quarters shows that little new financing will be necessary. The largest maturity, the analysis shows, is the New York and Erie third extension 4½ per cent bonds amounting to $4,617,000, which fall due March 1, and will be extended ten years with the payment of $42.50 per $1,000 bond. The total of all railroad, public utility, and industrial maturities in March was found to be $29,465,160, as against $52,099,130 in February and $83,379,375 in March a year ago.

RAILROAD NOTES

Purchases of equipment by the Louisville and Nashville railroad for delivery within the next few months total $20,000,000 and call for 6,000 coal cars, 2,000 box cars, 51 passenger cars and 36 locomotives. This is the largest purchase of equipment in the history of the system and will bring the total spent by the railroad in the last eighteen months to more than $30,000,000 for rehabilitation.

Officials of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis report the roads handicapped by the unfavorable weather which has increased the difficulties of freight handling materially. Coal shipments have been increased recently, and there has been a great demand for cars for heavy freight such as steel and iron products. General merchandise volume is ahead of a year ago at this time.

Officials of southern roads said that the movement of cotton was about of a seasonable character. Lumber shipments are fairly good, and there is a heavy movement of coal. General merchandise shipments are large, reflecting the excellent buying power in the south, as the result of high prices of cotton.

Construction of a railroad to cost $6,000,000 for freight carrying purposes only to operate between Duluth and Superior and the Twin Cities is contemplated by Henry Ford. The road, it was said, would be part of Mr. Ford's plans in connection with his proposed industrial plant in the event that he is granted use of the power derived from the high dam at St. Paul.

PLAN $3,500,000 HOTEL FRONTING ON JACKSON PARK

Work to Start at Once on Ten Story Reltig.

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago's big south side residential hotel center is to have another magnificent hostelry, to cost $3,500,000, and to be erected at the northwest corner of Stony Island avenue and 67th street extending north to 66th place. The Hotel Reltig, however, will be unique in Chicago hoteldom in that it'll be a combination bachelor and family establishment. One-third of each of the room floors will be laid out by Architect Eric E. Hall with single rooms for single men. The remaining two-thirds will be arranged in suites for families.

The second novelty in the new hotel is the name. It boasts a cognomen no other hotel in the world ever used, simply because there never was such a word. The owner, Isaac Gittler, decided he wanted the name as unusual as the hotel, so he turned the letters of his surnace around, calmly killed one of the "t's," and, behold—the Hotel Reltig.

All Sides to Be Alike.

Mr. Gittler, by the way, has done something we take much pleasure in calling attention to—he's had Architect Hall design the building with all four sides alike—no "shirt front" hotel for Woodlawn, said Mr. Gittler to Mr. Hall. So no matter from what direction you look at the Reltig, you'll see a fine looking building and not a back wall of ordinary brick on one side.

Again we respectfully call the attention of other Chicago architects to what is to be done here. Most Chicago architects tell us they try hard to convince owners of the shoddiness of the "shirt front" building, but there are several who still object, though on what ground we could never find out.

Work to Start at Once.

Work will start at once, according to Mr. Hall, with the hope of having it ready for guests before the end of the year. The main entrance will be on Stony Island avenue and will lead into a spacious lobby, 80x80, 25 feet high, connecting with the palm room and dancing rooms, which are 56x75, with sunken floors. Adjoining the palm room is the main dining room, 50x75. Men's smoking room and ladies' parlor, office, etc., also are on the main floor.

On the mezzanine floor is a clubroom, lounging room, writing room, and three private dining rooms. On the 67th street side are the barber shop, women's and men's Turkish baths and beauty parlors, which are announced will be equal to any in Chicago.

The apartments for families will be two, three, and four rooms, with kitchenettes. On the roof will be an amusement hall for guests and a roof garden.

Own Your Home Show to Have Miniature Block

A complete suburban block, with modern homes, laid out along green, shaded streets, with smooth lawns, trim hedges and well kept gardens will be reproduced in miniature just inside the entrance to the Coliseum at the third annual "Own Your Home" show, to be held at the Coliseum, March 24 to 31 under auspices of the Chicago real estate board.

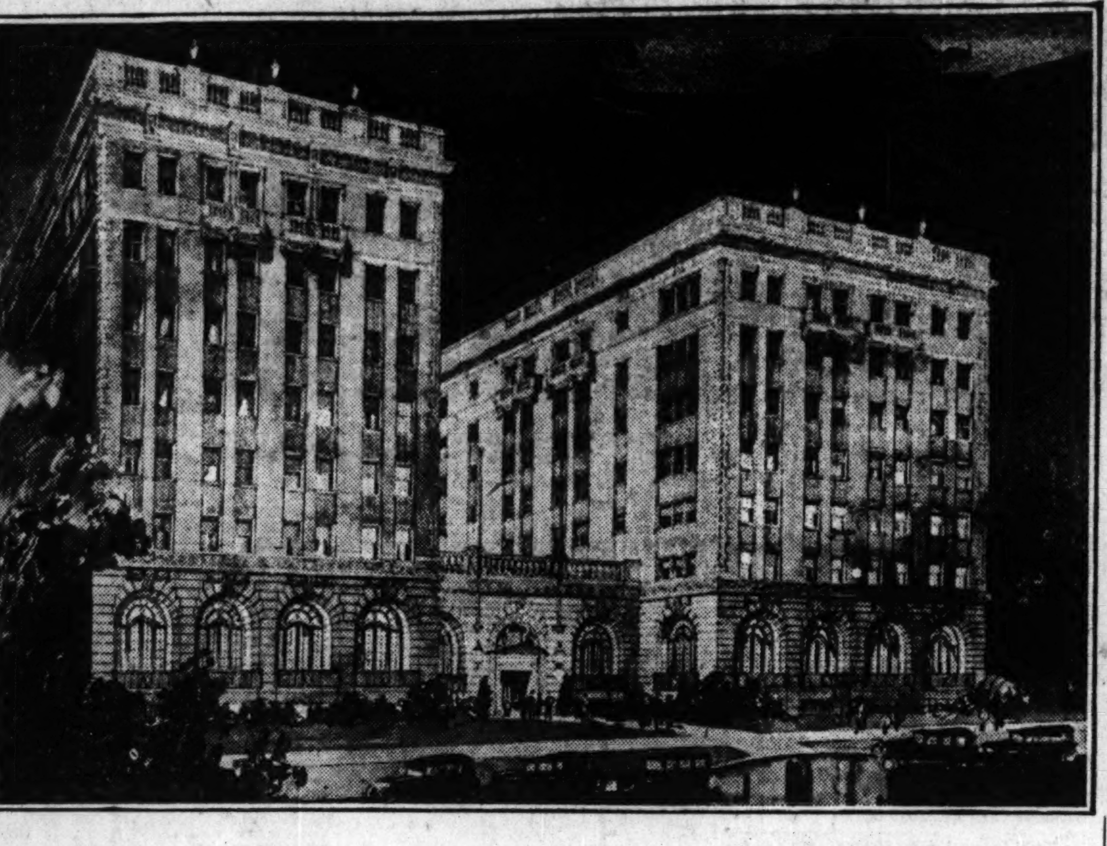
The homes will be built on the scale of one inch to a foot, and will be furnished by one of the large manufacturers of ready-cut houses. The landscape effects will be worked out on the same scale by the landscape committee of the exposition.

The possibilities of concrete in home building are to be shown by several coöperative and individual exhibits being arranged by the concrete products committee, of which Wallace R. Harris, president of the Concrete Products association, is chairman. Concrete building blocks, concrete roofing tile, concrete laundry trays and concrete garden furniture are among the products that will be shown.

BELLEVUE PLACE RESIDENCE SOLD.

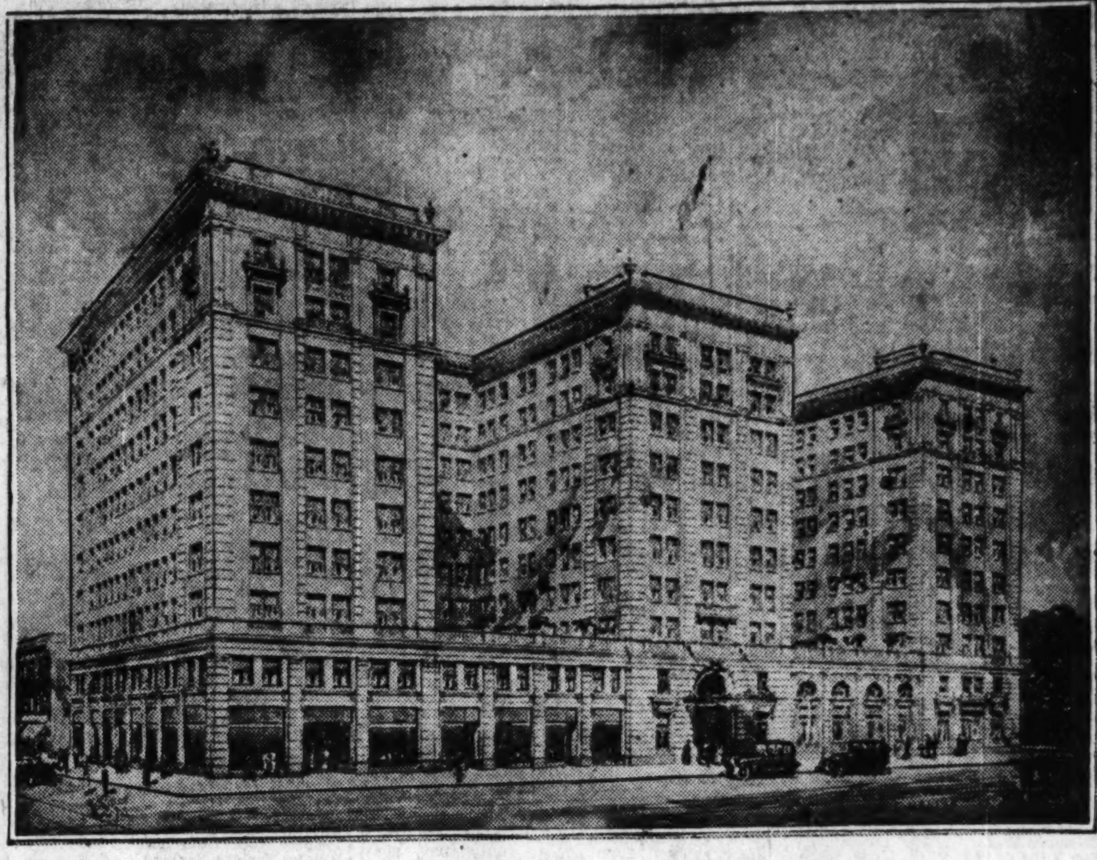
Helen E. Critzer has bought from Jessie A. O'Brien the three story brick and stone residence at 26 Bellevuep lace, lot 21x130, for $32,500, through Frank S. Pagin & Co.

"The Commodore"—Newest Uptown Hotel



Architect Albert S. Hecht designed the above Commodore apartment hotel, to be erected on Buena avenue at Broadway, work on which will start about March 15. Completion date is tentatively set for the middle of November. The total cost of land, building, and furnishings is estimated at $1,650,000. It will be seven stories and contain 120 apartments of three, four, and five rooms. In the basement will be a gymnasium, billiard room, and a playroom for the children. The first floor will have a 40x80 lobby with a large fountain. There'll be a dining room, ladies' reception room, social room, and dance hall. The principal stockholders in the Commodore Apartment Hotel corporation are Simon Dlott and David Warshauer. The building will be of brick with terra cotta trim.

Combination Hotel for Bachelors and Families



Here is the newest south side hostelry, the Hotel Reltig, a $3,500,000 structure to be built at once on Stony Island between 66th place and 67th street. It will have an alley in the rear, so will have an open space on all sides. The owner, Isaac Gittler, has commissioned Architect Eric E. Hall to have the exterior walls of the same material on all sides, alley as well as streets. It'll be of yellowish brick with terra cotta trim. There'll be 674 rooms—one-third for bachelors and the balance for families. Eleven stores are planned for the first floor. More is told in another column.

Some Leases

Mark Levy & Brother have leased for the Endicott-Johnson Shoe company at 27-29 South Dearborn street part of the space occupied by its retail shoe store to the Wormser Hat Stores, Inc., who were represented by Hefter & Wells. The term is seven years and the total rental approximately $75,000.

Hefter & Wells have closed a lease to the Cinema Service company of Detroit for the sixth floor of the Seeberger building at Wabash and 9th, five years from March 1, at a term rental of $30,000.

News of the Architects

Architect Ralph O. Yeager has moved from the Steinway building, 64 East Van Buren street, to larger quarters in the Great Northern office building, 20 West Jackson boulevard, where he occupies suite 802. His new telephone is Harrison 7489.

Anthony H. Quitsow has moved from 1036 Dakin street to suite 1505 Lumber Exchange building, 11 South La Salle. His phone is Dearborn 4090.

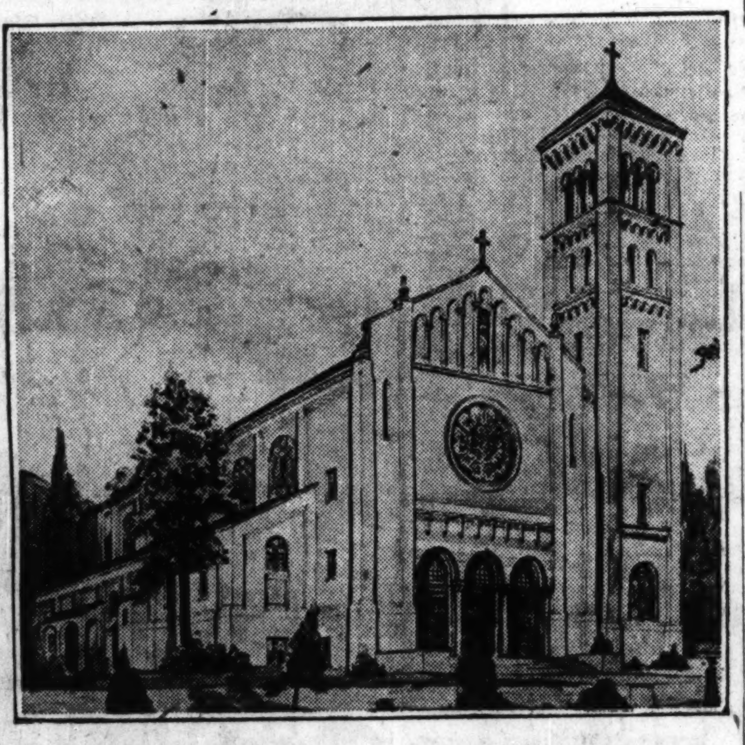
W. T. Charles, architect, has moved to room 503, at 179 West Washington street, in the newly remodeled Roosevelt building. His telephone is Franklin 3481.

Two Clark and Farwell Corners to Be Improved

Eward M. Levin of the Realty Building and Construction company, and Clarence Cohn, associated with Alfred Decker & Cohn, have bought the northwest corner of Clark and Farwell, 73x185, from Milton M. Cohn for $43,800, and will start work tomorrow on a building of terra cotta trim to contain five stores, five offices, and seventeen flats.

Mr. Levin also bought the southwest corner of the same streets, 93x135, for $51,150, and is having plans drawn for a business improvement. The architect is Raymond Gregori. Both deals were made by Milton H. Callner & Co. The buildings will be completed by the middle of May.

New Beverly Hills Church



Above is a church designed by Arthur Foster, Ellert & Sandel for the Catholic bishop of Chicago, to be erected on a 150x360 site at the southwest corner of Longwood boulevard and 100th street to care for a new parish of which the Rev. T. N. Hurley is pastor. The church will be named after Easter. It will have a main auditorium seating 1,000 and a lower church to accommodate 750. It is designed in the Lombardic style, with the cross 110 feet above the sidewalk, and will be of soft toned brick with roof of Latin tiles. The cost is estimated at $150,000. Work will start this spring.

Carberdor Apartments Change Hands; $175,000

The Carberdor apartments, at 4407-19 North Lincoln street, one of the largest in Ravenswood, have been sold by Julius Swanson to Lucie W. Schneewind for $175,000, subject to $99,000. There are forty-two flats. The E. E. Stults Realty company represented both parties and will manage the property.

STEEL OFFICIAL PLANS RESIDENCE.

W. P. Gleason, general superintendent of the Indiana Steel company, has bought the vacant 88x134 at the southwest corner of 70th and Bennett from O. S. Keith, through T. D. O'Hern & Co., for $15,000, and will build himself a residence.

ABANDON "SHIRT FRONT" PLAN FOR CENTRAL LIFE

The new $500,000 sixteen story home of the Central Life Insurance company, to be built at the southwest corner of Upper Michigan and Superior, from plans by D. H. Burnham & Co., is not to be a "shirt front" skyscraper after all. H. W. Johnson, president of the company, announces through his architects, that the same materials will be used on all four sides, instead of having the west side, overlooking part of the gold coast, and the south wall made of common brick and thus disfiguring the landscape for years to come, as was originally planned.

As the Central Life building will be a conspicuous landmark for years to come, it not being likely that a skyscraper will be built either directly west or south of it for many years to come, Mr. Johnson's public spirited consideration of his neighbors in those directions is to be commended.

Parkside Hotel Sold to Fred Berger; $109,000

The sixty-two room four story Parkside hotel at 1423-25 North Dearborn, lot 50x130, was sold by William J. MacDonald to Fred Berger for an indicated $109,000, subject to $65,000, through Frankel, Casey & Co., who also report selling the two four story buildings at 1322-24 North La Salle for Thomas Hennessey to Isadore M. Marshall for $35,000, subject to $15,000. The lot is 50x150.

Lawrence and Rockwell Business Block Is Sold

Mills R. Smith, Edward A. Nelson, and Ralph H. Martin have sold the building at the southeast corner of Lawrence avenue and Rockwell street to Gus P. Savoy for $85,000, subject to $48,000. It contains five stores on Rockwell and three fronting on Lawrence and has just been completed from plans by Frank D. Chase, Inc. The Andrews Realty company was broker.

MASTER EVERY DETAIL OF WORK, URGES REALTOR

R. G. BADEAUX.

You can't succeed in the real estate business unless you master every detail of your work, declared R. G. Badeaux in a lecture on "Salesmanship," before the real estate class of the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce, on Tuesday.

"Don't attempt to offer any property you have for sale until you have personally, carefully, thoroughly 'sold yourself' the property, otherwise you do yourself an injustice in the greatest degree, and you incur the resentment of prospects from your utter lack of the essential knowledge of your wares.

"There are hundreds of 'salesmen' who probably couldn't sell silver dollars for ten cents each and hence they and you can only succeed by mastering the minutest details of your business, which while seemingly of but little moment to you, are an absolute necessity for success."

REAL ESTATE NEWS

SEEK LAW FOR USE OF TORRENS ALL OVER STATE

Albert J. Brockman New Head of League.

Albert J. Brockman has been elected president of the Torrens Land Title Registration league at the annual election held in the league's offices in the Conway building on Tuesday. The installation of officers was held in the rooms of the Cook County Real Estate board. The vice president is A. W. Stanmeyer; secretary is Robert E. L. Brooks; treasurer, Roy E. Knauer, and the directors for three years are Peter Foote and Matthew Quinn.

In a report made by the committe in charge of the extension of the Torrens system outside of Cook county it was stated that other counties in Illinois intend to adopt the Torrens system in the near future.

Bill Is Introduced.

In order to make this possible, a bill has been introduced in the legislature by Representative Thomas L. Fekete of Rock Island county which provides that a petition signed by 5 per cent of the registered voters of a county shall cause the election officials of that county to place the question of the adoption of the Torrens system on the ballot at the next election.

"The present requirement of the majority of the registered voters is not only absurd but amounts to a prohibition of the use of the Torrens system outside of Cook county in the state of Illinois," commented President Brockman.

Membership Drive Progresses.

The membership committee of the league reported considerable progress in the drive for enrolling all Torrens certificate holders of Cook county as associate members in the league.

"The cost of such membership is only $2 per annum," said Mr. Brockman, "and in view of the activity of the league in the matter of protection and extension of the Torrens system the interest of property owners whose titles are registered in the system has been very keen."

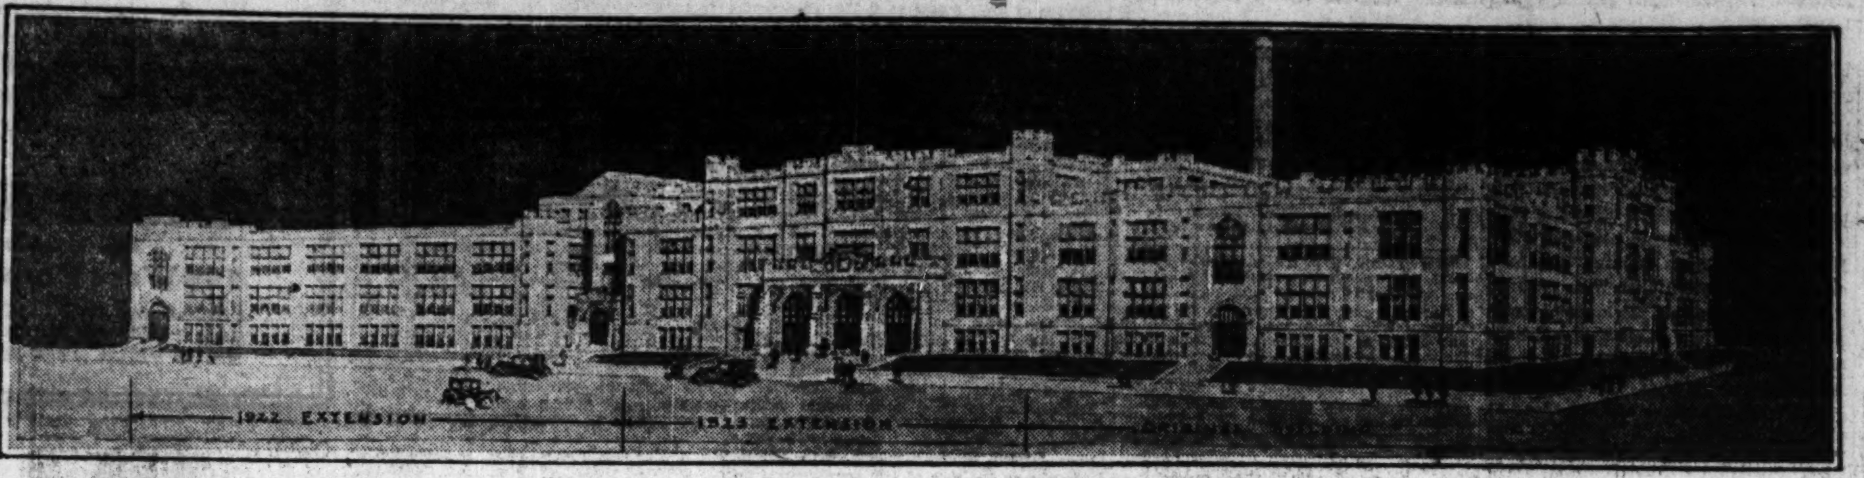
Three Leases Closed on Milwaukee Av. Motor Row

William Oscar Olsen and Henry Grimsell have leased from Benjamin I. Morris and David Labowitch the automobile showroom and service station, 75x120, at 2499-2505 Milwaukee avenue, for five years at $42,000, with an option to buy. Case and Dort cars will be carried. H. C. Spiekerman of the Logan Square Bond and Realty company, who represented both parties, also leased for the same parties the automobile showroom at 2517-19 Milwaukee to the Reo Motor Car company for five years, as well as the showroom at 2526-28 Milwaukee to the B. N. Robinson Motor Sales company for five years for Star and Durant cars.

STRAUS BUYS PITTSBURGH BUILDING.

S. W. Straus & Co. has bought the People's National Bank building in Pittsburgh for its organization in the Smoky city.

How Joliet's Great High School Will Look When Completed



D. H. Burnham & Co. are the architects of the two big extensions to the Joliet High school. On the left is shown the $800,000 wing just completed and on the right hand side is the original building, built in 1900. Contracts for wrecking the old church now on the site of the middle section have just been let. The building is of Joliet limestone with Bedford stone trim. Some idea of the size may be gained when it is known that the structure is 520 feet long and 238 feet wide. It covers the equivalent of two city blocks.

The new middle section will contain eighteen science laboratories and a 2,500 seat auditorium which will also serve as a community center for the entire city. It'll have a completely equipped stage. The school's symphony orchestra and band each will have a practice room under the auditorium. There'll also be a two story recital hall, seating 300, for choral work. The recently completed wing houses the vocational shops. The boys' gymnasium is among the largest of its kind in the country, accommodating 2,500 spectators.

HERE'S END OF ARGUMENT OVER CLEAN BUILDINGS

TerraCottaManWinds Up Controversy.

Add argument about whether Chicago buildings should be given a bath or not. Some weeks ago Architect Jacob Lewis made some comments about the desirability of cleaning stone buildings with a sand blast and we printed them in this department. At once H. S. Brightly, service engineer for the Indiana Limestone Quarrymen's association, of Bedford, Ind., entered a loud protest, calling attention to the beauty of stone buildings mellowed by I. C. smoke and their harsh tones softened by constant contact with our delightfully carbonized atmosphere.

And now steps forward W. T. Doyle, of the Terra Cotta Service bureau, and says thusly:

"Surely Mr. Brightly's plea to spare the sand blast or spoil the appearance of a stone facade was not based on an intimate knewledge of conditions which obtain in Chicago.

Soot Coating Inevitable.

"His advice might be followed in some localities with good effect and a harmony of color achieved which is usually lacking in newly quarried limestone. But in Chicago, the center of some thirty-nine railroads and the manufacturing center of the country, a coating of soot is the inevitable heritage of every structure within a period to be reckoned in weeks rather than in years.

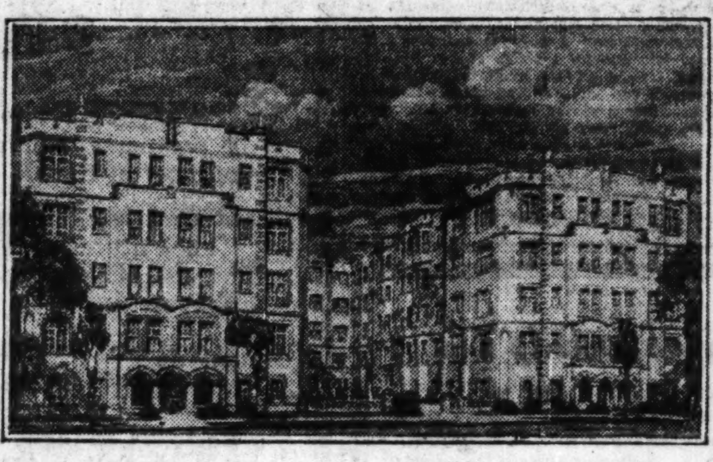
"Soot is no respecter of building materials; its action is impartial, whether the material be granite, limestone, brick, terra cotta, or concrete. It compels a choice between periodic cleaning and the total elimination of any color artistry in the architecture of our city. The choice doesn't lie between a bright and shiny clean appearance and the softer color tones that are developed by nature, as Mr. Brightly implies, but between cleanliness and filth.

Clean 'Em Any Old Way.

"The realization of the existence of this condition accounts for the great partiality shown to the glazed materials, polished granite, terra cotta, and brick. It doesn't require cleaning so frequently, and it can be cleaned quickly and cheaply by soap and water, whereas a rough textured, porous surface can be renovated only by sand blasting or by scrubbing with wire brushes and acid, both of which processes are laborious and costly. This high cost of upkeep may be the answer to Mr. Lewis' query of a few weeks ago: 'Why aren't stone exteriors kept clean?'"

And to forestall a long communication from the concrete manufacturers, tile makers, bronze, iron, and brass trade organizations, the paint makers' association, and possibly the lumbermen, we'll say the incident is closed. Clean your buildings any darned way you please—but why not do as they do in other cities and protect passersby from chunks of soot and shower baths of dirty water? We pass that suggestion along to some of our big cleaning companies and also to the city hall.

Rogers Park's Newest Apartments



McNally, Quinn & Co. have designed the $800,000 fireproof Glenesher Hall apartments, work on which has started at 1347-57 Estes avenue. The owner is O. E. Gallup of the real estate firm of William L. Wallen & Sons. It'll have forty-eight apartments of five rooms, some with two baths, and thirty-four with three rooms. There'll be six automatic elevators. Children's playrooms, baby carriage rooms, and entertaining rooms will be in the English basement. Completion date is set for Oct. 1. The Greenebaum Sons Investment company has made a $575,000 bond issue.

Southfield Plaza to Be Sold on Co-operative Plan

Jerome S. Nadel is completing a thirty apartment building at 7818-26 Cornell avenue which he has contracted to sell to the Southfield Plaza Building corporation, to be owned and operated on the coöperative tenant ownership plan. The Brennan & Mayers Real Estate and Investment company and Guy H. Wilford negotiated the purchase and will have charge of selling the apartments.

JANUARY CONTRACTS BIG.

Building contracts let during January in Illinois were greater than for any January since the war, according to the F. W. Dodge company. They amounted to $30,733,300, an increase of 56 per cent over December and of 148 per cent over January, 1922. Chicago's total was 20 per cent under December, but 50 per cent greater than January, 1922.

SYNDICATE BUYS CONTROL OF BIG STORAGE CO.

Martin H. Kennelly, president of the Fort Dearborn Storage Warehouse company; J. H. Troyer, president of the North Shore Warehouse company, and Henry A. Gardner of Gardner & Carton, attorneys, have acquired the capital stock of the Werner Bros. Fireproof Storage company. Five large warehouses were involved in the deal. In addition the corporation took a lease on the Fort Dearborn Storage warehouse at 4615-29 Clifton avenue from Mr. Kennelly for ten years at $18,000 annually, with option to buy within two years at $225,000. The total storage space of all warehouses involved is 250,000 square feet. Mr. Kennelly is the new president of the Werner corporation.

Brokers' Notes

John J. Ready Jr., associated with W. K. Young & Bro. for twelve years, has been made a vice president of the new Irving State Savings bank which has opened quarters in the space occupied for the last eighteen years by a branch office of W. K. Young & Bro. at Irving Park boulevard and Sheridan road. The latter firm has moved to 954 Irving Park boulevard, just east of the bank. William P. Devine, president of the Devine Dairies, and son of the late William Devine, is president of the new bank. Mr. Ready says he'll divide his time between banking and the realty business.

Guy H. Wilford, formerly north side branch manager for Frank K. Reilly and recently north side branch manager for the George W. Stewart company, has resigned and is supervising the purchase and sale of apartment buildings on the coöperative tenant ownership plan. He has opened offices in the Stock Exchange building. The biggest dividend paying investment you can make in your new house is to insulate your walls and roof with FLAXLINUM, as was done in the house shown above. It not only cuts coal bills one-third but is positive insurance that your house will be comfortable in all seasons.
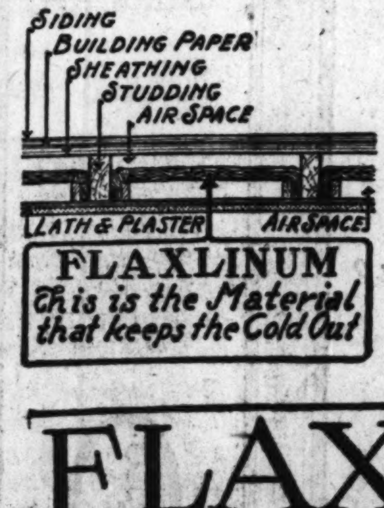
Make Your New House
100 Per Cent Weatherproof
What Flaxlinum Is
FLAXLINUM is a felted material made of durable, chemically-purified flax fibre. When built into the walls and roof of a house it seals the interior against outside temperature changes.
For walls it is made ½-inch thick with flanged edges to permit it to fit snugly between the studding. For roofs, sheets one inch in thickness are recommended. In applying FLAXLINUM no special construction is necessary. It will last as long as any house built. It will not crack, break or "sift down."
One-half inch of FLAXLINUM is equivalent in heat and cold resistance to 2½ inches of wood, eight inches of brick and mortar, or 13 inches of concrete.



YOUR house may shelter you from rain and snow but if it allows the cold of winter and the heat of summer to come in it is only half weatherproof.
Many home-builders feel they have gone the limit in weatherproofing when they use good roofing and siding and stipulate that their contractor give them a "good tight job."
But ordinary building materials are not sufficient insulation against heat and cold. To build a house entirely weatherproof, one that is comfortable on the hottest and coldest days of the year, a blanket of FLAXLINUM is necessary in the walls and roof.
FLAXLINUM pays for itself in a few years with the coal it saves. It cuts coal bills one-third. Assurance of comfort comes along as extra measure.
In St. Paul, where it has been giving satisfactory service for twelve years, half of all the houses built are insulated with FLAXLINUM. Come in and ask us about FLAXLINUM before you build—or send for booklet showing sample of FLAXLINUM and giving complete information.

The WISDOM of MARTIN LARSON

UNIQUE, indeed, is the position occupied by Martin Larson in the business world. Mr. Larson is a shoe specialist whose fame is country-wide. By building shoes exactly as nature intended we should wear them, Mr. Larson's business has prospered. The slogan, "Put your feet in my hands," is well known. And that Mr. Larson "puts his faith" in the Capitol building is evidenced by the fact that he has just secured large and commodious salesrooms in this building—in the heart of everything—where we bespeak for him even greater volume and prestige than ever before.
Capitol Building
(FORMERLY THE MASONIC TEMPLE)
THE wisdom of Martin Larson in housing his business in the Capitol building is unquestioned. His decision is the decision of many other prosperous concerns who are signing leases daily. The Capitol building is the center of the circle of crowds. Nearly a third of a million people circulate in and about this building every 24 hours. Over five million people come here annually just to attend lodges, clubs, conventions, etc. Large sums are now being spent in permanent betterments. Why pay exorbitant loop rents? Capitol building rents are reasonable—location, Chicago's very best.

ALL RAILROADS HAVE INTERESTS IN MERGER PLANS

BY SCRUTATOR.

Consolidation of the British railroads into four big systems is now practically complete. This final step in the demobilization of the British wartime rail system is bound to revive interest in the proposed consolidation of American roads, which was provided for permissively in the transportation act of 1920.

Business men of the middle west and south may find, when the consolidation question becomes acute, that they have special interests to look out for. It is time that they were beginning to look into it from their own standpoint.

The railroads themselves — operating forces and financial backers—have very definite ideas on the subject. If there is to be any merging, they want to do it their own way. The proposed merger of the Great Northern, Burlington, and Northern Pacific is an example of what they want. The big transportation men do not view with favor a general taking over of weak lines by those financially strong. The weak think otherwise, but don't count. Any consolidation to meet the rail leaders' approval must accentuate, not disturb, the present alignments in the transportation industry. No one can blame them for this attitude. It's their play.

In a general way the preservation of the existing traffic routing and rate system will also be favored by the east and the Pacific coast. The interstate commerce commission will be found committed to a policy of disturbing the existing traffic structure as little as possible, although it may be that the commission will go further than the rail bankers and executives in favor of merging the weak roads into the stronger systems.

Consolidation will be favored by shippers and consumers—if their fear that the elimination of competition will increase their burdens is allayed. There are many rail students who believe that in handing back the roads to private control before consolidation the government put the caboose before the engine. Much of the trouble of readjusting labor conditions on the roads, since the passing of McAdoo, would have been obviated if the weak roads had been merged into stronger systems.

Under the McAdoo régime, labor tasted the advantages of standard wages imposed throughout the country regardless of the financial capacity of the employing roads. As a result, the doctrine that the ability of the rail employer to pay shall NOT be considered in fixing wages, has been elevated into a mystic labor dogma. Rail strikes and impaired labor morale since the end of government control can be traced back to this teaching. It has inspired the fierce resistance offered to the railroad labor board whenever that body has ventured to disregard the formula in favor of inevitable economic necessities.

In a general way the present American railway system is an east and west system. The east and west lines on the rail gridiron dominate and overshadow the north and south lines, or own them outright. The lines of traffic may be compared to the lines of force in a giant magnetic field, with its poles situated in the Atlantic and Pacific, some hundreds of miles east of New York and west of San Francisco, respectively. The American rail system developed this east and west transcontinental polarity from historical causes. Briefly, these were the controlling factors:

1. The tide of settlement rolled from east to west, carrying trade with it. 2. The first long lines were built west from the four big ports, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore. Capital in these ports built or combined the lines to enhance the business of the ports. 3. Until the construction of the Illinois Central and Mobile and Ohio, just before the civil war, the steamboats handled the north and south business and checked the building of rail lines in the central valley. 4. The political division of the country up to Appomattox helped develop the roads on an east and west alignment on both sides of the Ohio river.

Undoubtedly the present traffic flow disregards natural trade laws and economic engineering in the Mississippi-Missouri valley and its flanking valleys in Texas, Mississippi, and Alabama. From the standpoint of the central valley and the lakes basin, Chicago and New Orleans—not New York and San Francisco—should determine the location of the poles of the system. When the St. Lawrence seaway opens the lakes to the seven seas and makes Chicago a seaport, this maladjustment might become acute. Lines like the I. C. and L. & N., rather than the transcontinental systems now linking up in Chicago, will become of prime importance—even though they have to face intense north and south waterway competition. They are already beginning to feel that in the lower valley, as a result of the success of the government barge line and the building of modern terminals by the river ports.

Historically the building of the east-west trade system was nationally beneficial. It scattered industry and civilization in the hills and uplands dividing the central valley from the two coasts. It prevented American civilization from concentrating in the valleys bordering the navigable streams. America did not become a greater Egypt or Babylonia, as it would have done if settlement had begun at New Orleans and rolled north up the rivers as the French planned.

Oil Companies Once More Advance Prices of Crude

Another advance of 10 cents a barrel, the sixth within the last few weeks, was posted yesterday on all grades of North Louisiana and Arkansas crude oil by the Standard Oil company and the Texas company. Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas crude oils were advanced an average of 10 cents a barrel by the Magnolia Petroleum company. An increase of 10 cents a barrel in the price of all grades of Montana and Wyoming crude oils was announced by the Midwest Refining, Marland, Prairie Oil and Gas, and Sinclair companies.

Wonderful Opportunity

In New Ship Raising Invention

Patentee and owner of Ship Raising devices to raise sunken vessels wishes to sell half or more interest in patents. These patents represent the most ingenious and yet most simple new method that has ever been invented to raise ships from great depths of water. The inventor is an expert engineer with over fifty years' experience. Its tremendous possibilities are inevitable. This has been acknowledged by expert engineers.

Warning Against Scheme to Create False Market for "L" Stock.

It has been brought to our attention that a card is being distributed among passengers on the Chicago elevated trains with the evident purpose of stimulating a market for the Chicago Elevated railways stocks. Under the caption, "Bargains on the Bargain Counter," this card makes the assertion that "the Chicago Elevated railroads are the largest, greatest, and finest equipped elevated railroads in the world," and adds, "The common and preferred stock of these roads are on the bargain counter and are cheap at any price under $20 a share." It is also predicted on this card that when this stock "moves up around $25 or $30 a share" thousands of people will regret that they did not buy it "when it was on the bargain counter."

Such statements are absurd and unwarranted and we wish to warn the public against them.

H. M. Lytle, secretary of the publications committee of the Chicago Elevated railways, has written a letter to THE TRIBUNE calling attention to this card and stating that both the card and the information it contains are entirely unauthorized. He points out the damage which might be suffered by investors if a market for the stock should thus be stimulated and suggests that whoever is in back of it apparently has accumulated some of the stock, which he now is trying to unload. The name of William W. Black, which appears at the bottom of the card, evidently is fictitious, as the company has investigated, but has been unable to get any trace of him.

The facts of the matter are that the preferred and common stocks of the elevated railway company are just about hopeless speculations. No dividends have been paid on the preferred since June 1, 1914, and the accumulated dividends in arrears now amount to 51 per cent. No dividend has ever been paid on the common stock. The company has a funded debt ahead of these stocks of over $61,000,000. The company defaulted in payment of principal and interest on its $14,000,000 of 6 per cent secured notes at maturity July 1, 1919, and also defaulted in the interest on its debenture 6s of 1924 on the same date. Both of these still are in default. The prospects of a resumption of preferred dividends are remote—not to say improbable. When "William W. Black" mentions anything like $20 a share for these stocks he is romancing. The preferred is quoted on the Chicago curb around $6 a share and the common is offered in the open market at about $2.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

A broad demand continued for local unlisted securities; prices ruled firm with a tendency toward higher levels. Interest centered chiefly in the sugar shares, moderate gains being registered by the entire list. Columbia advanced a full point to 6 bid, 6½ asked, while Holland-St. Louis scored an advance of 1⅛ points at 6 bid, 6⅝ asked. Michigan was up a major fraction at 6 bid, 6½ asked, while Utah-Idaho sold at 3¼. The bid price of Godchaux preferred improved some 2 points to 87, without bringing out offerings.

An aggressive demand for the motor shares developed in the early session, Paige-Detroit on a heavy volume of trade advanced from 15 to top sales at 16⅞, but closed at 16¼ bid, 16½ asked. Motor Wheel was also strong, being up a full point at 12½ bid, 12¾ asked. Timken Axle closed at 11 bid, 11¾ asked, up 1 point. Ford of Canada retained its advance of the previous week—all sales ranging between 418 and 420.

Little change was noted in the Goodyear Tire and Rubber issues, the common being quoted 14½ bid, 15 asked; preferred 49½-51. Hurley Machine was bid up a point to 44 without effecting a sale. Some few transactions were reported in Burroughs Adding Machine at 138@140. Fairbanks Morse changed hands at 54. Creamery Package common was wanted at 38½, with odd lot offerings at 40; bids of 100 were general for the preferred. McCord common improved a minor fraction in the late trading at 7⅞ bid, 8¼ asked; preferred up $2.00 at 53 bid, 54 asked. Northwestern Yeast was quoted 197 bid, 200 asked, with few actual sales. Transactions of Chicago Railway Equipment common ranged between 32 and 33, while the preferred was quoted 25¼ bid, 25¾ asked.

Buying orders were again in evidence for the public utility shares, many issues advancing sharply because of the scarcity of offerings at current quotations. Northern Ohio Electric preferred and Commonwealth Power Railway and Light common were the outstanding features, the former advancing 6 points to a close of 34@36, while the latter gained some 5 points at 30 bid, 31 asked. American Power and Light common developed strength—up 4 points at 147 bid, 149 asked. Sales of the preferred ranged between 84 and 86. New Commonwealth Power Corporation preferred was bid up 2 points to 70½, with sales at 71@71¼. Cities Service issues were slightly higher—common closing at 188 bid, 192 asked, preferred 69 bid, 69½ asked; Bankers shares 19 bid, 19½ asked, all ex dividend. Illinois Traction common was weak, relinquishing 3 points to 44 bid, 46 asked.

NEW YORK.—Reports of good broad silk business are heard in the market, and these are borne out by the increased demand for raw silk, which would hardly be in order at current prices if manufacturers did not have business on their books to justify purchases.

NEW YORK.—The woolen and worsted piece goods market is now beginning to settle itself after a period of more or less wild overcoating buying. A readjustment of orders is taking place. About the middle of this week it became evident that, with an abundance of business, mills would eliminate those lines figured on a low margin of profit. Consequently, buyers who had thought themselves covered on low priced overcoatings found it necessary to enter the market again. As a result the overcoating market had been practically set back a full week.

Sheridan-Rogers Building

$60,000 6½% $60,000

THE Sheridan-Rogers Building consists of seven stores at the North West Corner of Sheridan Road and Rogers Avenue in Rogers Park. Rogers Park has had a phenominal growth during the past few years with the result that the immediate vicinity of these stores is made up of beautiful and desirable apartment buildings. With the growth of this neighborhood there has arisen the need for buildings of this character. One of Chicago's most prominent and well known drug firms occupies space in the building.

Transportation from this section of Chicago is very desirable, being adjacent to the express station of the Northwestern elevated railroad.

The bonds are an absolute first mortgage on the land and building, maturing serially with annual payments of $3000 beginning February 10th, 1924. The final maturity is February 10th, 1928.

The annual income from rents is in excess of $10,500 while the property recently sold for $108,000. The Chicago Title and Trust Company guarantees the title to the property and the trustee holds fire insurance in reliable companies to the full amount of the issue. Every precaution has been taken to make these bonds an ideal investment for the conservative investor.

GRAIN MARKETS ACT UNSETTLED; NOW OVERBOUGHT

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Grain markets were unsettled, wheat fluctuating rapidly within a range of 1¼c for the May, but averaged slightly higher. Coarse grains showed a very firm undertone from the start and at no time did corn get below the closing figures of the previous day. Closing trades were ⅛c lower to ⅝c higher on wheat, ½@⅝c up on corn, ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower on oats, and ⅝c higher on rye.

A heavily overbought condition was disclosed in all grains the past week, and while all deliveries with the exception of May wheat and oats sold at a new high for the season a general profit taking move resulted in a sharp break, which was partially recovered at the last. Wheat finished 2⅝c lower for May and ½@1⅝c higher on the deferred deliveries. Corn was off ⅛@1⅛c, oats ⅛@½c higher and rye ⅝c lower. Provisions held within narrow limits, with lard unchanged to 2½c higher at the last and ribs 5@10c lower as compared with the previous week.

Reaction to Close Week.

Foreign situation was regarded as better both from a grain and a political standpoint and there was fair buying of futures by commission houses early. On a bulge of around ½c houses with eastern connections sold freely and made a reaction of around 1c. The decline brought in excellent buying headed by houses with seaboard connections who absorbed the offerings on scale orders with a bulge of 1½c from the inside figure on the May later. The closing reaction was due to week end evening up.

New crop deliveries were in demand throughout the day with the trade apprehensive of damage to the new winter wheat crop, although the forecast suggested a breaking up of the cold spell Monday or Tuesday. Export demand was only fair, with business largely in Manitobas, and bids for hard winter at the gulf were reported materially below cost. Liverpool closed ½d higher.

Locals Buy Corn Freely.

Free buying of corn by several leading local professionals gave that market a firm undertone from the start and more than offset the effect of the break in wheat, the close being well toward the top. Export demand was in evidence at the seaboard and there was a fair demand here, while receipts were not large and the country is disposed to hold for higher prices. A break of 2@2½c in Buenos Aires Friday on better weather conditions had little effect, and it was followed by an advance of ½@1c yesterday.

Trade in oats was of fair proportions, and with prospects of a better eastern and southern cash demand and light offerings the market showed a rather firm undertone. Receipts were small and a reduction in local stocks is looked for during the week.

Rye in Demand.

Prospects of a material betterment in the political situation on the continent led to fair commission house buying, and with light offerings an early advance was easily attained. Late weakness in wheat led to local selling and a reaction. The two northwestern markets had thirty cars. Export demand remains low.

Commission house buying of lard and reports of a better cash demand had some effect on provisions early and offset the effect of a sharp break in hogs. Closing trades were at net gains of 7½@10c on lard, while ribs were dull and unchanged at 2½c lower. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the season to date aggregates 2,635,000, against 1,998,000 last year. Prices follow:

Stockholders of Reading Object to Merger Scheme

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 17.—Five holders of second preferred stock of the Reading company filed objections in the United States District court today to the feature of the modified Reading segregation plan which contemplates the merger of the Reading company and the Philadelphia and Reading Railway company. The merger plan if adopted, it is declared will violate the rights of all second preferred holders in that the plan does not provide for an equal distribution of the assets of the Reading company among all classes of its stockholders in liquidation. In such a dissolution it is contended all shareholders should be treated equally in the distribution of the assets.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export sales of 300,000 to 400,000 bu wheat, mainly Manitobas, were estimated to have been made at the seaboard Saturday with 200,000 bu corn.

Chicago handlers sold 75,000 bu wheat, 90,000 bu corn, 65,000 bu oats, and 5,000 bu barley to the domestic trade.

Premiums on cash wheat at Chicago show a tendency to advance. No. 2 red was quoted at 15@17c over May and No. 2 hard 2½c over to 2c under. Receipts, 11 cars. At the seaboard No. 2 red is quoted at practically the same figures as hard winter. Outside markets were unchanged to 2c higher.

Demand for cash corn was slightly less active and the basis was easier as compared with futures. No. 2 grades brought ⅝@1⅛c under, No. 3 grades 1⅝@2½c under, and No. 4 grades 2½@2¾c under May. Receipts, 203 cars. Outside markets were unchanged to 2c higher.

Offerings of cash oats remain small and with a fair demand the basis was unchanged, with No. 2 white ½@1c over and No. 3 white May to 1c under the futures. Receipts, 52 cars.

Eight ways to test the safety of your investments are given in this interesting booklet, "How to Select Safe Bonds." This important booklet (the coupon will bring your copy) has been prepared from the long and successful experience of George M. Forman & Company. Every investor, large or small, should know the facts it gives about getting higher yield with positive safety.

HOW TO SELECT SAFE BONDS

EIGHT WAYS to Test the Safety of Every Investment

1 Is Your Investment Protected by Property of Permanent Value?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why investments should be protected by property having a permanent value well in excess of the amount of the entire loan.

2 Does Your Claim Command Payment Before Other Obligations?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells what securities come before all others in obligations to pay promptly and fully.

3 Has the Property Sufficient Earning Power?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why a safe property must have an annual earning power of at least two and a half times the total annual interest on the loan.

4 Is the Property Adequately Protected by Insurance?
An important consideration, as fire often wipes out overnight a valuable property.

5 Is It Properly Managed?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why proper management is essential to insure prompt payment of interest and principal upon maturity.

6 Is the Title Clear?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells a sure way of insuring against loss through faulty title.

7 What Is the Moral Character of the Borrower?
As important as proper management—explained in this interesting booklet.

8 Who Offers the Securities You Buy?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why even the experienced investor must depend for safety entirely upon the reputation and length of service of the Banking House offering the investment. It tells of the conservative policy of painstaking investigation and selection which has made it possible for George M. Forman & Company to sell bonds for 38 years without loss to a customer, large or small.

Uneven declines of 15@40c were enforced in hogs on the closing session of the week, top dropping 30c and average 20c at $8.45 and $8, respectively. Light weights suffered the most decline, outsiders favoring the weightier hogs at the close. Shippers purchased half of the fresh receipts, taking 5,000, with the same number of fresh and "stale" hogs left unsold. Prices ruled 15@25c below previous Saturday.

Receipts last week were very erratic, 74,635 arriving on Monday, while only 10,215 were received Thursday, due largely to weather conditions. Fluctuations were as uneven as the receipts were irregular, although late prices were 10@15c above the low time of the week. Average price last week at $8.05 was lowest of the year, being 5c below previous week, $1.85 under a year ago, and $3.25 under the ten year average. Estimated average weight of hogs at 232 lbs equaled the lowest week since November, being 4 lbs lighter than previous week.

Unevenness featured the week's trade in cattle, with Monday and Tuesday scoring a sharp decline, most of which was regained Wednesday and Thursday, followed by a sharp decline Friday. Barring six head of fancy yearlings at $11.25, the week's top stopped at $11.00, Monday's top at $10.65 being lowest for any Monday since last July. Week's average price of good beef steers declined 15c to $8.85, against $7.55 a year ago. Calves advanced sharply during the week.

Top Lambs, $15.45.

Closing prices paid for desirable handy wooled lambs were highest of the week, with best reaching $15.45, while practically all other grades closed dull. Heavy shorn lambs dropped 25@50c under a week ago, to the lowest prices this season, selling largely at $10.25@10.50. Fancy light wooled lambs ruled 15@25c above a week ago, with heavy generally steady. Handy aged and yearling sheep figured slightly higher than closing prices last week, with shearing lambs also reflecting strength at the close. However, due to the sharp break initial day this week, the week's average price of lambs at $13.90 shows 10c loss compared with previous week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 22,000 cattle, 66,000 hogs, and 23,000 sheep, against 23,360 cattle, 74,635 hogs, and 22,749 sheep a week ago, and 20,775 cattle, 57,626 hogs, and 22,529 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 55,000 cattle, 185,000 hogs, and 67,000 sheep, against 55,997 cattle, 168,945 hogs, and 75,901 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs for Monday range from 40,000 to 80,000. Lester Armour marked 40,000, E. R. Gentry 47,000, W. H. Overman 55,000, J. T. Brown 60,000, F. R. Burrows 62,000, W. S. Nicholson and F. W. Waddell 70,000, J. M. Waters 71,000, George Brittain 74,000, and Robert Ellis 80,000.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Sentiment among wheat traders was somewhat more bearish after the close on the May delivery, but on the whole the buying side of the deferred deliveries is regarded with favor by commission houses. The selling which made the late break on Saturday in the May was on orders from a house with eastern connections. Unless the trade has materially underestimated the holdings of the eastern traders in some quarters the belief prevails that the liquidation by holders there is nearing its end. A local professional who was a free buyer of corn on Friday and again yesterday sold wheat freely through brokers, presumably hedging against the corn.

Corn bulls remain rather confident of their position. There has been a little change in sentiment in other quarters, and it was very noticeable that the aggressive buying on the part of commission houses has fallen off to some extent. At the same time there is no material pressure on the market, and until futures advance to a point where around 65c can be paid at Illinois loading stations hedging sales were expected to remain small. The bulk of the arrivals of corn expected here this week will be applied on to arrive contracts and was hedged as soon as bought.

"An exporter tells me the best bids for last half of February and first half of March loading at the gulf are 5½c less than actual cost," wired Thomson & McKinnon's Kansas City office. "These bids are better than offered for Canadian or Argentine wheat. We will have to make new export sales of at least 50,000,000 bu to put our markets in a healthy position, and even this would not make the situation a bullish one. The occasional sales at the gulf are distressed grain, where storage and interest is expensive and they are taking their losses. There are over 4,000,000 bu of wheat at the gulf."

Semi-monthly crop report covering Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, and Wisconsin, as compiled by George Bryant, agricultural statistician for Indiana, says wheat in Illinois has been damaged by severe weather, but it is too early to estimate the extent. Practically all of Illinois and Indiana are without snow protection.

Congestion of grain prevails at the seaboard and difficulty is being experienced in moving out wheat and other grains from Buffalo. The Lackawanna, Lehigh Valley, and Erie are busy moving coal and can furnish only a small amount of motive power.

Primary arrivals of wheat from July 1 to date aggregate 344,227,000 bu, compared with 316,121,000 bu last year. Receipts of corn from Nov. 1 are 119,576,000 bu, against 150,988,000 bu last year, and oats since Aug. 1 are 150,140,000 bu, against 134,776,000 bu last year.

A better flour demand was in evidence at Minneapolis, with a few mills reporting sales equal to about half of their daily capacity.

"Favorable weather is helping corn," said a Buenos Aires cable to Russell's News. "Crop prospects are improving except in the northern districts, where the crop is past recovery."

Keen competition exists among millers in the United Kingdom and bread prices are expected to be reduced 1d per four pound loaf in the near future. United Kingdom importers were reported after large quantities of American and Canadian low grade flours.

Official rye standards proposed by the secretary of agriculture under the grain standards act will be the subject of public hearings, it was announced in Washington yesterday, to be held at New Orleans Feb. 26, at Chicago Feb. 28; at Minneapolis March 1, and at New York March 7.

Where People Are Determined to Live

The Investment Security Increases

Every city has its section by which all other parts are compared.

In Chicago, that district lies within three blocks of Lake Michigan and north of the loop.

Measured by any civic standard—type of building construction, transportation, boulevards, parks, beaches, hotels, theatres, schools, churches, the great North Side of Chicago surpasses all other parts of the city.

Here people are determined to live.

And, as a result, real estate values of this dominating section of Chicago have had enormous increases in the last few years.

Such property is the security for Comlossy First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds. These Bonds are invariably secured by a direct closed first mortgage on high grade apartment buildings of fireproof construction, located within three blocks of the lake on Chicago's Great North Side.

No better type of security is obtainable for conservative investors.

The New York Times.

New York, Feb. 20.—[Special.]—In a generally uneventful and colorless movement of the week-end market, the incident which stood out conspicuously was the rise of sterling exchange to the highest rate since Great Britain's New York banking agents announced on March 20, 1919, that the British government had suspended purchases of sterling.

Prior to that announcement sight sterling had been "stabilized" around $4.75 through the placing in New York, first the $500,000,000 Anglo-French loan of 1915, then the $950,000,000 successive United Kingdom issues, and next, after the United States had entered the war, through the $4,200,000,000 advances made to the British government by the United States treasury.

Vote on Debt Funding Helps.

Today's highest price for sterling was $4.69¾. The advance was in response to the senate's vote for the debt funding bill. It remains for next week's market to show whether and to what extent this settlement of an awkward problem will, through its influence on financial sentiment, cause a further rise in the London rate. An advance no greater than that which occurred in the two months before the Dec. 13 price of $4.69 was touched would bring sterling to the par of exchange, $4.86⅝.

Resumption of free gold payments on all of England's paper curency, and removal of all restriction on gold exports, would be logical results. That action would be improbable when London could not draw gold from the continent to meet a sudden renewed demand from New York or India. But until such gold payments are resumed, it is not likely that sterling will touch parity.

Stocks Active and Steady.

Although the day's changes in stock market prices were, as a rule, unimportant, the total transactions were the largest of any Saturday since the first week of last June. So large a business following Friday's similarly huge total and without a rise of prices would usually suggest what Wall street calls "distribution." If so, the absence of any considerable declines would indicate that some one else was ready to take at slight concessions the stocks thrown over on "realizing sales."

The department of commerce gave out preliminary figures today on our November import trade, stating it as $294,000,000, which was described as "an increase of approximately $17,507,000 over the last preceding month." That would make the October imports $276,500,000. The department's official statement of the "preliminary figures for October, 1922," gave the total imports from Sept. 22 to Nov. 1 as $388,000,000. The November imports as now reported show up $83,000,000 above November, 1921.

New York Loans Expand.

The weekly statement of the New York clearing house banks issued today shows increases of $5,135,000 in loans and of $30,250,000 in net demand deposits, while time deposits decreased $7,195,000. Surplus reserve increased $6,434,990 to $19,383,050. Details of the statement, with comparisons follow:

MORE WORKERS, HIGHER WAGES, REPORT SHOWS

New York, Feb. 17.—A revival of business and industry was shown by a recent study of earnings, employment, and hours of nearly 600,000 workers in twenty-three industries during the last half of 1922, the National Industrial Conference board, a manufacturers' research organization, reported today. While there was a slight increase in earnings last December as compared with November, the report states that the increase was offset by an increase in the cost of living during the month.

The number of wage earners employed in the plants studied increased 14 per cent during the six months, and it was shown that employment at those plants at the beginning of 1923 was 27 per cent greater than in July, 1914. Average weekly earnings were shown to be 101 per cent higher in December, 1922, than in July, 1914, while the average hourly earnings rose 111 per cent during the same period.

·CHICAGO·STOCK·TRANSACTIONS·

Saturday, Feb. 17, 1923.

Day's sales, shares..................52,250 Total, 1923..........................2,246,700
Year ago..............................25,000 Previous year........................1,125,960

Chicago stocks were unusually active in the week-end session yesterday. A jump of 6 points in Yellow Taxi to above 80, a new high mark, and a volume of trading which represented half the day's total dealings was the feature of the market. The advance was a belated response to the excellent annual report and continued belief that the dividend rate will be increased. Wolff shares also showed unusual activity and advanced 1⅜. Borg & Beck and Hupp Motor made fractional gains, while Stewart-Warner and Union Carbide were fractionally lower.

THE ANDRIDGE
Ridge Avenue and Church Street Evanston

A Very Choice New 6½% Issue

$235,000

First Mortgage 6½% Bonds

Secured by North Shore Apartments

QUALITY— Not Quantity

THIS IS ONE of several exceedingly fine new offerings illustrating our aim to secure for our clients not the largest but the choicest of the new bond issues.

These bonds, we believe, will measure up to your expectations if you are looking for something just a little better, a little safer, a little more attractive than the ordinary offerings of sound first mortgage bonds. Why not be thoroughly pleased?

Security— Evanston Ground and Apartments

As you see from this picture, the building securing these bonds is handsomely designed and will be well constructed. The location of the ground at the northeast corner of Ridge Avenue and Church Street in Evanston is quite ideal. Transportation to the heart of Chicago is faster, more comfortable than the great majority of Chicago people enjoy. And, as everyone with an automobile knows, Ridge Avenue is one of the most beautiful residential streets of this lakeside suburban city and equally as popular as Sheridan Road as a thoroughfare to the other North Shore towns. The Andridge Apartments will make a delightful place to live and consequently produce a large income.

Earning Power

Plainly speaking, this property will produce four times as much money as the owner will need to pay the bondholders their interest, and a great deal more than required both to meet the interest and pay off the bonds as a part of them come due serially each year. Naturally this makes a very safe investment.

4% Federal Income Tax paid for the bondholders, giving them a net yield of 6½%. These bonds are sold in amounts of $1,000, $500, $250 and $100. Also on easy terms, 10% down, 10% a month. A small but very superior issue for our large clientele—so order NOW.

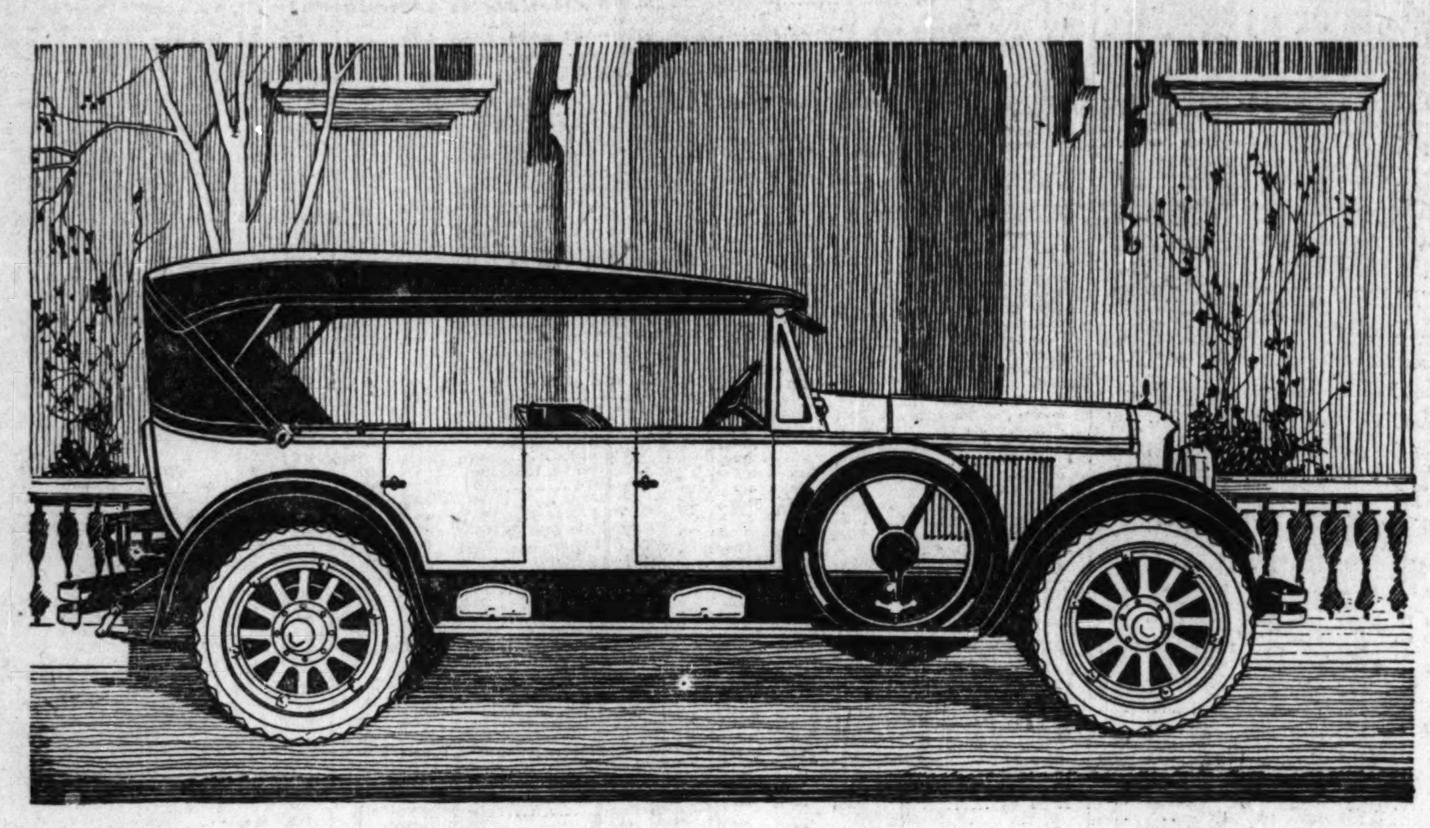
PAIGE

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA



Our Ideal Paige ~ Your Ideal Car

IF your ideal car is one of dignified beauty, the newly refined lines of the Paige will charm you. If your ideal of beauty means also richness of detail and substantial construction, the new Paige bodies will satisfy you.

For Paige Ideal bodies are now doubly braced, extra stout. Double strips of patent leather keep metal from touching metal or wood. This idea from Europe insures a forever silent body.

The richness of the new Paige bodies is sensed by hand and eye. Not a piece of imitation leather in the open cars. Superbly loomed velours in the enclosed types. All instruments beneath a single glass panel in a walnut dash. Walnut steering wheel—adjustable to driver's convenience.

Undoubtedly your ideal car is a Paige in performance. Like its predecessor, this Paige 6-70 will prove America's unchallenged champion in speed, hill-climbing and acceleration. Likewise our Ideal Paige goes beyond even your ideals in easy handling.

The new clutch, with six springs instead of one and a light-weight driven member, gives smooth, easy engagement. The new transmission gives finger-touch gear shifting with a bare 3-inch movement. And it is almost as quiet in first and second speeds as in high.

A new degree of endurance—of long life at reduced upkeep—has been given the Ideal Paige by scores of chassis improvements. The finest practical workmanship by precision tools and gauges, is standard throughout. A new automatic take-up for the chain driven auxiliary shafts does away with need for adjustment.

Since 1909 the same officers, directors and engineers have been working together on the development of the Ideal Paige. Each year has brought it closer. Now it is achieved. And the success of the Paige-built Jewett has so increased the volume and reduced the overhead of the great Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company that this Ideal Paige is still a car of reasonable price.

Paige now definitely takes its place as one of America's finest cars. A Six of course—because the Six is the ideal type motor for balanced smoothness, flexibility, long life and care-free simplicity. This Ideal Paige is here—ready to charm you—to satisfy you with its comfort—and thrill you with its performance. Don't fail to see it for yourself.

Standard equipment of all Paige Models includes: 6 cord tires, tubes, rims. Spares mounted one each side, with lock and tire cover. Motometer. Double bar spring bumpers front and rear. Luggage carrier. Combination tail and stop light. Automatic windshield wiper. Aluminum kick plates. Gasoline gauge on dash. Eight day Waltham clock. Electric cigar lighter. Green glass sunshade. Rear view mirror. Snubbers front and rear. Power tire pump. (310)

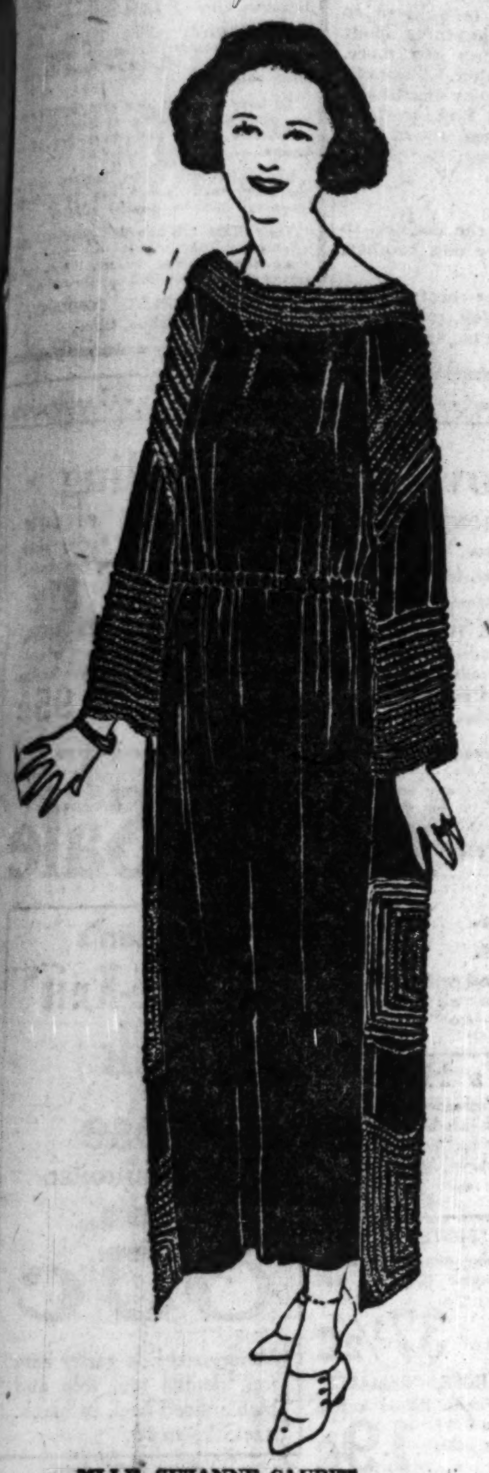
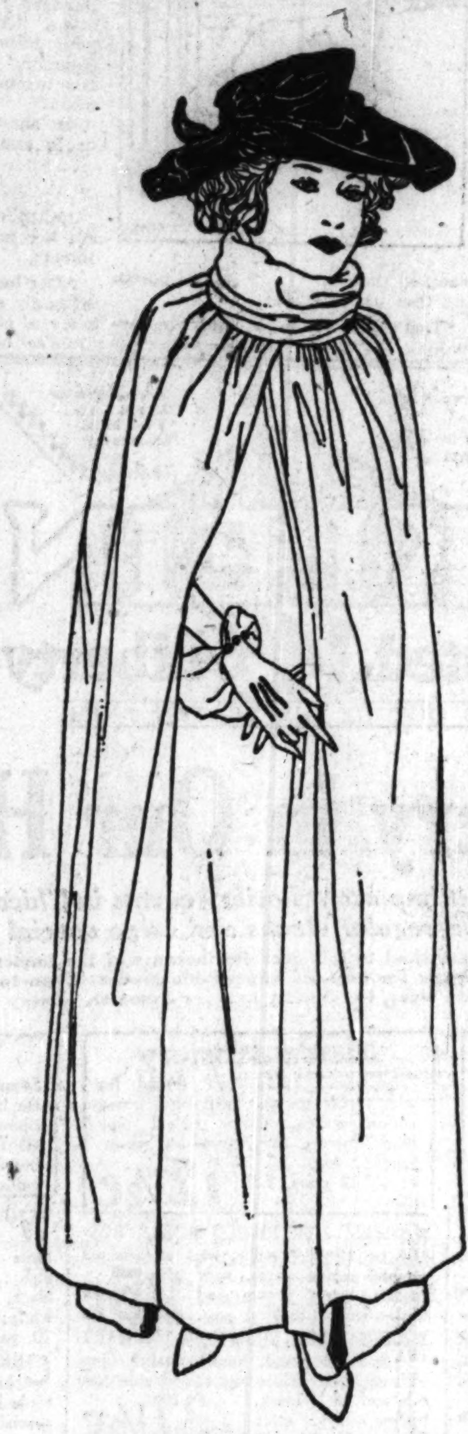
Fashions Beauty Contests

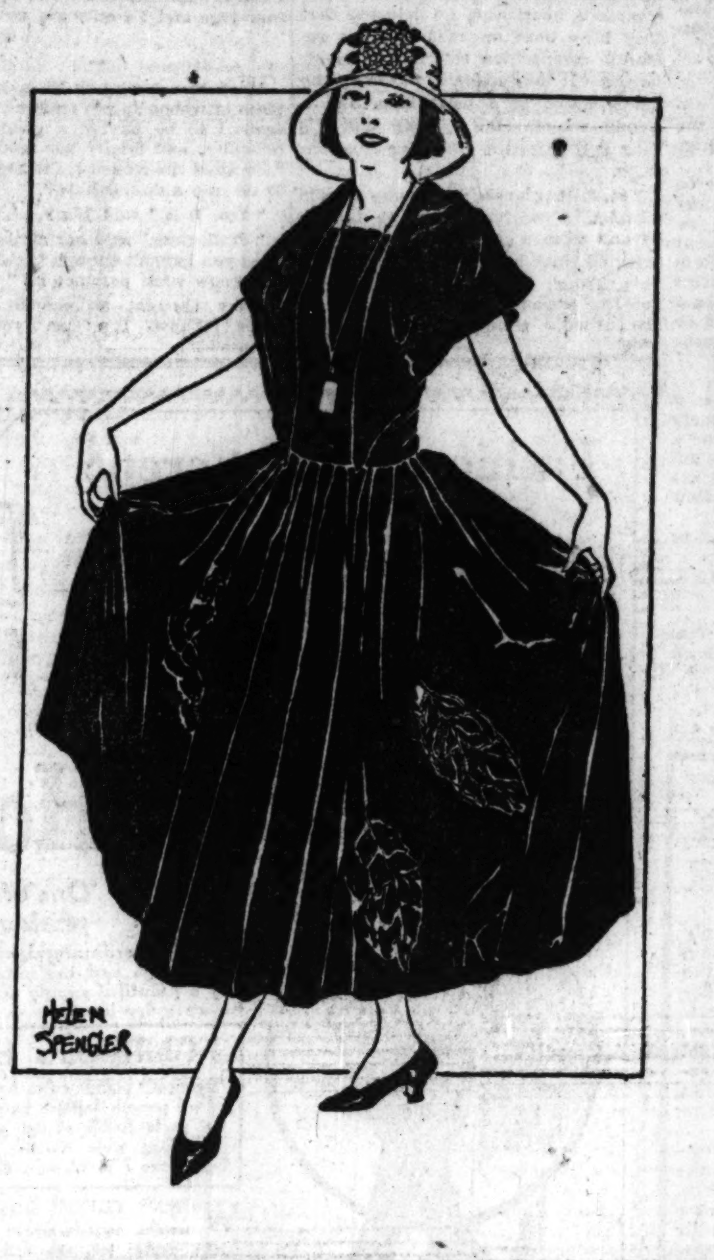
—How They Look in Civies—



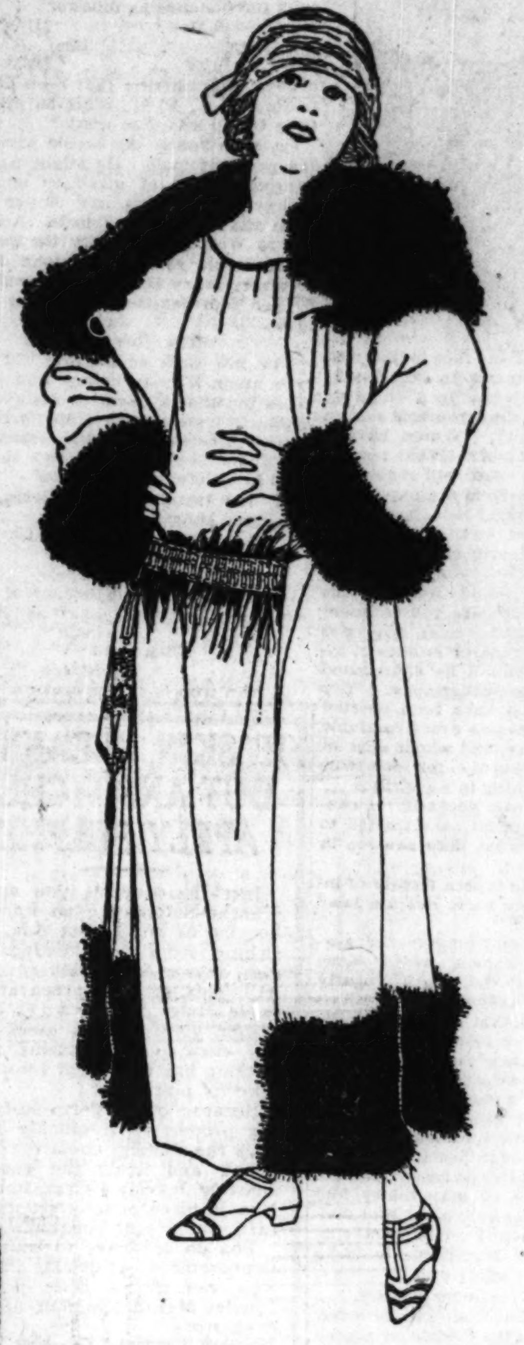
MLLE. SUZANNE CAUBET.
Of "The Monster."



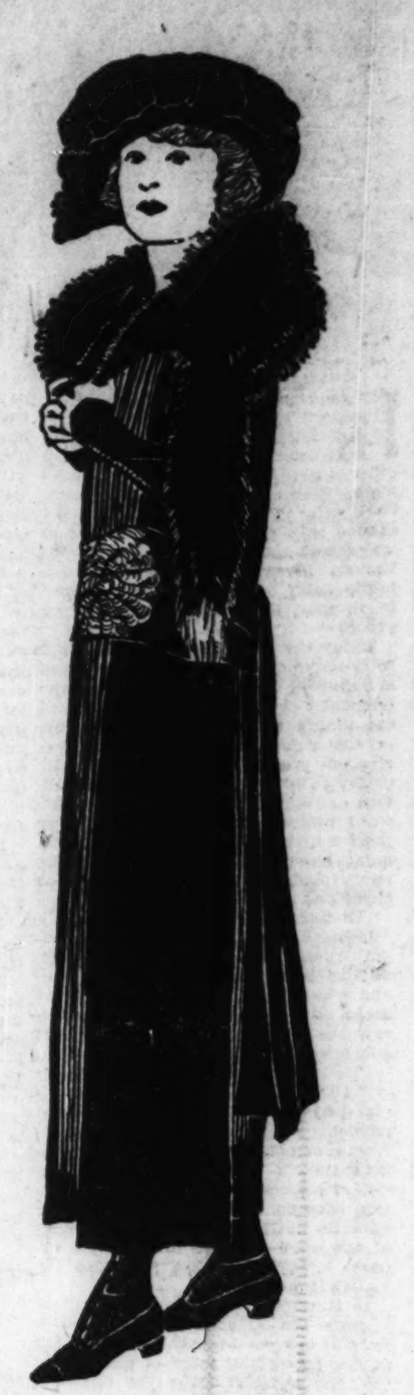
MRS. FISKE
Of "The Dice of the Gods."



MISS GENEVA MITCHELL
Of "Sally."



MISS LILLIAN FITZGERALD
Of "Make it Snappy."



MISS GRACE GEORGE
Of "To Love."

THESE ARE ACTUAL SKETCHES MADE BY OUR ARTIST OF ACTRESSES IN CHICAGO LAST WEEK.

MLLE. SUZANNE CAUBET.
Of "The Monster."

"THE French design the clothes for the world," smiled Mlle. Caubet, "but it takes American women to wear them. They have the figures and the chic. Of course, there are exceptions among the Frenchwomen, but——" She shrugged her young shoulders.

Martial et Armand designed the girlish frock in which she is pictured, of black canton crêpe, and beaded it in white in a Grecian pattern. The sleeves, close fitting down to the elbow, widen considerably at the wrist. Heavily beaded side panels hang several inches below the hem, but not long enough to hide the slim band of platinum and diamonds she wears just above her left ankle.

Her slippers of light gray suede fit snugly across the instep and fasten on the side. With them she wears sheer stockings of the same shade.

"This isn't the dress I wanted to wear," she confessed. "I have one from Molyneux that is adorable. It is of blue serge, a wide weave that looks heavy, but really isn't. It has a panel in the front and one in the back, beaded in cut steel, faced with gray canton crêpe. Then there is a narrow, v-shaped collar and tiny gray cuffs. But, alas, it had to go to the cleaner!"

MRS. FISKE
Of "The Dice of the Gods."

IF, as Mrs. Fiske says, she never gives ten minutes' thought to her clothes, Milgrim, who designed for her the afternoon costume in which she is sketched above, spent considerably more than that in evolving a color scheme and a simplicity of line so admirably suited to the Titian gold of her hair and the slimness of her shoulders.

The gown and cape are of a rosy orchid velvet, the latter lined throughout with chiffon of a slightly deeper shade. The dress is straight and close fitting, with slashed sleeves of matching chiffon, caught at the wrist by a narrow circlet of jet beads. Hanging from just above the hip line and fulled onto the dress, are four wide looped panels, the two at the sides reaching to the ground, and those in front and back an inch or two shorter. They are faced with the chiffon that lines cape.

The hat, large and soft, somewhat like a glorified tam in shape, is of deep purple velvet, its only ornament a long, slim quill of black enamel.

Her suede slippers and stockings are a delicate shade of gray.

MISS GENEVA MITCHELL
Of "Sally."

WHEN asked as to the type of dress she liked best, Miss Mitchell answered without the slightest hesitation that she almost always wore the "quaint, old fashioned" kind.

She says that at this moment she has two loves of evening dresses, one of flesh colored chiffon, trimmed in bands of coral and lavendar beads, backed with silver cloth, the other black chiffon velvet. Both have tiny cap sleeves, rounded neck lines, close fitting bodices, and long, full skirts. Medallions of Irish lace are scattered over the hooped skirt of the velvet, which opens down the front to show panels of jade green and an underskirt of the lace.

The frock she is wearing here is of heavy black taffeta. A wide fichu of the silk covers her shoulders, but instead of crossing in front, as usually behooves a fichu, lets its pointed ends hang below the waistline. It is picoted in gold, as are the clusters of black taffeta flowers appliqued at random on the skirt.

Her hat is of the softest meadow green silk, laid in quarter inch tucks over crown and brim. In the center is a round cluster of orange blossoms, edged by formal little green, leaves, the effect being something like that of a flattenede out colonial bouquet.

MISS LILLIAN FITZGERALD
Of "Make it Snappy."

UNDAUNTED by the blackness of Chicago smoke, Miss Fitzgerald wears her favorite fawn color when she goes a-shopping. She says that, although she has two fur coats, this one, made for her by Hickson, is the one she likes best. It is of fawn broadcloth, collared, cuffed, and banded around the lower edge in kit fox. It wraps closely about her, its long lines unbroken except for a slight draping where it buttons low on the left side.

The chemise dress she is wearing is of crêpe de chine in a matching shade, sleeveless, and with a rounded neck. The detachable girdle is of yellow and white beads, edged in monkey fur, and caught on her left hip in two puffs and long wide ends of the dress fabric.

Her small hat is of black milan straw, wound in brilliantly colored Persian silk, and pierced on the right side by a jade and brilliant pin. The coloring of the silk is echoed in the beading of her bag.

Her shoes are sand sueda, heeled and strapped in tan kid. By the way, she wears a No. 2 shoe, which she declares is a monstrosity, but which most of her sex regard with envy.

MISS GRACE GEORGE
Of "To Love."

THIS is just the kind of dress Miss George says she prefers for street wear. It is a practical, one piece model of fine navy blue serge, with side panels hanging a little below the hem. The effect of paneling is repeated in the front and back by up and down rows of black silk braid. A wide belt of the serge ties once in the back, and is ornamented in the front with a large, flat rosette of narrow, shirred ribbon of lacquer red and gold. The sleeves are long and tight.

Her hat is of black velvet, with a soft, upturned brim, caught on one side with a silver arrow. Her fur scarf is brown pointed fox.

To complete the general simplicity and smartness of her costume, she wears high, laced English walking shoes of dark tan.

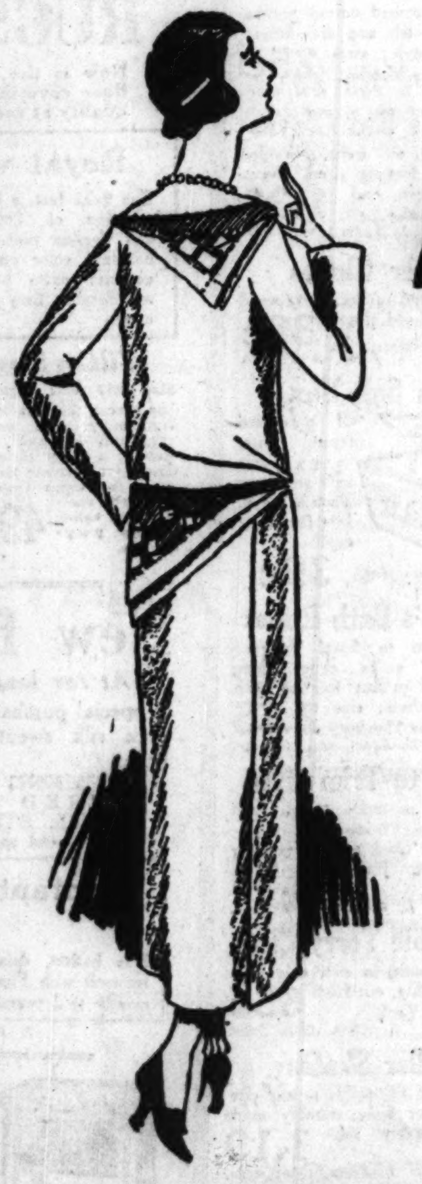
When questioned as to what she liked in the evening, Miss George replied that she usually wore black and white. Then she smiled. "Occasionally, though, I feel I must have something vivid, so I wear red. Long skirts? Yes, for evening gowns, but not for every day. They are too awkward and uncomfortable."

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

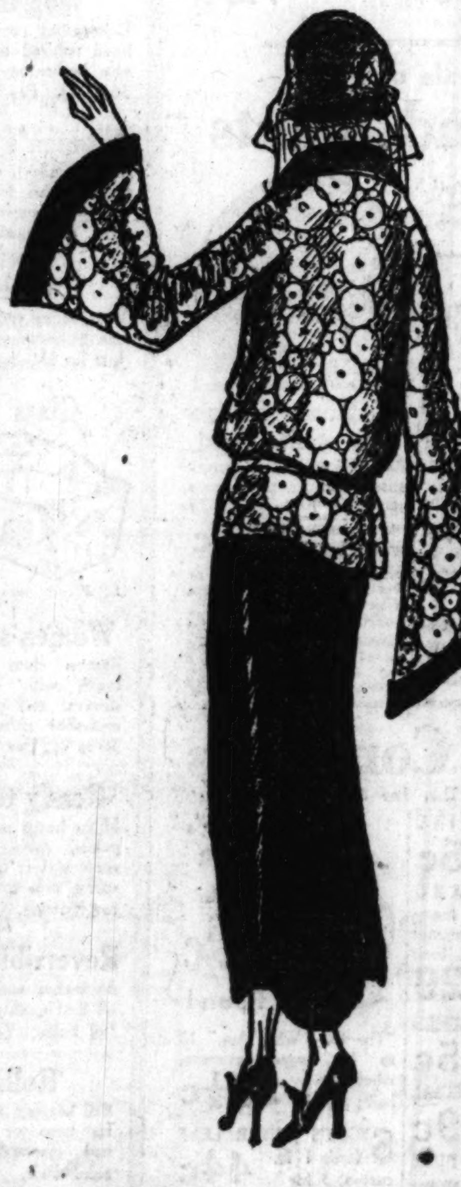
GAY HANDKERCHIEFS FIND FAVOR.

By Mary Brush Williams.

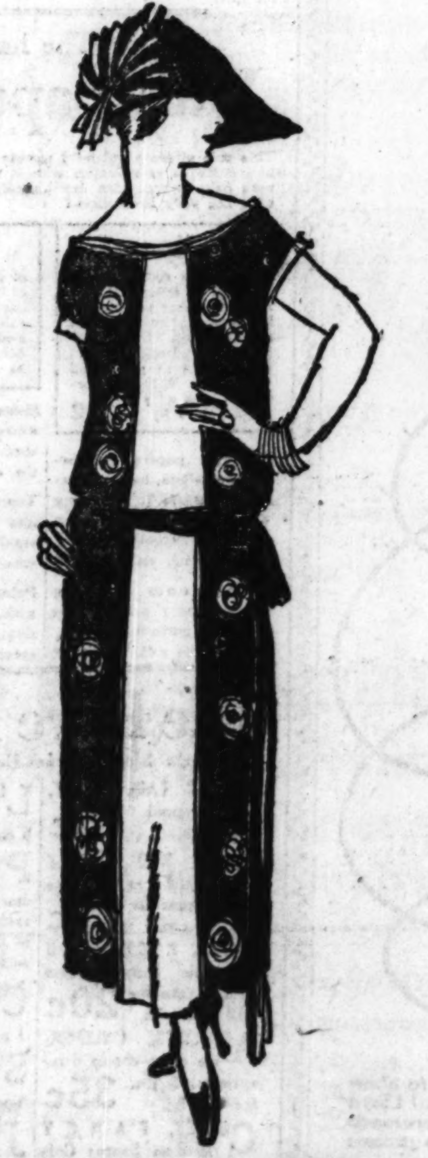
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]



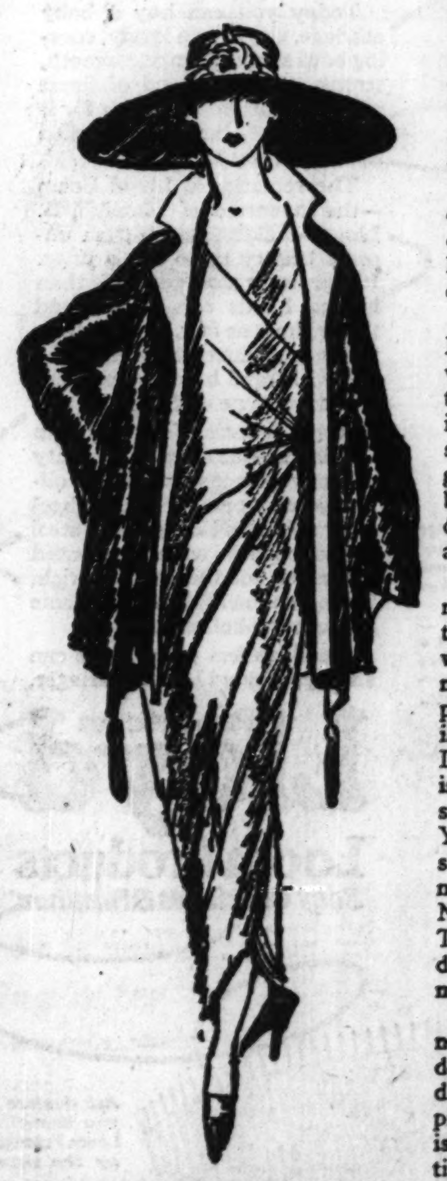
Belt and collar served by the handkerchief.



Printed crêpe for coat; black crêpe for skirt.



Gayly colored flowers are sprinkled over black Persian crêpe.



Red satin jacket with brilliant yellow gown.

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—It seems strange, doesn't it, that out of all the conceits displayed in the openings nothing has found favor in the popular fancy sufficient to place it instead of the gay colored handkerchief as an ornament? There is a French girl married to a big 6 foot 3 American in the diplomatic service who until recently was stationed in Berlin. The young French woman (who by the simple performing of a wedding ceremony became American) seemed to like her diplomatic post pretty well, considering that she springs from a race that does not seem to be temperamentally congenial with the German.

But this is a fashion article and not one on psychology—only, would you guess it?—you cannot always separate the two. Right there in Berlin you might have written an article on the psychology of style. There were the Americans, with their straight figures, their clear eyes that looked straight at you, and their clothes, built along the lines of Parisian models, but appearing to have been turned out in numbers by machines. Standardized, I believe, is the word that is supposed to cover that look.

Then there were the Germans, who didn't seem like much of anything except a rather heavy, shapeless mass—young women who, you would say from the look of their figures, were the mothers of seven children, all sons.

Through the social circle composed of these representatives, at country clubs, at luncheons, at dances, trailed the slim young French wife of the American diplomat, in her high heeled slippers, and, you might say, stylistically speaking, she blazed a path of light. I liked to figure out her costuming from the standpoint of the economy of her buying, as well as from the modish feature of every article.

There was the brown fur coat that looked so ravishing with her brownish coloring topped with hair of spun gold. It was in three-quarter length and of kolinsky, raglan in shape, with a little ripple to it round the bottom, and it slipped on and off easily. On all types of occasions that coat was available. You saw it at the country club in the morning and at the hotel dance at night. If she had gone to Saint Moritz it would have been equally available there, and she could have worn it on the train journey. No ermines for evening, no fur lined cloth coats for sports and travel that would make big trunkfuls of luggage to ship about. And, most of all, no dissipation of clothes allowance over a lot of things until the allowance began to give out and one had to economize on articles below the grade that is advantageous to buy.

A gray tailored suit for almost every occasion there was, with the most beautifully matched stockings and perfect fitting low shoes always, and about five evening dresses in lovely colors and simple lines.

And under the flap of the pocket to that tailored suit, pinned by one corner and falling limping like a flag that has been in battle, was always a gay colored chiffon handkerchief. It wafted like a signal to an enemy in a war that was raging still.

You have heard about this practice, of course, and also about binding the neck in those of similar design and coloring but heavier material. Likewise you have perhaps heard of winding them round the hips. But have you seen them used as in the accompanying drawing, with one of them acting as a sort of modification of a sailor collar, the point in the back falling nearer the right shoulder than the left, and another handkerchief exactly like it serving as a low belt, the point going over the left hip?

The conceit is a clever one, I think, and rendered especially pretty in this costume by reason of the color scheme. The dress is brown, and the handkerchief brown and yellow, with a little reminiscence of faded pink flowing through it.

The most effective costume that we saw at the Boeuf-sur-le-Toit—the beef on the roof—club, where one drops in at unearthly hours as well as through the day to eat pate de foie gras and dance, is the one reproduced in the second sketch. It consists of a coat of printed crepe satin of a white ground, the design consisting of circles in red and black. The edging of the collar and cuffs is black crepe de chine to match the skirt—which is straight and simple.

We tried to figure out how this obviously brand new costume was distinguished over the styles of the season before it was born. All we could say was that moderation is the keynote of all its movements. The sleeves are not unlike those of the day preceding, but a little less exaggerated. The bodice is still blousing, but not so low and not so full as I have seen similar ones in other seasons. The skirt is far from full. Of course, you will have to demonstrate to me that the godet line is going to prevail. You might say that I, as a writer of fashions, should demonstrate this to you. I will commit myself to say only that it is offered on the market. Not many have as yet appeared in public places. The straight skirt of the present costume is slit down either side and "set" with a strip of the coat material.

The third gown has a gay look about it—but why not, with the Riviera season on? It is hand embroidered on old Persian crepe. Roses and flowers of different sizes are scattered over in jaunty reds, pinks, blues, and greens. The panel down the front is of framboise, or raspberry pink, and is stitched tightly to the front of the frock.

The last offering represents a charming actress of the Theater Palais Royal wearing a costuming with a jacket of red satin over a draped gown of brilliant yellow. This same material and color lines the jacket. Two tassels weight the long folds on either side the front of the wrap. The large hat by Reboux is trimmed with one pinkish rose set flat against the crown.

LAWS OF ATTRACTION : : : : By Doris Blake

IT was some years ago the word "affinity" sprang into popularity as descriptive of the attraction of one male and one female unto the other, usually as an alibi in instances where a man ran off with his neighbor's wife. The word was quickly degraded into the most hackneyed and vulgarized noun in the dictionary. Although invented by poets, it soon found itself ostracized in prose—that is, in nice, law abiding, home loving prose.

Today the word, generally speaking, is synonymous with an "affair," and is delivered with raised brows and the unspoken deduction that the involved are acting without benefit of clergy, or else refers to headstrong, inexperienced young boys and girls who marry in the face of all interested advice and will complacently invoke the word affinity as reason enough for their actions, there being no instrument like the popular word or the ready made phrase to help people to cheat and excuse themselves.

Dictionary Holds It Is Esteem.

Coupled, as the word is, with scandal, there are intelligent and high minded people who hold it in esteem and who believe it has a place in the realm of the natural and the practical; that it is not the invention of dreamers and idealists or lawbreakers.

The scientific definition of affinity is "a chemical attraction which takes place at insensible distance between particles of bodies and unites them to form a compound." The dictionary allows that it is "a spiritual relationship or attraction existing between certain persons, especially persons of the opposite sex." The scientific defining of the word provides more ample excuse, however, for the mad and the foolish in love.

Is it unreasonable to believe there is some law of physical attraction, a natural law, as difficult of explanation as the compelling force of electricity? Can the physical person be regarded as a combination of elements to be acted upon by other elements of complemental nature? Is there such a thing as chemical affinity between human beings? Or is the word an excuse only when two persons of opposite sex go headlong into impropriety and have not the courage to admit it?

Certainly every one possesses a definite, individual taste with regard to the other sex. It is a common personal experience that certain individuals of the opposite sex are distasteful to us, with no word or deed from them to ascribe the repulsion. Others leave us cold, indifferent; others register no impression of any nature, while others may stimulate our keenest interest and pleasure. And one may appear who attracts so completely that everything in the world is worthless and empty compared with union with such a one. What are the qualifications of that one? What are his or her peculiarities?

Responsive Elements Meet.

In a dense crowd you may perceive a face which attracts you. You may have no idea what the face is like, and would be quite unable to describe it, but it appealed to you in a startling manner, and you find yourself asking with keen curiosity, "Where have I seen that face before?" What responsive element is it that will register a strong impression from a glimpse of a head, a back, a walk?

As in the case of gravitation, the law of attraction is nearly always reciprocal. The common saying "Waiting for Mr. Right," would indicate the existence of an obscure presentiment that every man and woman possesses certain individual characteristics of attraction which cannot be substituted without creating disharmony. You know women who have been courted by men who possessed every desirable quality apparently, and whose offer of marriage was spurned for one who seemed toally lacking in his virtues.

Have you not said yourself, "I cannot see how he could be attracted to that girl," or "What does she see in him?"

Has every male type a female counterpart? Is there some definite law? If so, what is it?

It is said if you compare the portraits of the women which some famous man has loved, you will nearly always find that they are closely alike. So it is claimed that every girl who strongly attracts a man recalls to him other girls he has greatly admired.

"He [or she] is just the type I like," is a common admission.

Otto Weininger believed in a definite law of affinity between men and women, in which he dignifies the word by a mathematical formula based upon the exact percentage of masculinity and femininity in each individual, and finding perfect union in one who supplies the missing percentage to make a complete and perfect unit.

Here's the Weininger Theory.

It must be understood first, however, that according to the Weininger theory no man is 100 per cent male and no woman 100 per cent female. "The fact is," he says, "that males and females are like two substances combined in different proportions, but with either element never wholly missing. We find, so to speak, never either a man or a woman, but only the male condition and the female condition. Any individual, "A" or "B," is never to be designated merely as a man or a woman, but by a formula showing that it is a composite of male and female characters in different proportion; for instance as follows:

$$A=\begin{cases} a\,M \\ a'W \end{cases} \qquad B=\begin{cases} B\,W \\ B'M \end{cases}$$ always remembering that each of the factors, a, a', B, B', must be greater than O and less than unity."

Or, John Jones, say, would never be 100 per cent male. He might be any varying degree of maleness and femaless combined, as, say, 80 per cent male and 20 per cent female. According to Weininger's theory the perfect union would result were John Jones to marry Mary Brown, who would be 80 per cent female and 20 per cent male.

Try This Out.

The law runs as follows: "For a true union it is necessary that there come together a complete male and a complete female even although in different cases the male and female are distributed between the two individuals in different proportions."

If, for instance, an individual be composed thus:

$$\text{Tom}\begin{cases} \tfrac{3}{4}\text{ male} \\ \text{and} \\ \tfrac{1}{4}\text{ female} \end{cases}$$

then the perfect complement of Tom would be Ellen compounded as follows:

$$\text{Ellen}\begin{cases} \tfrac{1}{4}\text{ male} \\ \text{and} \\ \tfrac{3}{4}\text{ female} \end{cases}$$

A man who is 40 per cent male and 60 per cent female would find his perfect mate in a woman 60 per cent masculine and 40 per cent female.

This is an exercise or game or art which you might readily acquire and try out on your circle of friends and acquaintances. It may lack confirmation in some cases of philosophical couples who have settled down after disillusion into the best of friends and comrades, cherishing no delusion that they have been kneaded into the romantic composition referred to as affinities. It may explain, however, the happy union of a weak man and a strong woman; the he-man and his baby doll wife; the fifty-fifty relationships.

Too, it may explain why one man is completely captivated by the beauty of one woman while another cannot imagine what his friend sees in her to rave about; why another man may consider a woman beautiful who, from the esthetic standpoint, is actually ugly.

Mary was trying to tie a bow in a piece of ribbon to pin on her doll. She seemed to be having a good deal of difficulty, and finally her mother said, "Perhaps the ribbon isn't long enough to tie into a double bow."

"Yes, it is," said Mary.

"Well, then," said her mother, "perhaps you haven't enough patience. Do you know what patience is?"

Mary thought a moment. Then: "Yes, I know. It's 'Can't you wait a minute?'"

Dick and John had been offered pay by their father if they should rake the leaves from the terraced lawn. I watched them [illegible] porch, and then called Dick.

"Don't you see how hard you are making the work? You're raking up hill. Rake the other way and you'll get through sooner.

Dick grinned impishly at me: "That's just it. It takes longer this way, and dad is paying us by the hour."

Eleanor was always overjoyed to tell her mother, "Mother, I got 100 in spelling today." After a while the hundred report wasn't brought in so often. "You don't say anything about your hundred in spelling any more, Eleanor," said her mother. "Doesn't the teacher tell you your mark any more?" "O, yes," said Eleanor, "she does, but it seems she ran out of hundreds and now she gives 85."

Judith was taken to the hospital to see her mother and her new brother, Robert.

After looking him over carefully and critically she said: "Well, mother, he is a real nice baby, isn't he; and he has a fine set of hair."

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

My Youth Preservers

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Just about a year ago I presented to my readers in this column a set of twelve exercises to be done daily, a series which I concluded, after years of experience in this direction and from practical application, were the most complete and best form of home gymnastics which could be applied to the figure daily to keep it young, healthy and beautiful.

Following their presentation I have received hundreds and hundreds of letters from women readers, proclaiming them to be all and more than I said.

Get the Habit.

And so I repeat them today for the benefit of those whose notice they may have escaped, and for new readers, because I want every girl and woman reader of mine to adopt these twelve youth preservers as an important part of their day. Particularly do I want the young business girl to get the morning exercise habit in order that she may maintain her health, her youth, and her beauty. And I urge, too, the older girl, whose occupation is of sedentary nature, to adopt the habit of these daily exercises in order that she may offset the strain and wear and tear of business life. For without some form of rehabilitation daily she is bound to change into a less attractive woman and a less efficient worker.

The woman in the home should regard the business of preserving her youth as seriously—if not more so—as her business sister. By the nature of her environment she is more inclined to slump and to put on weight.

Secret of Youth.

These excercises take care of every muscle in the body from head to foot. They are simple of execution, and will aid greatly in reducing if that situation is to be met. On the other hand, they will help to put on weight and above all they supply that necessary daily muscular movement which will preserve the normal youth and beauty of the whole person far beyond middle age.

Do them the first thing every morning, immediately upon arising, in loose clothing and in a well ventilated room. Then hop into the bath tub, out again, rub well—and see for yourself what they do in the way of bestowing pep and energy. I know from my own personal experience. They are Youth Rejuvenators as well as Youth Preservers.

Do It Now.

There is no better time than today to begin them. It is better for those who have been doing no excercise to take these on in doses of four the first week, four the following week—prefaced with the first four learned—and the third week take on the last four—prefaced with the previous eight. Or, you may divide into groups of three until the series is mastered and completed.

Do not make a job of them in the beginning. Begin gradually; say, five times for each single movement. When the set is complete you may repeat up to ten and fifteen times.

They require not more than ten minutes at most, and no other ten minute expenditure will give you the health and beauty returns. But I will let you find that out for yourself. You will.

Anyway, get the habit of this daily excercise and Begin Today.

POSITION—Many of the exercises to follow begin with this position, so practice it until you can take and retain it without constraint: Heels on same line and as near together as your conformation permits; feet straight ahead; knees straight, but without stiffness; hips level and drawn back slightly; body erect and stretched up as if you were being held up by the head; abdomen flat; chest high; shoulders falling evenly; arms and hands hanging naturally; palms lightly touching thighs; weight of body resting mainly on balls of feet; head erect and squarely to front; chin in but not down; eyes straight ahead. Then, for exercise 1, from Position bring hands up and outward in wide circle until backs of palms reach overhead, inhaling as you bring hands up; exhale as you bring them down. Do slowly five times.

EXERCISE 2 (A)—From Position bring hands to shoulders, fingers turned in; knuckles out; elbows close to body. Do this and the three following movements of this exercise with a quick, sharp command: One! Two! So that you can feel muscles taut and firm. Repeat five times.

(B)—From A shoot hands straight out at sides, stretching to finger tips, arms in straight line from shoulder, palms down. Back. Five times.

(C)—From A shoot hands straight overhead, stretching to finger tips. Back. Five times.

EXERCISE 3—From Position bring hands up to almost straight line on chest, elbows in line with shoulders, wrists straight, palms down, fingers nearly together; fling arms out wide. Back. Do five times on sharp command.

EXERCISE 4—From Position extend arms full length; keep rest of body firm; begin to make circles with extended hands and arms; begin with small ones and increase to circles of as large dimension as you can describe without putting the body out of position. Describe five circles on forward and five on backward start.

EXERCISE 5 (A)—Assume good standing position; bend trunk forward until it is at right angles to legs; exhale on downward move; back to position, inhaling. Execute slowly; keep knees straight, and do not duck head on downward move.

(B)—Bend trunk back slowly, inhaling on backward movement, exhaling as you recover position. Do five times each.

EXERCISE 6—Arms over head, fingers clasped, bend to right five times, then to left five times. Keep arms clsoe to head, knees straight, and feet firmly on ground.

EXERCISE 7—Knees straight, feet firmly on ground, twist trunk to right, at same time extending arms sideward. Recover position. Then to left, inhaling on twist, exhaling on return to position. Do five times each.

EXERCISE 8—Raise arms overhead; bend trunk forward and swing arms downward between legs; raise trunk and bend backward, swinging arms up over head again. Do five times and moderately fast. You may add to this by turning at waist and swinging both arms down on side of either leg.

EXERCISE 9 — Assume correct standing position, feet apart, arms out at sides; twist waist to right and touch finger tips of right hand to toes of left foot. Reverse. Repeat five times. When you can touch the toe try to touch the floor on level with the heel, for that involves greater waist twisting.

EXERCISE 10—Swing right leg forward and extend right arm (both with forcible movement); force leg upward until it touches hand, keeping other leg straight, knee unbent, and foot firmly on ground. Also keep body from inclining forward. Repeat with left leg and left arm. Five times each.

EXERCISE 11—Hands on hips; raise right thigh and knee forcibly with muscles tensed, until they are at right angles to the body; lower leg to floor. Do not derange position of trunk, nor relax muscles on lowering knee. Stretch foot to toe tips. Repeat five times. Then with left foot.

EXERCISE 12—Rise on toes. Bend knees and extend arms sideward, squat slowly, keeping body erect. Go down as far as you can; back. Repeat five times. Until you get a balance control you may place hands on hips and go down.

Depths of Misery.

It happened when I was 12 years old. Since I had become captain of the freshman football team there was no evidence of a diminution of the sense of my own importance. I was to spend Sunday with my sister in the city. I arrived at the station with a dress suit case in one hand and a round cardboad hat box in the other. Into the box mother had packed some edible surprises for the young housekeeper—a chicken pie, a loaf of new bread, a jar of home made sweet pickles, and some apples.

My favorite best girl, with whom I had had a falling out, was at the station and followed me into the car. Just inside the door the bottom of the box, which had become water soaked from the condensation of the steam from the hot bread and pie on the inside and the intense cold outside, detached itself from the sides, precipitating the miscellaneous contents. The casserole in which the chicken pie had been baked broke, also the pickle jar. The apples rolled to every corner of the car.

I dropped into the nearest seat, enduring utmost chagrin as passengers negotiated their way over and around the potpourri, but the depth of indignity and embarrassment came when a husky brakemen entered with a huge coal shovel and tossed the débris out of the door. To this day I do not enjoy the odor of sweet pickles. M. W. W.

She Was Thunderstruck.

One Saturday night I was suffering with a cold and neuralgia. I had intended to go to a church basket social, so I notified the secretary of my illness, making light of it.

Home remedies seemed best, so I put a red flannel around my face, donned my bath robe, and proceeded to take a hot mustard foot bath in the kitchen.

A slight tap was sounded on the door, and, at my croaky "Come in," in trooped the club members and husbands. They had decided to have the social at my home, so I would not miss it.

I have not got over the shock yet, and it happened two months ago!

Think of It!

While in college I was sent as a representative to a summer conference. One day I was sitting near the lake enjoying the beautiful surroundings, when a pleasant faced young woman sat down near me. We were soon talking about the conference.

Presently I volunteered the information that I was taking Dr. Johnston's course, as I had understood it was so much better than that of Miss Adams, and I asked my companion which one she was taking.

"I am Miss Adams," she answered with a smile. M. U. S.

Off the Path of Truth.

A woman who lives in the upper apartment is continually sending or receiving calls over our telephone. Many of these come at an inconvenient time for me and most of them are from a gossipy friend of hers.

One day when I was extremely busy a call came from this friend. Not wishing to take up my time and thinking the call was no more important than usual I said my neighbor was out of town.

Less than an hour later Mrs. James came down to telephone. Taking it for granted it was her daily order she wished to place with her grocer, I consented.

Imagine my embarrassment when she called her friend, asking why she had not been informed of an important club meeting, and received the reply that the friend had called and I had said she was out of town. A. A.

On Their Way.

Three girls and I were walking home from school one day, and decided to have some ice cream. We found we had 10 cents each.

A young man we all knew worked in the shop where we had planned to stop, and, not knowing the price of their ice cream and not daring to go in without enough money, we called a little girl and sent her in to ask the price.

We were all extremely embarrassed when she came to the door, followed by the young man, and called to us: "It's all right—come on in, girls. It's only a dime."

But we didn't go in; we hurried home.

F. B.

Yes, It's Dangerous.

My teacher was a widow, I was 13 years old. One day at a party they commenced to talk about people's ages and I asked my teacher how old she was.

She said, "Why, nobody ever asked me that before, especially a little girl."

I wished I was miles away. Since then I have been careful about asking people their ages. E. E. M.

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

ORANGE MARMALADE.

EVERY year and in every way a woman may become a better marmalade maker if . . . but, most likely, she must somehow first learn that what she has been making and calling marmalade is poor stuff, probably much too dark of color, dull of quality instead of sharply bright, and a gummy, thick sirupy stuff, instead of a delicately breaking jelly. Even a tall glass of perfect marmalade may be turned out and hold its form perfectly, and will not run around like honey from a broken comb, as gummy marmalades do. Of course, a marmalade may be too stiff.

Because of the quality of the color in navel orange skins it is not possible to get as light a marmalade with the following recipe as with the amber formula: Three large navel oranges, the juice only of three lemons, nine cups of water. Wash fruit carefully. Use a long, sharp knife. Cut off end slices and reject. Cut as much of the rest as you can into the thinnest slices—note what is said below on this subject—and, what you cannot cut thus, chop or cut into small dice. Cover with the nine cups of water and let set at least five hours or over night is all right. Then cook gently for half an hour or for as little as ten minutes if slices are as thin as the sharpest knife can make them.

Let stand until the next day, add the juice of the lemons, measure, and if the oranges have been as nice and sour as they have been this season, use one cup of sugar with each cup of the preparation. But marmalade can be made with less sugar. If sealed like a preserve, only half as much sugar as of the diluted fruit has been found successful. If it is not to be sealed it requires at least 65 per cent sugar, and 100 per cent with fine fruit gives a most delicate conserve.

Cooking Marmalade.

If the skin or peel is not cooked until tender in plain water before sugar is added, it will be hard in the marmalade. It seems to take a little more cooking to make orange peel tender than it does that of lemon and grapefruit. Perhaps the fruit would be cut so fine that it would become mushy in the cooking, but that would rarely happen if the fruit were sliced. When it is cut up fine as in making filled marmalades, such as those with carrot, it will be more or less of that character and the product a jam and not a jelly.

When the fruit is cut too coarsely the pieces of fruit are likely to be harder than the jelly in which they are suspended. They will be of different texture but should be as tender. If the fruit is coarsely cut the jellying quality of the whole is less perfect.

Too rapid cooking breaks up the fruit as well as drives off fruit flavor and aroma. It may boil, but gently, gently. It would be possible to cook it so rapidly as to get a quite muddy mixture.

The Water to Add.

It is impossible to give eminently precise directions for the amount of water to use with the fruit, because oranges vary in size, but it is usually better to add a little less than the formula rather than a little more. With too much water the cooking must be prolonged. The best way is to test the mixture by cooking one-half cup or, perhaps better, one whole cup of it with an equal measure of sugar. If it takes a long time to "jell" it contains too much water, and the best thing to do is to cook some of it out before adding the sugar. But be careful. The fruit has already been cooked tender, or should be before it receives the sugar, therefor it may now be cooked to a mush. The best kind of utensil is one that is shallow and broad, so that the evaporating surface may be as great as possible, rather than high and of small diameter. That is the best sort of a utensil, too, for cooking all jellies. They may often be cooked in one-half the time in the proper utensil.

Amber Marmalade.

Amber marmalades are just as easy and just as hard to make as pie crust, and perfect marmalades are as rare as superfine pie crust. There are reasons why success with the latter formula is easier than with some others, which explains its exceedingly wide use under many names: One fine grapefruit, one rather tart orange, one lemon. Wash the fruit and cut into the thinnest possible slices, skin and all. Measure and put to soak in earthenware in three times its measure of water. Boil for ten minutes the second day—the long soaking is the best sort of softening—and on the third day cook like jelly. Remember perfection and worth and a beautiful light color and dainty flavor come with short time cooking in small portions.

This year the navel oranges seem to be just right, but should you add to three of them, as in my favorite recipe, the juice of the three lemons which were extra large, you might get an overacid preparation. With this you might get a rather cheesy marmalade, but quite eatable, whereas a thin marmalade, which will not form a stiff and tender jelly because it has not enough acid, is gummy and heavy and sirupy and rather insipid. It spreads or runs on the dish.

Qualities to Be Preserved.

The qualities of oranges are so fine and essential and easy to destroy that few ways of cooking them have yet been worked out. These qualities and substances have been summarized thus: "In the orange are to be found a refreshing vegetable acid, an essential oil, an exquisite aroma; the two last, the oil and the aroma, are delightfully corrective of the acid." Now it is that oil in the yellow surface cells that add strength of flavor, but with strong cooking it gives a rather horrid quality to anything, whether it be orange chips (candied peel) or marmalade. There are qualities in the juice that may be emphasized by this oil and it is really needed for that very thing, yet perhaps it would not be a bad plan to grate part of that yellow skin off before cutting the orange. And this brings us to a mention of surface qualities of the orange to be used for marmalade. It should be firm and stiff. Stiff or firm oranges not only cut well but they are likely to be more acid. It has been commonly believed that March was the best month for making orange marmalade, but with the new systems of orange culture this is no longer true, although it is undoubtedly one of the best months. Navel oranges were in fine condition for making marmalade in January this year.

Orange Jelly and Pectin.

Orange jellies are coming more and more into vogue, especially in the orange growing states. It is a way of salvaging culls. One of the dainty commercial products which passes as a marmalade is an orange jelly with one long string of orange peel and for its trade mark or brand a dried orange blossom. It is called preserved orange.

On the whole it is perhaps easier to make orange jelly than orange marmalade. It is also possible to get quite entertaining and fancy effects in these jellies. The recipe for making orange pectin, which is the jelly base that has been most widely used, is:

"With a sharp knife remove every particle of the outside yellow rind from oranges or lemons. Remove white peel and put it through a meat chopper. To each cupful, pressed down, of chopped white peel add the juice of one lemon and let stand one hour. Add two cups of water, heat to boiling point, and let boil five minutes. Let stand overnight; add four cups of water; heat to boiling point and boil ten minutes. Strain through a canton flannel jelly bag. This extraction can be poured at once into sterile bottles and kept until needed, or flavored as desired and made into jelly." About one cup of strawberries cooked with one cup of this preparation until their juice is extracted, then drained, will make a good jelly, but it may be necessary to boil it down a little before adding an equal measure of sugar. Strawberries are a watery berry. The berries of the present market are more suitable for cooking than anything else. Utilizing one cup in this wise makes a pleasant experiment, and if the results are satisfactory making on a larger scale may then be attempted.

Public Now Prefers Vegetable Laxatives

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin affords prompt relief in a natural way

THE public is constantly becoming more discriminating in its choice of things. Those subject to constipation try to learn what makes them constipated, and then avoid it. If constipation persists in spite of all their efforts they take the mildest, most easily tolerated laxative obtainable, and not a drastic physic that upsets them for days afterwards. As over 10 million bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are sold a year, a large proportion of the people of this country must believe that this mild vegetable compound is the proper remedy for them, and so it is. No need to take salt waters and powders that dry up the blood; coal-tar drugs in candy form that produce skin eruptions, or calomel that salivates. These drugs are "heroic measures", over-effective, weakening and griping.

The best constipation remedy is the one that moves the bowels without shock to your system, and such a one is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics, and has been satisfactorily sold for 30 years. Unlike the harsher physics it does not produce a habit, and increased doses are not required; in fact, it so trains the stomach muscles that in time medicines of all kinds can be dispensed with.

Many take a teaspoonful of Syrup Pepsin once a week as a health safeguard. Others use it only when required, as, for example, Mrs. J. W. Borroughs of Little Rock, Ark., who finds it equally valuable for herself and the children, and Mr. Enas S. Costa of Watsonville, Cal., whose family uses it regularly. Try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in constipation, biliousness, piles, headaches, sallow complexion, and to break up fevers and colds. A generous-size bottle can be had at any drug store, and it costs only about a cent a dose!

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

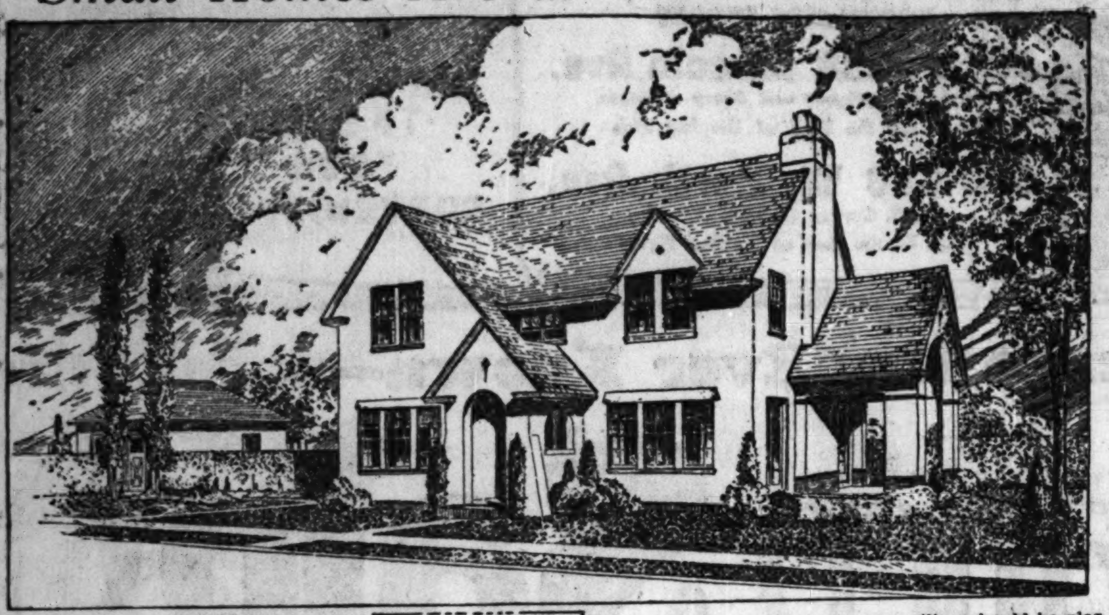
Small Homes Are at Their Best When Well Designed

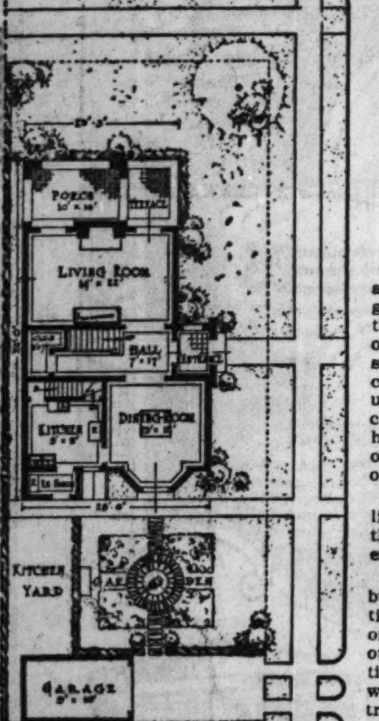


Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

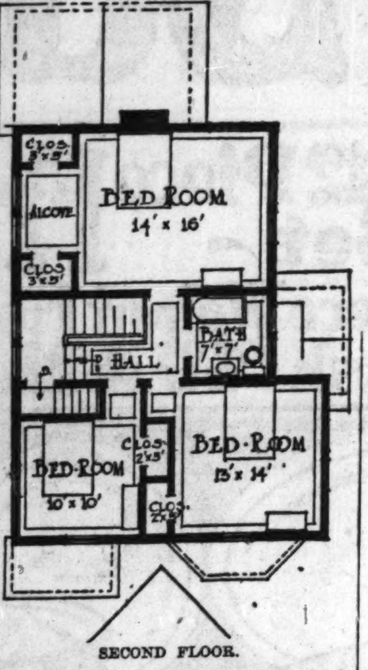
By Anita de Campi.

ALTHOUGH any fifty foot lot would comfortably accommodate a house of the design shown herewith, it would undoubtedly present a more favorable appearance on a corner, in which event a 40x100 foot lot would be ample.

Admirable plans of exterior features and the unusual character of interior details are only two of the many reasons which are causing discerning home builders, in ever increasing numbers, to place the decision for the proper design and construction of their homes in the hands of capable architects. Even for unpretentious homes of the type shown here, and those of lesser cost, the services of an expert designer are more than justified. When one considers that a large portion of one's life is spent in the home, and that it has a potent influence on molding the lives of its occupants, he is impressed with the necessity of making it really and truly live-in-able.



FIRST FLOOR.



SECOND FLOOR.

Indeed, no home can be fully enjoyed unless it reflects the aims and ideals of its owners. Although many a home which is purchased ready built is possessed of these qualities to some extent, entire success is best achieved by having the home built to order, from designs by an architect who is well qualified to depict the real character of its owners.

It is for this reason that some architects will specify stucco, others brick, and still others frame, each one of which has certain qualities and characteristics not possessed by the others.

Stucco, as it is built today, is constructed on an entirely different basis than that of some years back. Vast improvements in the science of the manufacture of stucco materials, the bases on which they are applied, and the construction of the frame of the building itself, have combined to establish this form of construction on a much firmer foundation than heretofore. Architects are enthusiastic advocates of this type of construction, as stucco lends itself to all manner of design and surface treatment and offers an artistic background for landscaping.

It is a good looking house, winter or summer, and in any clime. Due to the fact that it has become so widely popular, and because the materials of which the walls are constructed are abundant, its cost is not a hindrance, as it was when stucco was in its infancy. As a matter of fact, some forms of stucco construction are said to be less expensive than other types of walls frequently used.

The design featured today can be equally well constructed of stucco on concrete or tile. For a building of this size a good, substantial concrete or other masonry foundation is advisable. The brick solder course, which appears just above the grade line, forms an attractive setoff between the ground planting and the stucco above. On top of this comes the main structure of the walls, which can be masonry or frame.

Among the attractive features which are seen from the exterior are the gable roofed, arched entrances, with their tile insert decorations standing out in contrast with the rough cast, stucco surface. The tile motif is also carried out in the decoration for the upper part of the chimney, which has chimney caps of a unique design. Brick has been used for the lower portion of the columns supporting the gable over the front porch.

The interesting arrangement of many lighted windows, as seen throughout the house, is a point well worthy of emulation by prospective home owners.

On entering from the side of the building, one is ushered into a reception hall with a large living room on one side, and a dining room on the other. The living room is of attractive size, being 14x22 feet, with a large, well proportioned fireplace as its central feature.

On each side of the fireplace are French doors leading to the porch and terrace respectively. The dining room is at the rear (if this building may be said to have a rear), and an unusual bay window feature overlooks the neat and cleverly designed garden plot, which has a sun dial as its central ornament. In keeping with the permanence of the stucco exterior, metal lath has been used on the entire living room, entry hall, and dining room ceilings, because it has been shown to have an unusual resistance against the formation of disfiguring plaster cracks.

Just off the dining room is the kitchen, with a small entry porch at the rear. Appreciated by every housewife are the conveniently placed laundry wash tubs, room for which has been found here on the first floor. This makes it convenient for the laundress, as there is but one step down to the kitchen yard at the rear end of the lot.

The kitchen sink is shown to one side, although it would be better, probably, if it were located beneath the double windows. This would leave ample space for a large built-in pantry case, as no convenience of this kind is shown in the plans.

On the entry porch space has been provided for the refrigerator, where it is of convenient access for icing as well as being easily reached from the kitchen. Ample space is provided here, too, for the arrangement of shelves over the refrigerator, where kitchen appliances not in everyday use can be stored. Two windows on the porch afford plenty of light.

Upstairs are three bedrooms and a bath. Each of the bedrooms has good closet space, and the largest one has an interesting alcove which could be made into a dressing room or a well lighted sewing room. Each of the bedrooms is a corner room and is well ventilated. The smaller one would serve admirably as a nursery or spare room.

The cold room in the cellar is a convenience which is now being found essential in the average home. The heater and coal rooms should be partitioned off with dust tight partitions and the entire basement ceiling should be plastered to provide a warm upper floor and to insure fire resistive construction.

J. Street of Philadelphia is the architect of the plans shown today.

Answers to Inquiries.

R. G. C.: Use a rose taupe chenille rug in your living room, with old gold silk lamp shades and warm rose colored cushions.

W. H. N.: Have natural colored parchment shades and shields, with border bands of bright blue and black. Black and gold brocade would be attractive for the table runner. Use taffeta cushions, matching the colors in your rug, adding one of mauve, for an extra.

H. A.: Peasant cross stitch designs, in bright colored worsteds, would be most in character on the monks' cloth drapes. Your window treatment sounds attractive as well as practical. Finish the tops of the curtains with French headings, if you do not wish to use valances. The pane curtains should reach to the sill, and the overdrapes may be of the same length, or else extending to the floor. Have a hem at the lower edge, with embroidery at the top.

A. H. K.: Ivory or French gray woodwork is suitable for a colonial house. Light taupe or ecru walls would harmonize well. Carry out a color scheme of Delft blue and buttercup yellow in your kitchen. Use old ivory silk gauze for the curtains on the first floor. Paint the outside of your bathtub black (the inside to be white), and paint a wide band of jade green around the top edge. Carry out the rest of the room to correspond.

E. N.: With your gold colored walls either jade green or French blue silk rep window drapes would be attractive. Have a two toned niggerhead brown rug.

B. R.: Have jade green taffeta under ecru net for your bed and dressing table. Carry out this idea at the windows by having ecru net pane curtains, with jade taffeta valances and side drapes.

"We love each other dearly and he even has an engagement ring, which I have refused to take without the consent of my parents, who object to him greatly because of the low salary he is earning. They are continually nagging me that it is impossible for two people to get along nowadays on $35 per week.

"He is shorter than I and that is also one of their objections. Dad has completely ceased to talk to me, and has forbidden me to see him at home or elsewhere. My sister has also refused to see me. WORRIED."

While $35 a week in some instances does not seem to meet the requirements of modern day newlyweds, there must be a vast number of young couples living on it when you stop to figure out how many, many young men are earning no more than that. They do it somehow, but naturally the whole scale of living must be based upon the greatest economy. It all depends upon how much you both are willing to go without and what good financial managers you are.

"Dear Miss Blake: I met a fellow about ten months ago, and I really love him. I kept steady company with him for about six months. Now I hear he cares for my girl friend, and he still wants me to go out with him. Should I go out with him or should I give him up? MAY."

If you love him, stay in the game for a while longer. It may just be the boy is not sure which girl he admires more. Give him a chance to decide. It is quite all right and all in the rules of the game. Your best move is to go on quite unsuspecting a rival.

COCOANUT OIL MAKES A SPLENDID SHAMPOO

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water, then moisten your hair with water and rub the Mulsified in. It will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

dyeing colors

The RIT (fast dye) colors (7 of them) are the darker shades which require boiling. They are exceptionally good for heavier materials. It is perfectly safe to boil your silks with RIT dark (fast dye) colors.

tinting colors

The 24 lighter RIT colors do not require boiling. They are unusually good for dainty silks, fine lingerie and underthings. Simple and easy to use—just douse the article in colorful RIT suds. RIT washes as it dyes. At all dealers—10c.

PROLOGUE.

It is usually referred to as the "advertising game," probably because so many are playing at it . . . David Gleason, however, is one of those earnest apostles of publicity who work while you sleep . . . the billboards, magazines, newspapers all flame with his eloquence . . . his little troupe of performing adjectives play leap-frog in every street car, in the electric signs, up and down the newspaper columns, next to the pure, in a manner of speaking, reading matter. . . . Even now he is concocting a campaign of advertising and publicity that will shame every renter into buying a home . . . he is about to prove conclusively that renters are a menace to our form of government, and that the man who doesn't own his own home violates the ten commandments, the fourteen points, and the eighteen amendments . . . having just signed a new lease for three years, he is in a position to know whereof he speaks.

Scene I.

The office of David Gleason. It is after closing time, and he has prevailed upon Mamie Potter to stay and help him finish taking dictation this evening . . . the fact that he is thirty-five, successful, not difficult to look at, pleasant, quite attentive, and the boss, makes it less of a hardship for her to stay than you might suppose.

GLEASON (dictating):

Let's see—er—take this right on the typewriter. Double space for corrections—caption—write it in caps. Let's see—they wanted a home—underline that—got it?

MAMIE:

Yes.

(My, it must be wonderful to be able to talk things off just like that . . . nice profile, too; seems more sensitive than Red's.)

GLEASON:

Er—er—for forty years Moses led the Israelites through the desert. What were they looking for?

MAMIE:

Were you asking me?

GLEASON:

No. Put that down. What were they looking for? They were looking for a home. For twenty years Ulysses—spelled U L Y double S E S—that was that Greek fellow, remember? For twenty years he wandered over the face of the earth, meeting sirens, getting shipwrecked, having troubles, privations, disasters. Where was he going? He was going home. (To Mamie.) That isn't bad, is it?

"Let's go out and have a bite to eat."

MAMIE (Glowingly):

I think it's wonderful! I bet my brother Bill could tell you something about wanting a home now. He just came back.

GLEASON:

Where was he?

MAMIE:

He ran away. Ma and Pa found him ushering in grand opera. He wanted to make his own way in the world. He got enough of it in just a week or two.

GLEASON (sympathetically):

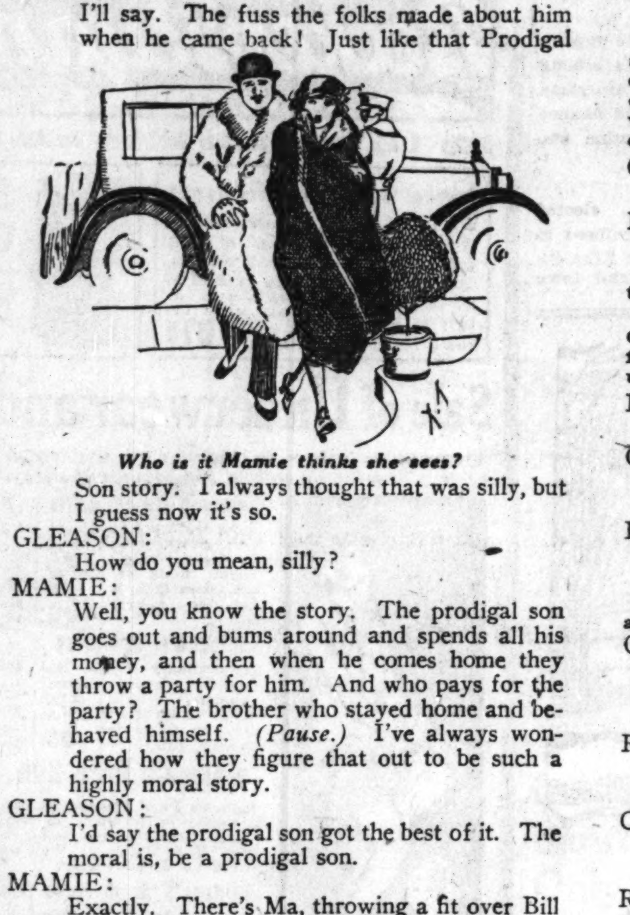
Did he?

MAMIE:

I'll say. The fuss the folks made about him when he came back! Just like that Prodigal Son story. I always thought that was silly, but I guess now it's so.



Who is it Mamie thinks she sees?

GLEASON:

How do you mean, silly?

MAMIE:

Well, you know the story. The prodigal son goes out and bums around and spends all his money, and then when he comes home they throw a party for him. And who pays for the party? The brother who stayed home and behaved himself. (Pause.) I've always wondered how they figure that out to be such a highly moral story.

GLEASON:

I'd say the prodigal son got the best of it. The moral is, be a prodigal son.

MAMIE:

Exactly. There's Ma, throwing a fit over Bill just because he ran away and was glad to get back home again. Well, I guess the kid got bumped enough. I bet he'll stay home nights for a while now. (Comes to suddenly.) Ooh! Look at the time.

GLEASON (consulting extra thin watch):

Yes, and I must finish those two full page ads tonight. (Pleadingly.) Can't you stay and help me?

MAMIE (of course she can):

Why—I don't see quite how—it's—it's—how long will it take?

GLEASON (Those eyes! That smile!):

Let's go out and have a bite to eat and then come back and finish.

MAMIE (to herself):

Suppose Red saw me—Ooh! (To Gleason.) I don't know—I—I—I——

(Which, of course, means yes in any language.)

Scene II.

The long, steel gray limousine of David Gleason sweeps silently up to the curb and stops before the dazzling portal of the Roundabout café. With practiced speed and precision the chauffeur alights and opens the door for Gleason, who in turn helps Mamie out with a manner that Mamie cannot help but compare to Red's busqueria.

GLEASON (to chauffeur):

You may wait. I will need you later.

MAMIE (starting guiltily):

O! That looks like—is that—let's hurry in.

(Scurries in ahead of Gleason, who follows her with perturbed air.)

(Who is it Mamie thinks she sees? Let's have a look . . . O! . . . Coming down the street—is that Red with that fellow? Yes. No wonder Mamie scurried . . . they're right up close. Red is talking excitedly . . .)

RED (to companion):

It was her, I tell you!

COMPANION (easily):

Naw, that wasn't her. What if it was, anyway?

RED:

What if it was? I'll go in there and punch that guy's nose.

(Starts to do so. Companion lays restraining hand on his arm.)

COMPANION:

Hey, don't be a darn fool. They're probably just having dinner. There ain't no harm in that.

RED:

If I was sure that was her, I'd go in there and spoil his appetite. I'm goin' in and see.

COMPANION (holding on to him):

Wait a minute. Wait a minute. You stay here. I'll go in and see if it's her. I'll tell you.

RED:

If it is, I'll cross one on his jaw.

COMPANION:

You wait here.

(Enters café, leaving Red pacing up and down outside in the frame of mind that often goes with red hair.)

Scene III.

Mamie and Gleason seated at one of those tête-à-tête tables, equipped with that delightful first aid to complexions, the rose shaded lamp: the secret of eternal youth was discovered by Edison, not Ponce de Leon . . . a dazzle of silver on snowy linen, a glitter of crystal, the personal attention of the head-waiter and a consulting corps of assistants and subassistants . . . they all call him Mr. Gleason and put their whole backs into each bow . . . Mamie is terrifically impressed.

GLEASON (handing her the menu first . . . Red never did that):

Some blue points? And a little consomme?

MAMIE (tremulously):

You go ahead and order.

(He does so, specifying a bit of fish and an entrée, and salad with specific instructions as to dressing, and minute particulars as to dessert and the proper vintage of cheese and demi-tasses . . . a light table wine even makes its appearance after the pronouncement to the head-waiter of certain magic words . . . additional proof that prohibition is much better than no liquor at all.)

GLEASON (as the oysters appear on their half shells, pitiful symbols of a complete lack of privacy):

How do you like the advertising game?

MAMIE:

O, I love it. I think it's just wonderful. I've often wondered where you get all your ideas.

GLEASON (modestly):

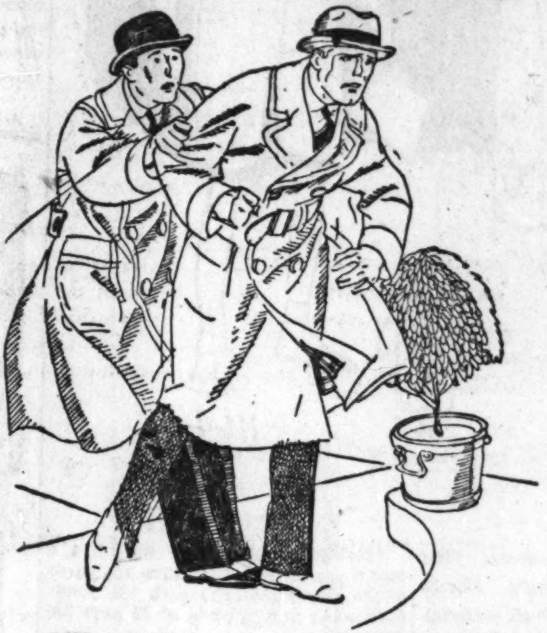
O, I don't know. They just come to me.



"I'll go in there and punch that guy's nose."

(Think of that—they just come to him.) (Pause.) You've been with me about six months now, haven't you? Almost to the day.

MAMIE:

My, do you remember the day?

(Notes subconsciously with a pang that Gleason doesn't chew his oysters as Red does . . . and yet Red means so well.)

GLEASON (warmly):

Of course I remember the day.

(If Red could come in now, ooh! Who is that at the door? Isn't that Red's companion? Sure enough.)

MAMIE (changing the subject hurriedly . . . after all, he's always seemed nice enough, but there's Red to be considered, too . . . but gee whiz! a girl can go out to dinner with a fellow, can't she, especially if it's almost business, as you might say?):

Their whole backs into each bow.

How long do you think it will take us to finish up this evening?

GLEASON (easily):

O, about an hour or two. (Pause.) I'll have Sato take you home in the car.

MAMIE (thrilled):

O, no, don't go to all that trouble.

GLEASON (warmly):

No trouble at all. I'm going over to the club tonight for a while, and he can drop you off at your house and come back and get me.

(The dinner goes off without a hitch . . . Mamie is thrilled by the unusual attention and interest showered upon her . . . What a delightful conversationalist Mr. Gleason is—the books he has read—the plays he has seen . . . how thoughtful he is—what a manner—what an air . . . Red seems so abrupt in comparison, so sure of her . . . too sure to show her all those little attentions which the beloved fiancée always receives in the movies. Suppose she were engaged to Mr. Gleason instead of Red . . . a beautiful home, servants, her own car—"Sato, take me to the concert and call for me at five" . . .)

Scene IV.

An hour later. Red's companion has rejoined him outside the café. They have evidently been holding a superheated conversation for some time.

RED:

I'm going to wait right here and see for myself.

COMPANION:

C'mon, don't be a darned fool. They're just havin' dinner. There ain't any harm in that. You take other girls out to dinner, don't you?

RED (virtuously):

Yes, but that's different. (Clutching companion's arm.) Look! Here they come.

COMPANION:

Sh-h-h.

(Pulls Red back with him into shadow of adjoining doorway. Doorman beckons to Gleason's chauffeur, who brings long and costly limousine up to curb, alights, open door, while Gleason assists Mamie in with protective solicitude . . . follows her in, chauffeur shuts door, and car purrs away.)

RED (paralyzed by scene):

It's her! It's him!

COMPANION (dejectedly):

It's them!

And that's that—until next Sunday.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

EMBROIDERY of all kinds, braiding and appliqued designs will be used on dresses this spring, and pattern No. 1565 is a design for a frock on which embroidery can be used with good effect. The dress may be made of one or two materials, and bright colors, where they are becoming, will be much in evidence.

A heavy crepe in a tan shade would be charming for the upper part, with brown for the lower. The tan could be practically covered with embroidery. Choose some suitable design, or go to some firm that does stanmping and have the work done, then embroider in an outline or chain stitch. It will not be tedious, and will be most effective. The skirt of the dress may be plain, and the bottom finished with a self color binding. The sleeves should, of course, be embroidered also.

Or, if one preferred, the dress could be made of one material and color, and beading or embroidery used around the neck and on the wrist bands—making the sleeves of georgette in a Paisley design. There are so many kinds of lovely ways to make girdles and belts and sashes nowadays that it should not be difficult to find something in that line to please.

The pattern is cut with round neck and drop shoulders, and is closed on the left shoulder and under the arm. There are one piece sleeves, gathered into wristbands, and a two piece circular skirt.

The directions for cutting and putting together are clearly given on the pattern envelope.

Pattern No. 1164 is a decidedly smart looking suit for a small boy, and one that will be certain to suit. There is a blouse, made to be slipped on over the head, and having a shield and an inside pocket, and the sleeves may be made long or short. The trousers are straight—in two pieces—and button to the blouse.

Mercerized cotton poplin is one of the best materials for a suit of this kind. It launders beautifully, is a desirable weight, and comes in wonderful colors. A pongee shade, or a dark blue or brown, for instance, trimmed with narrow mercerized braid, is bound to be pleasing. If something warmer is desired, there is serge or wool jersey—either one of which will look well, and not be difficult to work with.

Pattern No 1629 is a charming design for a house dress. Waist and skirt are cut separately and joined at the waist line. The skirt is cut in four gores—quite unusual, when one has been so accustomed to the one or two piece straight skirts. The width at the lower edge, for size 36, is about 1¾ yards. The opening of the dress is at the left side of the vest and front gore, and the directions for putting together are quite clearly given on the pattern. A figured cotton voile, combined with a plain color—using the latter for the collar, cuffs, sash, and pocket tops, would be pretty; or if one were making it for warm weather brown organdie with small white dots would be lovely, using white for the contrasting color or plain brown or tan.

The flavor only Vermont maples can produce

WAY UP in the hills of Vermont, Nature reigns supreme. There she brings maple sap to the height of perfection and there the native Vermonters still produce, right from the sap, the maple syrup that has made their state famous. Chemists may try to imitate its flavor, but they know that it is inimitable.

That is why the flavor of Mayflower Syrup is so exquisite. It is made in the heart of the Vermont maple country, where the maple for it is gathered right from nearby sugar camps. Only refined granulated sugar is added to give it a more syrupy consistency.

This blending is done by men who have had long experience in making maple syrup and they take great precaution to add only a certain amount of the granulated sugar so that the rich flavor of the maple is retained.

Mayflower Syrup comes in both cans and bottles in pint and quart sizes, and also in half-gallon, gallon and five gallon cans. These are all full measure. A Mayflower gallon contains eleven pounds, so that means a pint is considerably more than a pound. Buy some today at your grocer's and see how its Vermont Maple flavor adds to the enjoyment of your pancakes and waffles.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

By Antoinette Donnelly.

MRS. X.: AS BILLY SUNDAY blithely remarked when told that his conversions are not permanent, "Neither is a bath." If you have a tendency to put on or take on, as they say in polite reducing circles, it is not sufficient to get the weight down. You must keep it down, either by intermittent spasms of diet and exercise or, much more sanely, by a studied care of what you eat and by practicing my daily Youth Preservers. If you have not these exercises, send for them at once. They are most excellent for keeping the figure lithe and young and handsome.

A. C. G.: THEY'RE NOT WEARing the eyebrows that way any more. A. C. G. It was, in my opinion, the ugliest style that ever face did wear. You don't find any of the real big beauties of the world taking a chance on losing their reputation by plucking to a scared rabbit line naturally beautiful eyebrows. Trimming them is another thing—training them with a tiny brush to follow a lovely arch—but please don't pluck them to death.

MRS. G. L.: IN A POUND OF chocolates there lies concealed 3,000 deadly calories, so 'tis s. l—a day's rations of calories for a hefty working man. For a lady with such abnormal taste for sweets—well, don't you let either Messrs. Barnum or Bailey learn your address. No wonder your waistline is all "et up." Scuttle right down to the corner mail box, and slip therein a stamped addressed envelope and I'll help you, before it is too late, with some honest to goodness facts on what makes fat and what makes it fly, too.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

GIVING THEM A START.

THIS week I want to tell about a type of request I think will appeal strongly to many of us. The following letter is a good example:

"Has any of your readers an old violin to give to my little boy, 10 years old? His father is dead, but when alive was master of several instruments. I know my boy has talent, and I have been advised to start him on the violin. I know if you could hear him talk about how hard he intends to work for a future you would know why I make this appeal for him. I am poor and I work every day. I can spend 50 cents on lessons for him. I shall be so happy if one of your readers will help my boy to do something worth while. Mrs. E. A."

Think of what this letter means! Here are a devoted mother and an earnest boy longing for a chance to achieve a high ambition for the boy, and able to do so, if the boy's musical heritage and earnestness mean anything, provided we'll give them a start! This appeal is typical of the sort I have in mind—appeals asking for help in achieving some life ambition. In such appeals lies golden opportunity.

A book on English grammar, backed perhaps by sympathetic counsel, may put some earnest young man or woman on the road to becoming a great writer; a violin in the case above may give the world a great musician. If you would like to feel that you had helped achieve something of this sort, won't you let us put you in touch with some of these cases as we hear of them?

And, as a starter, let's see that Mrs. E. A.'s boy has his chance to become a violinist!

Offers Baby Clothing.

"I have some baby clothing which I will gladly give to someone; also doll bed and bedding for a child who would care to have them.

Thank you so much.

"Mrs. A. M."

Just an Hour or Two.

"Is there among your readers some kind hearted person who would devote one or two hours a week to teaching me arithmetic in the evening. I am a young man, 25 years old. I would consider this a great favor.

"B. K."

I present your petition, B. K., with warm wishes for its success.

Has Been Ill Three Years.

"I have had tuberculosis for three years and am still in hospital. If any of your readers have books on cartooning or drawing they will send or lend me I will be grateful. F. B."

Anything we can do to help brighten the long, dreary days of an invalid is more than worth the effort.

Chairs and Couch Offered.

"We would be glad to give some furniture. Perhaps you know of some one close to our home—on the northwest side of the city—who would like two rocking chairs and a couch.

"C. E. S."

Thank you, C. E. S.

Nothing to Wear.

"I am a patient of the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium and am much in need of wearing apparel. I have no income and no way of getting one. If some of your readers have some clothes to spare I would be grateful. I am 5 feet 9 inches high, wear a 40 inch coat, trousers 34 inch waist, shirt 14½, and 8½ or 9 shoes. D. C."

Surely some one with these articles to spare will help to lighten D. C.'s burden enough so he can get around the hospital.

Device for the Deaf.

"I have an electrical device for the deaf which I'd be glad to give to any one in need of such an instrument. This instrument is not for the totally deaf, but is of great assistance to those who cannot hear readily. F. H. M."

Thank you, F. H. M. I shall hold your kind offer for the person interested.

Couldn't Go to School.

"Having to work when I was young, I was deprived of an education, which I long for. Will any one who has no use for his or her English books give them to me? I could use them to good advantage. I will gladly call for any old books or pay postage. Miss J. D."

Surely any one who can help in this case will be more than glad to do so, when a desire for education is at stake!

Asks for Books.

"Last summer you helped me to get a typewriter. The machine was returned several months ago. I have been in bed now for nearly three months and find it hard to pass the time. I wonder if some of your kind readers have books to give or lend. I am especially interested in natural history, travel, forestry, and radio. I will gladly pay postage on any books which are sent. C. A. H."

It is blessed work to bring cheer to invalids, and I look for a prompt response to your appeal.

Pleads Children's Needs.

"I am a widow trying to support two little girls. One is 8 and the other 5. I am not able to buy shoes and clothes, and at the present time they are badly in need of both. If some kind person will help me I shall be grateful. Mrs. N. B."

Can't some one help this struggling mother in her difficulty?

Some Old Records.

"I am caring for a dear woman who is mentally unbalanced and who loves music. I am fortunate enough to have fallen heir to a phonograph, but have only a few records to keep her amused. Do you suppose any of your readers have old records they have tired of? I will pay postage on them gladly. I have a pair of brown kid low shoes—size 5C—for any one who will send for them. They have high heels. I also have some men's underwear (my husband wears 15½ shirts) that would do some one good. They need mending, but I am so busy that I cannot do it. I also have some dresses for a girl of 6 that I will gladly pass along. H. A."

Thank you, H. A., for your offer to help. I'm sure some one will match your thoughtfulness for others by helping you in turn.

When Everything Stops.

"I am a widow and support myself and a sick girl by going out by the day as a seamstress. Two weeks ago I hurt my foot, and my physician cannot tell exactly how long this condition will last. When my work stops everything stops, so I am sadly in need at present of some help. I wonder if there is any one who would offer me assistance until I can get to work again?

"Mrs. S. D."

Here is a crisis that ought to appeal to some one. Who will lend a helping hand in this emergency?

Needs a Sweater.

"I am a widow, 65 years old, and I am troubled with rheumatism, and I wonder if any of your readers has a woolen sweater no longer needed. I would gladly call for it or pay the postage. Mrs. E."

Some one certainly can spare the article which means so much to this poor woman!

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY HAIR AT ONCE

Girls! Try This! Hair Instantly Appears Abundant, Soft, Lustrous and Colorful—A Gleamy Mass!

35 Cent "Danderine" Also Ends Dandruff; Falling Hair!

A "Danderine Beauty Treatment" will immediately double the attractiveness of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and really appear twice as thick and abundant—a mass of luxuriant, glinty, colorful hair.

Besides beautifying the hair Danderine eradicates dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is the best, cheapest and most delightful hair corrective and tonic. It is to the hair what fresh showers of rain are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, vitalizes and strengthens them. Its stimulating properties help the hair to grow long, heavy, strong.

You can surely have beautiful hair, and lots of it, if you will spend 35 cents for a bottle of Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter. It is not greasy, oily or sticky.

My Nicest Compliment

What was the nicest compliment you ever received? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wittily done, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Won Him Over.

The nicest compliment I ever received came from one of the ablest lawyers in my state. When I returned home from college this man opposed everything I tried to do. This made my work hard, but it also fired me with a determination to succeed in spite of him. He was never able to make a complete failure of any of my enterprises. However, they all fell short of what they would have been without such opposition.

By the end of the first year I had gained the confidence of my townspeople. I made one final effort, for I knew I would not remain there another year. I put my all into it, and it succeeded beyond my wildest dreams.

When this lawyer heard of my resignation he went before the board and said: "Gentlemen, we cannot afford to let her go. Our town had better lose any half dozen women in it. We must keep her at any price." My salary was doubled, and from that day on he backed me in everything I attempted. H. C.

No Higher Praise.

I had spent a great deal of time and thought on my young son's bedroom.

I tried to make it attractive and as much of a boy's room as possible, as he was at an age when anything the least bit girlish was detestable.

I was more than rewarded for my efforts when he turned to me and said, "Gee, mother, I couldn't have done it better myself." D. H. M.

Prizes It Highly.

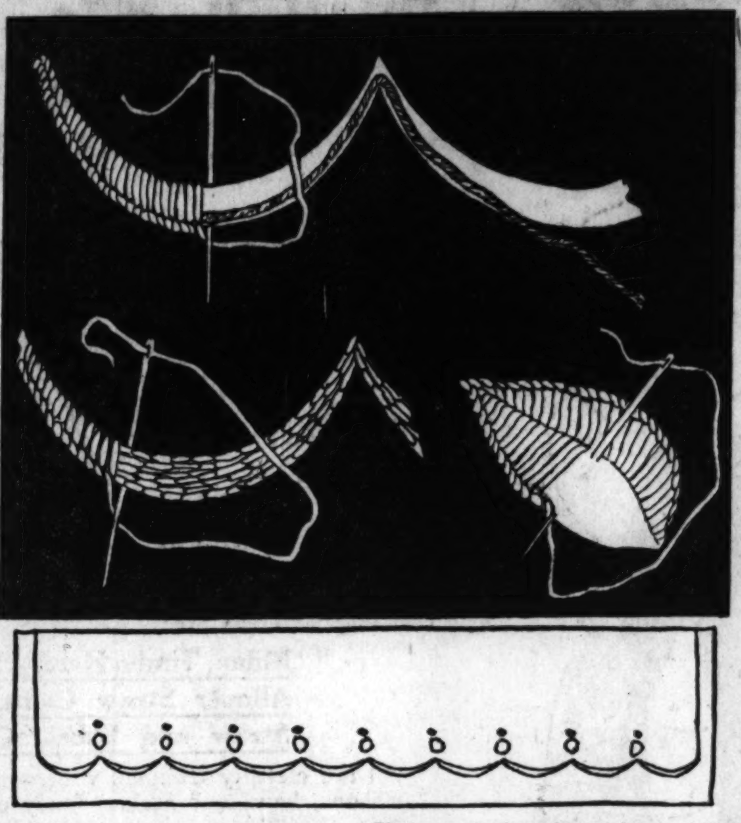
We were speaking of roses.

I said, "I don't believe there is anything more beautiful than a garden of roses."

"O, yes, there is, mother," said my son, "your face is far more beautiful than all the roses there are." R. F.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



Any questions that puzzle the woman who does her own sewing will be answered in this department or by mail if a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Address Clotilde, Chicago Tribune.

TIME AND LABOR SAVERS.

A CORRESPONDENT makes the suggestion that in embroidering edges on towels, garments, and all kinds of fancy work, if you will use a common piece of string—double or single as the case may require—and lay it along the edge and She says she has shown this to many women who do a great deal of this kind of work, and it is a wonderful time and labor saver. Perhaps others would like to try it.

If a woman does her own stamping, care should be used in pinning the strips of transfer paper on so there will be no slipping. First try a small work your buttonhole stitch over it, you will save all the time it would take to fill in the edge in the regular way. piece of the transfer on a scrap of cloth to see just how hot an iron will be needed. If the stamping is to be done on a bureau scarf, for instance, it is better to begin in the middle of the length, pinning the middle of a scallop at this point, and then stamping in both directions from the middle. This will make the scallops match at each end, and give a much more shipshape appearance to the work.

And if the scallops are filled in in the usual manner, use a single thread of darning cotton or of mercerized floss, and outline both edges—taking a small, even running stitch. Then fill in with a chain stitch, making this padding heavier in the middle of the scallop, and much flatter at the ends. Or an ordinary stitch can be used, making it as short as possible on the wrong side, and about one-eighth inch in length on the right side. This filling is done from end to end of the scallop, and not up and down.

It takes time to do an even edge. It might help a beginner to have a beautifully scalloped edge for a guide while working. The stitches must never lap, nor should there be any apparent spaces; but as the curve at the top of a scallop is shorter than the one at the bottom, the stitches necessarily are closer together at the top than at the bottom.

Embroidery of all kinds is fascinating work, and most women seem to take quite naturally to it—practice, of course, is necessary to make the work as evenly done as one would wish.

Answers to Sewing Questions.

MRS. D. M. R.: I am sorry, but I do not know the name of any such firm, but you might find the name of an instruction book by inquiring in some book store.

MRS. SADIE B.: I wonder if you forgot to inclose the stamped, addressed envelope. You give no address on your letter, so I cannot write to you. Bindings for crepe or georgette should be cut on a "true" bias, and a cord is not used. You will get a rolled effect if you do not press the binding. I shall be glad to answer your other question if you will write to me again.

Wonderful Values at This Low Price

A novel and a captivating idea—to make dresses and frocks out of Damask. The "Sunbeam" makers originated it. Others have imitated. But the imitations fall short, as imitations always do. Only in Sunbeam Damask Frocks and Dresses will you find the sparkling style, the alluring quality, the piquant coloring and the marvelous workmanship that is the despair of all imitators.

EXCLUSIVE STYLES AND COLORS

The variety of styles and the diversity of patterns and colors in these dresses is truly amazing. Many of the designs and color effects were originated for these dresses; and nowhere will you find anything half so lovely as the checked and flower-spray designs worked out in combinations of golden rod, periwinkle, turkey red, seafoam green, delft blue, buff, navy and other colors.

GENUINE RENFREW DAMASK

A name that guarantees quality. A special soft finish is used for these frocks. This damask will retain its color as long as the fabric holds together. And nothing launders more easily or more beautifully.

WILL BE WORN EVERYWHERE

At home dresses—demurely attractive and supremely comfortable. As street dresses—neat and just unusual enough to attract admiring comment. As outing dresses—strong, serviceable, easily laundered, and with the charm of color that's right in keeping with outdoor activities. Wear Damask dresses on all these occasions with the assurance that you're smartly and "differently" attired.

We feel that in securing these frocks we are living up to the reputation we have established for offering only the newest and best to our customers. Come and see them. Choose while our assortments are complete.

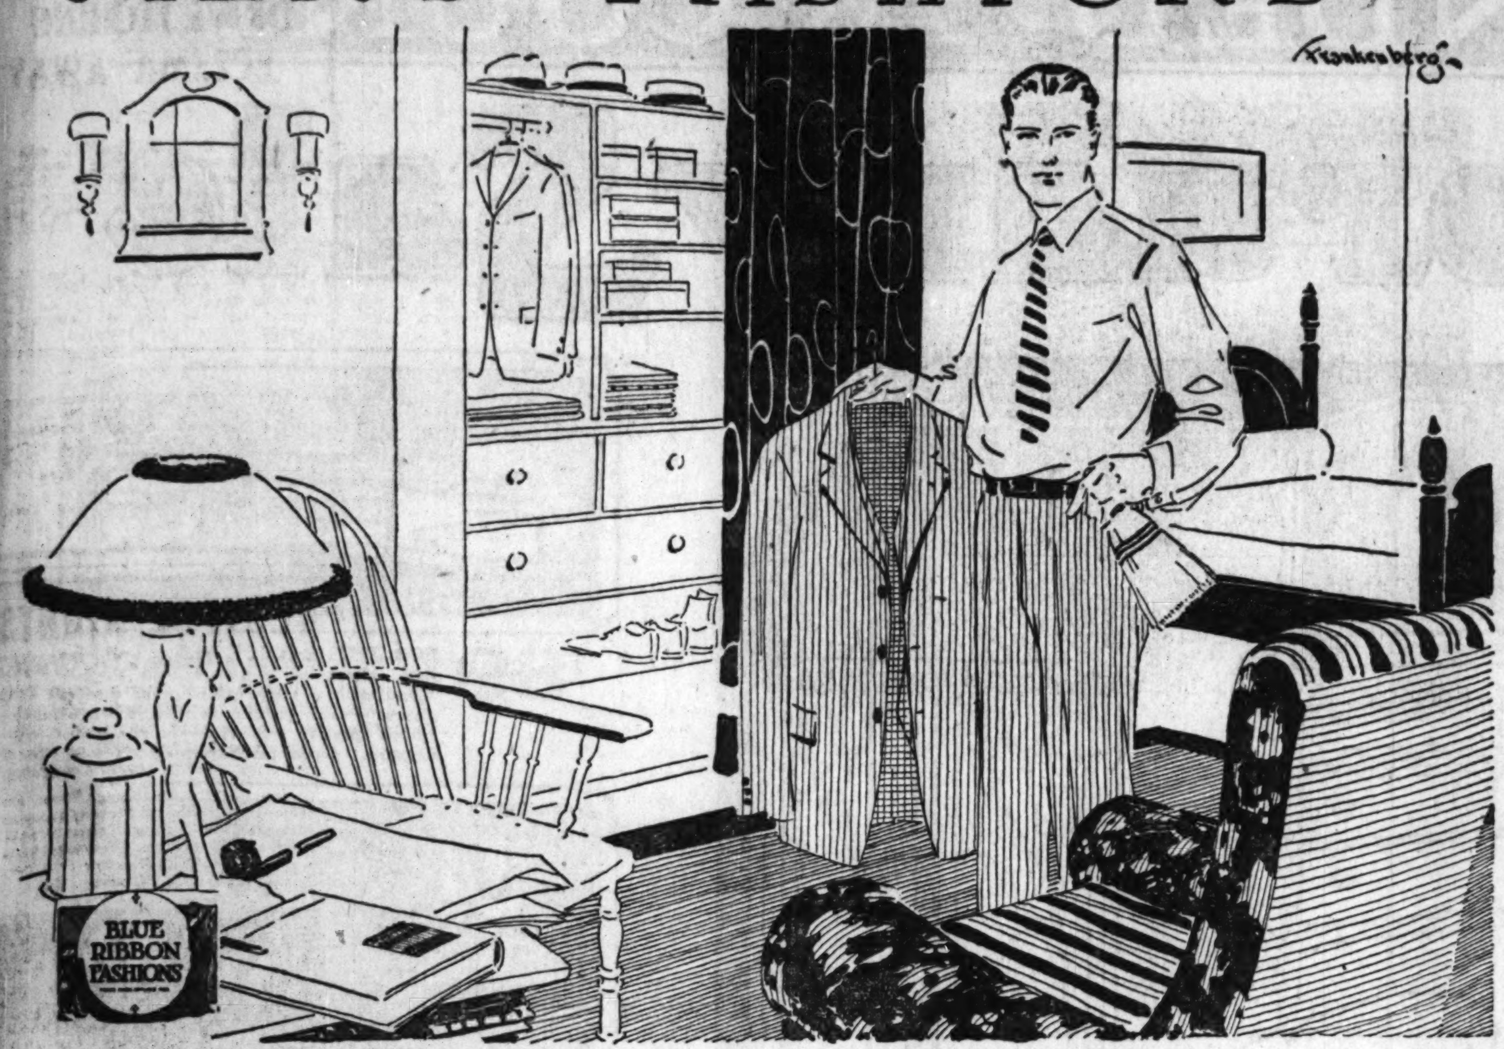
MEN'S FASHIONS



HOW TO GET ALONG WITH A SMALL WARDROBE

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T Gallico, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

By A. T. Gallico.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—Men with half a dozen suits to their credit and an income which will enable them to buy half a dozen more if they have room for them, need not read this article. It is addressed to the man of moderate means who wants to make the most of what he has to spend on his wardrobe, and wants to know how to take care of the clothes when he gets them so that they will give the best service. Let us see with just how little a man can get along and yet be neatly and properly dressed for all occasions.

Perhaps he can afford only one business suit. If such is the case, the suit must be chosen with great care. It must be dark enough not to show the dirt easily. It must be conservative in cut so that it will not be conspicuous, and therefore not seem to be an only suit because of frequent appearances, and so that it will be appropriate for all occasions outside of those calling for evening dress. Sport models with belts and patch pockets are all right for extra suits to be worn for sport or country, but for all round street suits they won't do. For the same reason unfinished worsteds and similar smooth goods have preference over tweeds and homespuns, since the latter materials are reserved strictly for lounge and sport clothes.

Another point to take into consideration is that it doesn't pay to buy a cheap suit, especially if it is to be the only one. Cheap goods become shabby so soon that they are more expensive in the long run. It is better to buy one good suit than two cheaper ones.

If possible, it is advisable to have a suit with two pairs of trousers. This enables you to have on hand one pair freshly pressed. Besides which, the coat and vest of a suit always outlive the other half. However, ready made clothes are not always procurable with the extra trousers, which means that sooner or later you will have an odd coat that is still in pretty good condition.

There are two suggestions for making the most out of this coat. One is to keep it until summer when you can use it with white flannel trousers for country and sport wear, since any odd dark coat is proper for this. Another plan, which combines economy with fashion, is to buy an odd pair of striped trousers when the suit is new and work them enough to save wear on your other trousers, especially if the suit is black or oxford gray. Many of the smartest dressers are wearing such a combination of dark sack coat and striped trousers as a compromise between the business suit and the morning coat. This may be worn to business or used as a semi-formal daytime dress. Either the vest belonging to the coat or a fancy one, such as is worn with a cutaway, may be used.

Two suits are, of course, an easier proposition for the man who wants to be well dressed. With two suits you can always have one freshly pressed hanging in the closet, and it cannot be emphasized too often that neatness is more important than actual style. Also a suit is said to give better service if it has an occasional rest.

As for evening clothes, unless a man is going to be a hermit, he will need at least a tuxedo. In these days a tuxedo is of more use to a man than a full dress, for the latter is absolutely necessary only at large receptions, balls, and evening weddings. For ordinary dances, dinner parties, and such, a dinner coat is sufficient. A tuxedo, if procured in a conservative model, will last a man for years, as it will not go out of style, and doesn't get enough wear in one season to put it out of commission.

Unless one expects to wear evening clothes more than once or twice a week, two dress shirts are enough, although three make a better rotation. The more shirts one has the longer they will last. This applies to informal shirts as well. Don't have just enough to get through the week with. Add a shirt every now and then to the supply until you have a dozen or more.

One winter overcoat will serve all purposes. The more conservative and dark it is, the better it will fit in for evening use and as an all round garment. A couple of pairs of gloves, one pair of dress shoes, and a couple of pairs of street shoes, a few pairs of socks, enough cravats to give plenty of variety, and a hat or two, complete the necessities of a man's outfit.

Just as important as the actual buying of the clothes is the way they are kept when in your possesion. Remember that hangers are cheap, and so there is no excuse for hanging one coat on top of another. Such treatment will put any coat out of shape. Trousers should either be laid flat on a shelf with nothing on top of them, or suspended by hangers fastened to the bottom of the trousers.

Hats should lie flat on a shelf. Hanging on a hook will tend to put them out of shape. Shoes keep in good condition longer if shoe trees are inserted as soon as they are taken off, so that the damp leather will stiffen into the right shape.

How Did He Propose?

Do you remember—of course you do—how your husband proposed to you? Where and how did it happen? Was he scared to death and weren't you on the verge of nervous prostration, too? For. Of course, you knew he was going to do it—or didn't you? Perhaps he isn't your husband, but one of the fellows you had to "turn down." How about that? Tell us about it? This goes double, for we want to hear from the men, too. A dollar for every letter printed. Address Proposal Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Glad to Hear It.

Women do propose, although they do not say outright, "Will you marry me?" They sometimes do as my Aunt Emma did. She and Jim had been singing and Emma searched through the music till she found a song entitled "I Am in Love with You."

Handing it to Jim, she said: "Do you know it?"

Jim looked stunned and ignoring the song she held out to him he said: "No, I didn't know it, but I certainly am glad to hear you say so."

And soon after Emma was wearing an engagement ring. W. L.

What's Man to Do.

Last fall a friend and I planned a two days' duck hunt, so one day I stopped at the courthouse to get my license. Just as I started up the steps I met my best girl coming down the street.

Having told her of my hunting plans some time before, I merely said, "I'm going up north for a couple of days, so I'm going to get the license right now. I'm not taking any chances"—with the game warden, I meant.

COURTHOUSE

My sweetheart blushed and replied, "Well, dear, I think we ought to wait a while, but have your own way. Do I have to go up and sign anything?"

Thus I won my fair lady. F. S.

That's Where He Erred.

I made a terrible mistake when I proposed to Millie. When she asked me if I had any prospects I told her all about my rich, bachelor uncle. That's where I made the mistake. Millie is now my aunt. G. H.

Up Spoke the Widower.

A newspaper ran a title contest. I was fortunate enough to win first prize, and later received considerable mail from long lost relatives, friends, and strangers, who had seen my name, and wrote to congratulate me.

In telling this to the fellow members of a Sunday school class, I remarked: "I think I have received everything except a proposal of marriage.",

A widower in the class spoke up: "Are you sending in any answers for this week?"

To the amusement of the rest I quickly answered: "Yes." C. D. H.

Can't Forget It.

I shall never forget this proposal, although I did not accept. He was a milkman, and delivered milk to my home.

We had a machine and as there was no man at our house I was often obliged to play mechanic. One Saturday afternoon I decided to grease the old car, donned an old pair of overalls, and started in.

I was under the car with my feet sticking out when suddenly I heard footsteps and a male voice said: "You are just the girl for me. We'll get a machine together and you can teach me the works."

I am married to another man now, but our milkman often wonders why I stayed under the car so long and made no reply that day. L. R.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

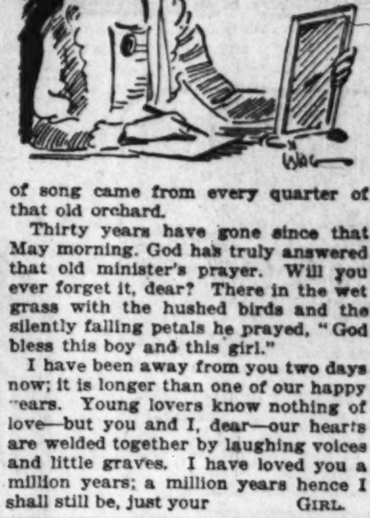
AFTER THIRTY YEARS.

BOY, DEAR: Wouldn't the world laugh if it could know I am calling a portly, gray haired man, with grown sons "boy"? Let it laugh; the world in all its wisdom has never tasted the joys of love as we have. When it does, it will cease to be a world and change into a heaven.

Do you know when I began to love you? One night when we were out riding and a storm came up; the thunder boomed and the lightning flared. The frenzied, plunging horse became quiet at the sound of your deep voice. The trembling girl felt the calming influence of that voice, and was no longer afraid. A trust and a peace that were beyond the telling were born, and so love was come to me.

After that I kept you waiting a year to be sure you truly wanted me. And then that May morning just as the sun came in sight, we took our places under the old apple tree bent low with its burden of blossoms. There with the petals dropping on our heads we made the promises which gave us the right to build the home of our dreams.

The birds seemed to be in sympathy with this new nest building, for they were silent until the last words were spoken and then a regular avalanche of song came from every quarter of that old orchard.



Thirty years have gone since that May morning. God has truly answered that old minister's prayer. Will you ever forget it, dear? There in the wet grass with the hushed birds and the silently falling petals he prayed, "God bless this boy and this girl."

I have been away from you two days now; it is longer than one of our happy years. Young lovers know nothing of love—but you and I, dear—our hearts are welded together by laughing voices and little graves. I have loved you a million years; a million years hence I shall still be, just your GIRL.

THE QUEEREST BOSS I EVER HAD

There are good bosses and bad bosses, and then again there are bosses who are just queer. Will you ever be able to forget the queerest boss you ever had? The perplexities, and the frowns, and the laughs he caused you? Was it his attire that yielded the comedy? Some odd personal habit? Some eccentricity that reduced you to despair? Write out your story, using one side of the paper only and telling it is briefly as possible and send it to the Queerest Boss Editor, The Tribune, Chicago One dollar will be paid for each letter published.

All Is Vanity.

My queerest boss was a sartorial epic. Up to the time we lost count he had twenty-nine different business suits with two shirts per suit and one tie per shirt. On various occasions we checked off eighteen separate sets of cuff links and fourteen tie pins.

You now know where he did his heaviest work—home in front of the chiffonier.

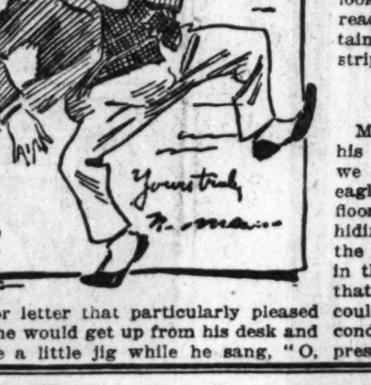
Along about 10 o'clock in the morning by colossal will power he'd drag himself away from the golf course and on to the office. In he would rush as breathlessly as if a succession of important conferences had delayed him. Sometimes he would stay as long as an hour, frequently less. Many days he did not appear at all.

But every moment he was there he kept us humping. He'd call for cartons, reports, files, expense sheets, until the pile on his desk was chin high. Then he'd give the heap one bored look, reach for his newest hat, and say to his secretary, "Adams, have this stuff put away; I shan't need it again today."

Fifteen minutes later he would be out on the links teeing up his ball right where he left off. T. P. H.

Moved to Song.

He was as kind hearted as he was queer. Whenever he received an order or letter that particularly pleased him he would get up from his desk and dance a little jig while he sang, "O, Eliza! Eliza Jane!" That was all he knew of the song, and he would sing it over and over, and he was such a big, heavy man he surely cut a funny figure.



His wife was the apple of his eye, and as they lived not far from his place of business she used to come in once or twice a day. If for some reason or other she did not come in he would call her up, and after getting the number, and she had said "Hello," he would start to sing, before he said a word.

He used to criticise the clothes we wore, partly in fun, but we could never be peeved about what he said. He always insisted that if one of the girls would arrange her hair the way he thought it ought to be she wouldn't look so frowsy, and he was always ready to go out when she wore a certain dress because he didn't like the stripes. A. G.

Keeping His Eye on Them.

My queerest boss believed in keeping his eye on employés, especially when we might be entirely unaware of his eagle eye. He was foreman of two floors, and there was a thin partition hiding the steps from view leading to the floor above. He bored three holes in the partition at different points, so that when coming down to our floor he could peek through and observe our conduct while we were under the impression he wasn't around. A. To make you lovelier

ALL through the ages women's beauty has swayed the hearts of men; and every woman longs for her full share of this power.

However attractive you may be, it is possible to make yourself lovelier if you use the complete "Pompeian Beauty Toilette."

First, a touch of fragrant Pompeian DAY Cream. This is a vanishing cream that when worked well in is a protection for the skin against wind, sun, and dust—a delicate foundation to which powder adheres evenly, and from which it will not easily rub off.

Then, apply Pompeian BEAUTY Powder. It makes the skin beautifully fair and adds the charm of a delightful perfume.

Now a bit of Pompeian BLOOM for a softly glowing color. And do you know that you should always experiment in the placing of rouge? Study the contour of your face. Perhaps you will look better with more color on the cheek-bones. Perhaps it is the center of the cheek where a deeper shade looks well.

Lastly, dust over again with the powder in order to subdue the BLOOM. And instantly the face is radiant with added youth and beauty.

Before retiring, cleanse the face thoroughly with Pompeian NIGHT Cream (a cold cream). In the morning you will find the lines of fatigue have faded and your skin will be soft and velvety.

Pompeian FRAGRANCE, a talcum powder, smooth and refreshingly perfumed, brings you charm.

Pompeian Beauty Powder, Day Cream, Bloom, 60c each; Night Cream, 50c. At all toilet counters.

OOD MORNING!

The "third alarm"!

How the gallant horses used to throw up their heads as it sounded! How they responded to their driver's voice and his touch on the reins! at a sight they were, and what a thrill they furnished as they tore through streets to the accompaniment of clanging bells!

ALPH LEWIS
Big Dan of "The Third Alarm."

But time and efficiency experts have relegated them to the odd jobs department. They are tenderly remembered, however, by the men who worked with them and by the fire fans, and "The Third Alarm" should do a cracking good business. It's built on the tale of a driver and his horses who were replaced by motor trucks, and it carries an appeal straight to the heart.

Dan MacDonald for twenty years had been driving No. 7. He was known by everybody connected with the fire department as the ablest driver of the lot. He and his especial pet, Bullet, a stalwart white fire horse, were the subjects of many a fireside tale. Children from surrounding neighborhoods spent every moment they could squeeze in talking to Dan, petting Bullet, and riding around the lot back of the engine house on Bullet's broad back.

Across the street was Dan MacDonald's home where, during the time he had been driving for the department, he had lived happily. His family consisted of a wife who thought he could do no wrong, a youth studying to become a doctor, and tiny girl who thought her father was just about the most important human the world, with his wonderful uniform and his job that gave him charge of gentle, powerful beasts that sprang into harness with such miraculous iftness when the bells rang.

The day the big chief visited the engine house with his information that horses were to give way to fire trucks was a hideous one in the life of burly driver. The day when the fire trucks arrived and the horses were away spelled twenty-four hours of tragedy.

Big Dan labored in vain to learn the workings of the clutch and wheel of rival that had replaced his darlings. No use! He simply could not master technique of the thing, which he hated—if he would have admitted it—h a deadly hatred.

So, at last, it was necessary to retire him on pension.

The rest of the story is taken up with his struggles to obtain employment d the catastrophies that enter his life and those near to him and his. I kes a big fire to straighten out matters finally for everybody concerned is fire provides the "real punch" of the picture.

The cast boasts Ralph Lewis, who is always a reliable actor. He's the iver. Johnnie Walker is nice as his son. Ella Hall, who retains her girl ness marvelously, is also there, as are several other capable players ere are splendid fire scenes and some intensely pathetic moments, tem ed, it must be said, by other incidents that are not so good.

But the average human, of which we are all IT (Yes? No?), will thor hly enjoy "The Third Alarm."

That's honest!

See you tomorrow!

ASK ME! ASK ME!

JOHNNIE: I'm no judge of masculine beauty, but, from your description ou must be a wow! The fire department or the police force could undoubt dly use you if the pictures cannot. And O, to be a life guard in the good old ummer time! Y'wekkum!

AMY R.: Walter Hiers will play in "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime." Yes, e rôle was to have been Wallace Reid's.

WAUKEGAN: Don't get the idea. Don't believe I'd like it if I did. Reckon u'd better keep it.

SCHOOLGIRL: Yes, gladly—if you'll send a stamped, self-addressed en lope. Can't get too personal right out in the public print, you know.

E. A. R.: Never wrote one. It does NOT pay to keep a chip on your ulder. Thank you, my dear! "Every day, in every way"—you know!

KNOCKOUT: May Allison is the wife of Robert Ellis. No, Helene Chad ck and Richard Dix are not married. I wouldn't be foolish, if I were you. u'd probably regret having written such a letter as soon as you had mailed it.

B. B. B.: Eva and Jane Novak are sisters. The latter starred in "Thelma." e Brady WAS married to James Crane. 'Sall over now! Henry Walthall ed in the picture you mention. No, the girl fainted. During the faint she a dream or something of the kind. Awfully glad you wrote.

KICK KORNER

ITS OBJECTION—OBJECTION.

Dear Miss Tinée: Having noted your explanation of the minaret as being balcony of a Mohammedan temple where the priest called believers to their yer, I desire to give some corrections for your information.

In the first place, a minaret is not a balcony, but a tower in connection a mosque, which may be comprised of a number of balconies; also, the vidual who calls believers to prayer from a balcony of the minaret is not riest. The caliph appoints as a representative in leading religious services imam. This imam in turn appoints a muezzin, or muaddhin, who stands, he proper times, upon the balcony of the minaret and summons the good le to their prayer.

Also, I should like to make mention of something I noted in connection Norma Talmadge's pictures, "The Voice from the Minaret." Mosques, consequently their minarets, and particularly those located in Damascus, not situated so that the windows of any home or apartment overlook the in making his calls. This situation occurred several times in this photo, among many other discrepancies and incongruities.

It seems to me it would be logical to expect that any production on which producer is expending a large sum of money would be worthy of a little spent in perfecting details, which either do or do not make the picture a . There might be some excuse for misrepresentation in stage produc with the well known limitations of the stage, but the motion picture, its unlimited possibilities, is no place for carelessness. C. V.

itor's note—And I thought I knew EVERYTHING!

ar Miss Tinée: Far be it from me to criticize anything in the movie y, but in "Sure Fire Flint," featuring Johnny Hines, I noticed some which was far from possible.

am an operator myself, and am therefore thoroughly familiar with the ion of dictating machines, and I noticed that the dictating tube fell to or, the cylinder started to revolve, and yet what was said was recorded w, such a thing is impossible, because there is a lever which has to be wn with the hand, or locked down, in order to have the cylinder revolve. sides, unless the lips are close to the dictating machine, nothing will be ed.

y do directors permit such impossibilities? KATHRYN.

ar Miss Tinée: I want to register a kick against punk stories and dumb rs in general, and against "Money, Money, Money" and its manufac star in particular. Ugh! What a story, with its slush heroics and situations! At that, it might have been made fairly entertaining had

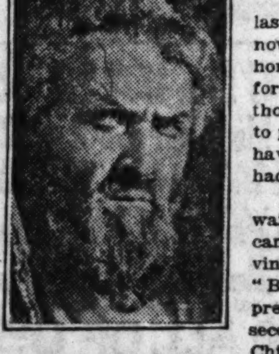
We Have with Us the Russ'ans and a Renewal of Fascinating Operas

By Edward Moore.

FURTHER explorations in a fascinating field will be taken up by the Russian Grand Opera company tomorrow night at the Auditorium, where a stay of four weeks is planned. Preliminary announcements promise a high degree of entertainment: operas of an altogether unwonted musical and artistic interest for those who like operas for their own sake; some famous names for those whose enjoyment lies in the contemplation of celebrities. Among the latter are Feodor Chaliapin and Ina Bourskaya.



FEODOR CHALIAPIN
As Boris, with the Russian Opera.

When this company came to the Olympic theater last March it was a less populous organization than now, but it excited attention from the first for the honest sincerity with which it presented its performances. Harried and worn from a strenuous though romantic tour of the orient, it was still able to present some of the most interesting operas that have ever been written and make them liked. It had atmosphere.

That Russian opera is a mine of richness still waiting to be worked by American companies became apparent a few months later, when the Ravinia company put on an abridged version of "Boris Godunoff" and the Chicago Civic company presented "Sniegurotchka." Particularly in the second work the portents became striking. The Chicago company's performance was a first class musical one, also, with the exception of two or three of the cast, quite in the Russian manner. It promptly became one of the great hits of the season, which may or may not have influence when it comes to making up new répertoire for next winter.

It is little more than a year ago that the company first touched American soil. Before that it had had a five years' tour of the far east that you will need a map of the world to trace. The members gathered from Petrograd, Moscow, Kiev, and Odessa and assembled in Ekaterinburg in April, 1917. From there the line took them to Tobolsk, Omsk, Tomsk, Irkutsk, Harbin, and Vladivostok, and by ship to Tokio. Another shift carried them in succession to Shanghai, Hongkong, Manila, Singapore, Penang, Rangoon, and across India to Calcutta, Agra, Delhi, Allahabad, and Bombay.

Partially retracing this path, the course now took the company to Java, where it remained for nine months; then Manila and Tokio again, and finally the trip across the Pacific, arriving in Seattle a year ago last December.

First Aid in Pronunciation.

One of the principal difficulties with the Russian engagement involves the pronunciation of the names of operas and artists. There is, however, a polylinguistic expert now at the Auditorium, and he has kindly obliged with a list of names with the pronunciation conforming as nearly as possible to English speech. Here it is for the first week's operas:

Pikovaya Dama (Pique Dame): Pee-ko-vah-yah (accent on third syllable) Dah-mah.

Boris Godunoff: Baw-rees (accent second) Go-doo-nuff.

Russalka (The Mermaid): Accent second.

Tsarskaya Nevyesta (The Tsar's Bride): Tsar-skah-yah (accent first) Nev-yes-tah (accent second).

And here are some of the artists:

Sergei Anfimoff: Sair-gay-ee Ahn-fee-muff (hard g; accent second in each).

Banishing Her Disappointment by Playing "The Laughing Lady"

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Ethel Barrymore is rapidly forgetting her recent trouble with William Shakespeare and the sad eyed Juliet by playing another smart divorcée in Alfred Sutro's comedy, "The Laughing Lady." In this new play she returned Monday night at the Longacre to her most engaging comedy manner. Again she spoke the honeyed and spicy epigrams of the typical English drawing room comedy with her old enthusiasm, seasoning them with fascinating smiles and granting them an occasional tear to give the sentimental passages weight.

ETHEL BARRYMORE
Comes back in her comedy manner.

There seemed to me just a hint of disappointment in her acceptance of her first audience's enthusiastic acclaim, as though she did not find it easy to forgive her friends their recent coldness. She smiled for them in the play, but she was sober faced when she took her curtain calls. They tried to induce her to make a speech, but she refused them.

"The Laughing Lady" is the spirited Lady Marjorie Colladine, married to a restless warrior demobilized but still hungry for adventure. When he leaves her too much to herself, Lady Marjorie grows reckless and rebellious. In this mood she deliberately permits a man to visit her hotel room in his pajamas. Her husband divorces her in spite of her protested innocence. Fighting to retain her social position she meets at dinner the lawyer who had torn her reputation to shreds in court. To be revenged upon him she becomes deliberately flirtatious. Within twenty-four hours she has him pleading for her forgiveness and proposing that they fly together to South America.

To her dismay she also finds herself falling in love with the impetuous lawyer, but checks her passion in time to send him back to his family while she a little sadly agrees to let her own husband have the divorce decree annulled.

Not much of a play, but gracefully and smartly written and well acted. Cyril Keightley plays the lawyer, McKay Morris the husband, and there are two good performances by Katherine Emmett and Violet Kemble Cooper.

Business of Selecting a Husband.

I fear for the future of Rachel Crothers' "Mary the 3d." Most of the smart folk are praising it as the best thing she has done, and that is ominous. It is a good play, however—one in which three generations of Marys are posed in illuminating contrasts in the business of husband selection and home making.

The first Mary, in 1870, appearing in a sort of curtained prologue to the play proper, is dimpled and blonde, sweet scented and clinging. Having set her heart on marrying her William, and fearing that he is being taken from her by a flashier Irene, she lures him into the shadows, lays a gently restraining hand upon his pulsing forearm, and advises him to go right ahead and marry Irene if he wants to, and forget all about poor little her. So William, big and strong, crushes her to his brocaded waistcoat, and that's that.

The second Mary, wearing puffed sleeves and a towering pompadour, in 1897, the daughter of the first Mary and the captured William, is similarly torn between Robert, the resolute, and Richard, the soulful. There is something

Indifferent Play Brings Neglect for Mrs. Fiske

By Sheppard Butler.

IT IS told of Mrs. Fiske that it irks her to be advertised as "America's foremost actress." The matter, they say, has been the subject of rather emphatic disagreement with her managers; to a considerable extent the objectionable phrase has been removed, at her insistence, from the billing which heralds her play. An illuminating sidelight, here, on a figure long familiar to fame—illuminating, and provocative, too. Who, if not Mrs. Fiske, is America's foremost actress?

MRS. FISKE.

The reflection is pointed by the melancholy circumstance of her impending departure. She leaves next Saturday night, carrying with her no more than the memory of a brief and unprofitable engagement. The ordinary mummers come and stay and come again, reaping rich rewards. The greatest—well, let us say the peer—of them all returns after three years' absence and finds four weeks in Chicago too many. "The Dice of the Gods" has not done well here.

It is too bad that an indifferent play should thus cloud a brilliant performance by imposing on it the handicap of neglect. Natural, perhaps, but too bad—not so much for Mrs. Fiske as for the theater going public. One seldom sees great acting. But one sees it at the Cort. Those who have stayed away have missed an experience not often to be encountered.

I do not expect soon to forget the five minutes in which the Patricia Baird of the play decides to die. She is hopelessly in the clutches of the morphine habit, physically, mentally, and morally. Her brilliant, indomitable spirit remains, but it is erratic now, darting into strange channels. Her sense of humor is at once bubbling and cruel. She charms the rabble of the neighborhood and directs bitter taunts at her daughter. She lies imperturbably, jests ironically at "the pitiless something they call law and order," accepts the death of the man she loved with seeming unconcern.

The Appeal of Tragedy "Without Heroics."

Toward the end of the play her schemes to sell her daughter to a rich suitor are uncompromisingly defeated. There is a romance to which, she perceives, her presence is a burden. Presently the girl catches her in the act of stealing. In this predicament something of the shabby quality of her life seems to penetrate the armor of her flippancy.

They leave her alone on the stage and she stands quietly for a moment, thinking. Then she picks up a bottle from a table, pours tablets into a glass of water, and drinks. After another moment of thought, as if wondering idly what to do next, she walks over to a couch. Reaching it, she turns, and what sounds like a casual remark falls from her lips:

"Perhaps some day the clouds will lift. I shouldn't be at all surprised."

No one is there, but you know she is talking to her dead lover. You are just beginning to understand.

Sitting on the couch, she picks up a shawl lying there and wraps it around her knees, tightly, snugly, as if she were cold. When this is adjusted to her liking she lies down and with a single motion draws part of the shawl over her face. Outside there is a burst of noisy laughter (it is festival time in Florence) and a band of revelers runs heedlessly past the open window. On this merry sound and on the silent form under the shawl the curtain falls.

In its stark simplicity the little scene is ineffably poignant. It is brief, briskly done, altogether businesslike and matter of fact. It is the passing of one who scoffed at heroics in life and has no time for them in death. Solicitude about getting the shawl wrapped just right seems her chief preoccupation; the apostrophe to her dead lover, a passing incident. How many actresses would not have reversed the emphasis? How many would have resisted the temptation to fling themselves tragically on the couch? Here is more than reticence. It is the touch of genius.

Mr. Woods Blasts Another Hope for Thrifty Playgoing.

The report that Mr. A. H. Woods, on taking over the Columbia, would establish there a policy of charging no more than $2 for admission to entertainment of the highest order was about the most encouraging thing that has come to light on the prospect of a return to normalcy in theater prices.

Only one consideration arises to modify its attractiveness. Mr. Woods says it isn't true.

What he now plans is to take possession of the playhouse on May 1, devote three months to remodeling it, and open it in August as a headquarters of musical production similar to that which Sam H. Harris has established at the Music Box theater in New York. That means expensive shows (consider the "Music Box Revue") at expensive prices—quite the opposite of the pleasantly rumored popular price régime.

The Columbia, in its new guise, will be called the Adelphi, unless some other name bobs up that sounds better. In its remodeling process the gallery probably will be taken out and the seating capacity otherwise reduced, to give the effect of an "intimate" theater. This is the fashion of the moment in the show world. Only for the movies are the vast auditoriums, seating thousands, now being built. For the spoken drama or for music the small playhouse is the thing.

Mr. Cohan, when he rebuilds his venerable Grand Opera house this summer, will observe the same tendency. The walls will be left standing, but changes to be made in the interior will reduce the seating capacity from 1,405 to about 1,150. Here, too, the old gallery will disappear. Soon there won't be a gallery left in town.

Managorial Valor and Box Office Discretion.

This passing of the gallery and general reduction in the size of theaters, together with the prevailing high cost of producing plays, would seem to make any modification in the price of theater tickets a remote possibility. If it costs more to stage a show and fewer people go to see it, it stands to reason that the patrons' pocketbooks must stand the difference. It's the theatergoer who pays, and pays, and pays.

Still, there is another side to the picture. While the builders are blindly "following the leader" and reducing seating capacities, some of the larger playhouses are doing very well with experiments in moderate prices.

Eddie Cantor's engagement at the Apollo is a case in point. Coming into Chicago on the heels of Al Jolson, an entertainer of vaguely similar appeal, was considered, for Cantor, a doubtful venture. Some one decreed, however, that the Apollo's prices should be lowered, and the maneuver proved to be wisely conceived. Cantor has been breezing along prosperously and "Make It Snappy," at $3, has been giving "Sally," at $4, brisk competition.

Some of the managers are having a like experience in New York. Henry W. Savage started it by offering a first class musical show, "The Clinging Vine," at what is known to the trade as a "$2.50 top." This proved highly successful, and since then two others, "Wildflower" and "Sun Showers," have adopted the same price mark. As a result, it is said, several more expensive entertainments have encountered hard sledding.

The managers are not in business for their health, and if they find they can do better at $2.50 than at $3.50 or $4, why, no doubt, $2.50 it will be. That sounds hopeful.

But at a $2.50 scale, they say, elaborate musical entertainment must be housed in a large theater to make money. And the large theaters are disappearing. That doesn't sound so hopeful.

About all we can do is to be thankful for the few large theaters that remain, pray for some more, and hope for the best.

Bennett May Play "The Fool" Here; Theater Notes.

Channing Pollock's much-discussed play, "The Fool," scheduled for September arrival at the Selwyn, may come in the spring instead, with the original player of its leading rôle at the head of the Chicago company. Richard Bennett was the first actor of Pollock's minister hero, having had the part when "The Fool" was presented last summer on the Pacific coast. Obligations to appear in "He Who Gets Slapped" prevented his continuing with the play when it was taken to New York, but his season in the Andreyev fantasy is now nearing its end, and negotiations for his early return to Chicago in the Pollock opus are now under way.

Mme. Olga Petrova will come to town on April 2 to reveal a new play of her own authorship, known, when she wrote it, as "Harlot's House" but since named "The Red Light." Word reaches me via Western Union that it is "powerful drama Slavic theme handled frankly fearlessly Petrova's characteristic manner." The theater it will occupy has not been specified.

Plans for staging the Czecho-Slovakian "insect comedy," "The World We Live In," at the Auditorium next month are said to have been abandoned. After the scenery and other paraphernalia had been shipped to Chicago it was found that other engagements at the Auditorium would interfere with continuous playing. The production may be made here later in the season.

Miss Jane Cowl will not, after all, appear as Juliet in Chicago this year. Her success in New York is of such proportions that she expects to remain there until summer, going afterward to London. Sholom Asch's "The God of Vengeance" is named as a possible successor of "Partners Again" at the Selwyn, which theater Miss Cowl was to have visited.

If you think there is nothing left to be invented in mystery plays, consider the star possessed a few brains and a little sense of humor. Recently you credited Agnes Ayres with two expressions. Mae, dear—Katherine MacDonald has one—just one. M. R.

Dear Miss Tinée: Having noted you explanation of the minaret as being the balcony of a Mohammedan temple where the priest called believers to their prayer, I desire to give some corrections for your information.

In the first place, a minaret is not a balcony, but a tower in connection with a mosque, which may be comprised of a number of balconies; also the individual who calls believers to prayer from a balcony of the minaret is not a priest. The caliph appoints as a representative in leading religious services an imam. This imam in turn appoints a muezzin or muedhdhin, who stands, at the proper times, upon the balcony of the minaret and summons the good people to their prayer.

Also I should like to make mention of something I noted in connection with Norma Talmadge's picture "The Voice from the Minaret." Mosques and consequently their minarets, and particularly those located in Damascus, are not situated so that the windows of any home or apartment overlook the muezzin making his calls.

It seems to me it would be logical to expect that any production on which the producers are expending a large sum of money would be worthy of a little time spent in perfecting details which either do or do not make the picture a classic. There might be some excuse for misrepresentations in stage production, with the well known limitations of the stage, but the motion picture with its unlimited possibilities is no place for carelessness. C. V.

Theater Notes: Here's Another Mystery Drama

this synopsis of "The Rear Car," which comes to the Cort next week:

"The scene is a transcontinental express train going up the steep grade of the Great Divide. Suddenly comes a voice cheering the passengers with the news that the lights are to go out, one by one, until the train reaches the top of the ridge. 'There the last light will go out,' says the voice. 'When it does, the rear car will be cut off, backing down the grade. It will crash into the express which follows you. It will crash into it at Indian canyon and nothing will be left. Watch the lights!' When the occupants of the rear car try to escape they find everything locked and barred. Then a lot of weird things begin to happen."

Aaron Hoffman's "Light Wines and Beer," coming to the Woods on March 11, will arrive, curiously enough, precisely on the fifth anniversary of the opening of the theater with another play by the same author. The Woods began operations March 11, 1918, with Hoffman's "Friendly Enemies."

Lee Kugel, producer of "Zeno," reports that he has received two offers from London for foreign rights to the play, one from Italy, and a request for an option from France. Five New York theaters, he says, want the piece, and, he adds, "we have been figuratively flooded with offers for the movie rights."

"Extra," the newspaper play whose owners wanted to send it to Ch[illegible], has turned up its toes instead and expired in New York.

Differences of opinion which resulted in the untimely withdrawal of Thompson Buchanan's new comedy, "The Sporting Thing to Do," have been composed, and the play will open in New York tomorrow night. Miss Emily Stevens retains the leading rôle, but Miss Clara Joel has been substituted for Miss Frances Underwood in the part of next importance.

The New York Theater Guild promises a notable production of "King Lear" for next season, with a cast headed by Rudolph Schildkraut, father of Joseph, who is now just beginning his career as an English speaking actor.

Miss Helen Ware, of whom not much has been heard in recent seasons, has joined Miss Emily Ann Wellman in performances of "The Wasp," a new play by Tom Fallon.

Eddie Cantor, in his otherwise unoccupied moments, is arranging a benefit performance for the Chicago Osteopathic hospital, to be held at the Apollo next Sunday afternoon.

The New Plays

OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT.

"The Awful Truth" [Powers'].—Miss Ina Claire, a visitor last season in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," returns now in a comedy by Arthur Richman—something about a youthful divorcée confronted with the quaint necessity of calling on her ex-husband to reassure a suitor as to her probity. Bruce McRae heads the supporting cast, which includes Miss Cora Witherspoon, Miss Louise Mackintosh, Paul Harvey, Arthur W. Metcalfe and some others.

"In Springtime of Youth" [Illinois].—A musical play of early New England, b[illegible] on a comedy of foreign origin by F[illegible]hauser and Schanzer. Walter Rollo and Sigmund Romberg have provided the tunes, and the performance enlists the services of George MacFarlane, eminent baritone; Harry K. Morton and Harry Kelly, comedians; Miss Olga Steck, Miss Zella Russell, Robert Halliday and various others.

OPENING NEXT WEEK.

"Peter Weston" [Harris, Feb. 25].—Frank Keenan in a new play by Frank Dazey and Leighton Osmun. The cast includes Miss Marie Nordstrom, Miss Judith Anderson, Jay Hanna, Clyde North and many others.

"The Rear Car" [Cort, Feb. 25].—More mystery melodrama. Edward E. Rose is the author, Taylor Holmes will have the leading rôle, and Miss Edna Hibbard will head the feminine contingent.

"The Blimp" [Olympic, Feb. 25].—Herbert Corthell in a new comedy by Conrad Westervelt. Miss Ann Davis, Miss Marian Mears, Leon Gordon and James Dyrenforth will be among those present.

IMPENDING JOYS.

"Light Wines and Beer" [Woods, March 11].—A comedy by Aaron Hoffman dealing with prohibition, and known on the Pacific coast as "Now and Then." Joseph Cawthorn and George Bickel will be in it.

"The Red Light" (April 2)—Mme. Olga Petrova in a new play of her own authorship, coming to a theater yet to be named.

"R. U. R." [Cort].—A satirical melodrama by Karel Capek, one of the brothers aforesaid, dealing with a race of automatons. To arrive at the Cort, probably, when "The Rear Car" departs.

"William's Wife" [Powers].—Miss Ruth Chatterton in a new play by Eugenie Senecal Courtright, appointed for arrival late in March or early in April.

BACK TO 1812

MISS OLGA STECK.

She comes to the Illinois tomorrow night to sing the rôle of a belle of 1812 in the entertainment called "In Springtime of Youth." This, they insist, is a musical play, not a musical comedy—which would seem to indicate that it is one of those affairs in which the plot is not completely obliterated.

about Robert she finds it difficult to resist, and yet Richard offers much in his promised search for the higher romance that she regrets missing. She yields to Robert in the end, eagerly confident that their love, however material and physical it may seem to poets, will prove inspiring and eternal.

Then we come, in 1923, to the third Mary. An honest little modernist is this one, determined to take a good long look before she leaps into matrimony. An attractive flapper, she is not so sure "free love" is not a practical solution for the mismating problem. To prove which she frankly proposes going to camp with three or four boys and girls of her advanced set, where, far from chaperons and home influences, she will study the situation and the candidate husbands at close range. She would, however, observe the major conventions, putting the girls in one cabin and the boys in another.

Her grandmother, quite satisfied in her day to give up her "independence" for the devotion of her William, is horrified at the mere suggestion. But her mother, who has found her Robert a good provider but a sad lover, is at least half way sympathetic, though stoutly refusing her consent to the experiment.

So away goes "Mary the 3d" with her two steadies and a couple of chums, riding sixty miles an hour for camp. Then something happens — a sudden realization of how much she is hurting her mother—and Mary turns the investigators around and brings them home at dawn.

Here, hiding in the living room, she learns for the first time that her own father and mother have made a mess of their romance; that they frankly no longer love each other and have had but little in common for many years. Thoroughly disillusioned and unhappy, she joins with her brother in insisting that her parents be divorced and end the farce of pretending to be happily married.

In the settlement of her own problem Mary reverts gracefully to type, takes the strong and eager Lynn and lets the dreaming idealist, Hal, go. Something, she says at the tag, something tells her that her love and Lynn's will prove the exception and live eternally.

A thoughtful and interesting play. Being an observing Illinoisian, Miss Crothers stands independently upon the sidelines of domesticity looking in at her friends trying to make a go of it. What she sees frankly distresses her, and her last three plays—"Nice People," "Everyday," "Mary the 3d"—have been honest and vibrantly sincere propaganda favoring the reform that begins at home.

The one thing that may count against the play's popularity will be its uncompromising exposure of the neighbors as a nagging and unhappy lot. It never has been my observation that the neighbors like to see or hear themselves as Miss Crothers sees and hears them in this play. Not, at least, at prevailing theater rates. There never has been but one nagging success—and that "The Taming of the Shrew," which is a farce. But there is considerable good comedy in "Mary," and we are hoping it is enough to save it.

The play is splendidly played by Louise Huff, from the movies. She differentiates the three heroines skillfully and makes the flapper attractive and understandable. May Galyer, the "Blossy" of "Old Lady 31," scores a similar success as the granny, and there are good performances by Beatrice Terry, Ben Lyon, and Morgan Farley.

Victims of Environment.

A second American character comedy drama new to New York is Owen Davis' "Icebound," and it, too, does great credit to its author. In this play, the best and most consistent, I think, that he has written, Mr. Davis takes a group of "icebound" natives of New England, and reveals them as they live and snarl at and envy each other through the hard winters that shut them in.

Achieving no more than a half thaw in their short summer, it is the author's conclusion that they are largely victims of their environment. They grow bigoted, narrow, avaricious, selfish, because, like so many clumsy vampires, they feed unconsciously, but none the less certainly, upon each other's energies, spiritual, moral and physical, until, like the soil they work, they are thinned out and barren of the finer human virtues.

Such a family, at least, are the Jordans. When Mother Jordan comes to die they sit around the stiff and ugly parlor of the Jordan homestead "like so many crow buzzards," pretending a sorrow they do not feel, and eager only to learn what division the old lady has made of the Jordan money.

But mother, strong and hard as the rest of them, plays the family a trick. She leaves her entire fortune to a distant relative, Jane Crosby, who has nursed and cared for her for eight years.' Her only concern, she admits in a sealed letter left with her will, is her youngest son, her Benjamin, and it is her hope that the girl who gets the money will offer herself as a sacrifice to help, through "giving her heart to be trampled upon," to redeem Ben, who has been the black sheep of the family.

Hopes for the Best.

Ben, under indictment for arson, having burned down a neighbor's barn in a fit of temper, risks arrest to come to his mother's funeral. Jane extracts a reluctant promise from him to do as she says until the date of his trial in the spring, if she will go bail for him. The drama develops out of Jane's attempt to save Ben, who remains consistently ornery to the end. He realizes then his great dependence on the capable Jane, and though there is no promise that his set characteristics will be completely reformed by her, she philosophically agrees to take her chance with him because she has loved him devotedly all her life. "I'll have my little fling at happiness," she says, "whether it lasts for a few weeks, or months, or a year."

Sound drama, touched with enough good character comedy to save it from being too drab and ugly. Its conclusions are a little obvious, once the excellent first act is passed, and the action frequently monotonous and sluggish. But only the more restless theatergoers will notice this, and even they should get enough from it to count it stimulating entertainment.

Phyllis Povah, the ingénue who came into prominence as the bouncing ingénue of "Mr. Pim Passes By," plays Jane uncommonly well, considering her training has been mostly English. She is not much of a Yank, and neither is any of her associates, but she is finely and convincingly human. There are good performances in support by Robert Ames, John Westley, Edna May Oliver, Boots Wooster, Willard Robertson, and young Andrew Lawlor Jr.

Energies in "Wildflower."

Edith Day, the attractive musical comedy soubrette whose marital experiences have brought her into unpleasant notoriety recently, emerged triumphantly last week in the production of a new musical comedy called "Wildflower." As though determined to convince the home folks that she was worthy of their loyal support, she danced and sang her way through many encores. She is pretty and gifted, and if her revengeful American husband will let her have the divorce she craves that she can marry the English actor to whom she is devoted, a lot of people will wish her well.

IN RUSS OPERA

OLGA KAZANSKAYA.
[Daguerre Photo.]

She is one of the reasons for believing that the coming season of Russian opera at the Auditorium will be entertaining to the eye as well as the ear. The picture represents her as Marfa in Rimsky-Korsakoff's opera, 'Tsarskaya Nevyesta," better known to musical circles of the United States as "The Tsar's Bride."

Slams of Life

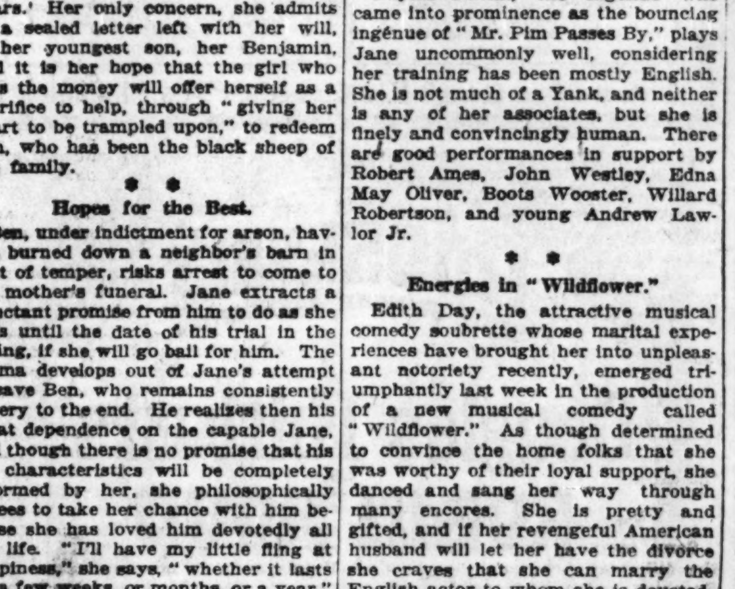
By J. P. McEVOY

THE POISEFUL PORTER.

How consummately fine the poise
Of all the Pullman porter boys,
With what a manner, what an air
They lead us here and wave us there;
Each accent how reserved and bland,
How eloquently sure each hand,
Though sorely crossed, though vexed and tried
How patient, calm, and dignified!

I doubt if on the land or sea
There could have been nor could there be
A mortal so devoid of mirth
As he who draws an upper berth,
And yet so dour and sour a cuss
Though he be raising blazes plus
Cannot disturb the peace serene
That floods yon porter's placid bean!

Yes, old or young or fat or thin,
Armed with tracts or hipped with gin,
Weepy, sleepy, mad, or glad,
Solemn, silly, sappy, sad,
None can ruffle, none can roil—
Gives them all the same old oil—
Ah, I envy them their poise,
All those Pullman porter boys.



Delight your guests with Rachmaninoff's playing!

Society Leaders Seeking Leisure in Remote Places

By Mme. X.

SPEAKING socially and comparatively, Chicago bids fair to be a desert soon. One by one the leaders of its pleasant destinies are abandoning it in favor of remote spots where they will have few or no social responsibilities. Mr. and Mrs Joseph Coleman departed for Bermuda last Monday, where they will spend the next two months. Mrs. C. M. Ely is already there and Mrs. George A McKinlock and Mrs. Chauncey B. Blair threaten to go there soon.

All of these wanderers are going to stay at an inn with a preposterously romantic and attractive name, Pomander Gate. Doesn't it sound Georgian, of the period of the fourth of his name? Will Beau Brummel be there and will Joseph Coleman foregather with Beau Nash?

Still further to accent our leaderless condition is the fact that Mrs Kellogg Fairbank is basking in the air of southern Florida, probably eating pineapples and drinking cocoanut milk with the Frederick C. Bartletts and Hugh T. Birch in their new and Spanish hacienda. Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Letts are likewise enjoying the soft relaxation of Florida breezes, as are Mr. and Mrs. Honoré Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Deering, and many other perfectly good Chicagoans. The Hugh J. McBirneys and the Potter Palmers are following them in the near future.

California Not So Popular.

Our fellow citizens are great at flocking together when they go in search of places new and climates balmy. Some years they all go to southern California. Other years a tour of the West Indies will lure large numbers of them or Europe will beckon irresistibly. This season southern California is not so popular as formerly. The Edward L. Ryersons and David and Thomas Jones and Miss Gwethalyn Jones are occupying their lovely hilltops, but the Robert G. McGanns' charming house stands empty while they are both at Atlantic City watching the recovery of their daughter, Miss Grace McGann, who had a sharp attack of pneumonia recently at Foxcroft, Va., where she was at school.

Mr. and Mrs. John Borden spend more and more of their time at Mr. Borden's big stock breeding place in Mississippi. In fact he is there about half the time, as he is much absorbed in raising the finest line of shorthorns in the country. Mrs. Tiffany Blake is another social light who has abandoned Chicago to its fate while she spends a few days with the Percy Hammonds in Gotham and a week or so with the Medill McCormicks in Washington. Mrs. Augustus A. Carpenter has left the helm of the Chicago-Lake Forest Ravinia committee for a short trip to New York.

In fact, wherever I look I see vacant chairs beside the fireplaces of our prominent homes. Those who are left gather together in little groups and try to be happy, some with bridge, some with theaters and concerts, and some with just a delicious sense of leisure almost unknown in this tense and bustling community of ours.

Talk Fests at Noon.

More and more is it getting to be the custom to make forums of noonday luncheons downtown. These gatherings take place at one or the other of the centrally situated hotels. The Chicago Council on Foreign Relations has become a regular institution with its luncheons at the Palmer House where all sorts of notabilities have spoken on all sorts of subjects pertaining to foreign countries as they might possibly touch us and our interests.

Among those who seldom miss one of these gatherings are George F. Porter, William C. Boyden, Victor Elting, Mrs. William G. Hibbard, Morton Hull, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Tyson, Mr. and Mrs. William Nitze, Arthur Aldis, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Hale, Mr. and Mrs. Willoughby Walling, Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank and—but how can I go on further? They flock by the hundreds to these talk fests, and get good return for their money.

In New York the attendance is even larger at similar luncheons where the endeavor is to give Americans a broader outlook on the world today and our relations to it and its problems. Informal discussions frequently follow the principal speaker or speakers, and it is a fine place in which to air one's views.

Bond of Comradeship.

Last Thursday the Chicago chapter of the English Speaking union had a talking luncheon in the same place, the Palmer house, when that remarkable personality, the English woman preacher, Miss Agnes Maude Royden, spoke on "The English Speaking Peoples as a Force for World Reconstruction." The English Speaking union came into existence in 1918, although the idea had been discussed since 1906 by such farsighted men as the late Dr. Walter Hines Page, our ambassador to England during the stressful war days, and by Alexander Smith Cochran [locally famed as having been Harold McCormick's immediate predecessor, matrimonially speaking]. Its first president in this country was William Howard Taft, now chief justice of the U. S. Supreme court. He was followed by John W. Davis, who followed Dr. Page as ambassador to Great Britain.

The president of the English branch has been since the beginning Arthur J. Balfour, formerly British prime minister. So you see the enterprise has eminent backers. Its aim is "to draw together in the bond of comradeship the English speaking peoples of the world."

Two Quite Dissimilar.

Some inquiring minds ask what is the difference between the English Speaking union and the Council on Foreign Relations? They are quite dissimilar, and are run with different aims in view. The former, as said above, endeavors to enlighten us on international matters. The latter's object in the U. S. A. is to provide a medium which shall shepherd and look out for visitors from other English speaking countries and see that they have opportunities to see our division of the English speaking races. Gen. Ronald Storrs, Miss Agnes Maude Royden, and the dean of Windsor castle, the Very Rev. A. V. Baillie, all came to our American division of this get-together association and were set in the paths most interesting and profitable to these distinguished travelers.

Some Chicagoans that you and I know went to England last summer, and through their membership in the E. S. U. secured opportunities to visit old gardens and historic houses, and also to meet some of the most notable Britishers of today.

At the head of the Chicago branch is Albert Nelson Marquis, president, with four vice presidents, Edward O. Brown, Samuel Insull, Mrs. Silas Strawn, and Mrs. Frank H. Scott. McPherson Holt is secretary. The twenty-one directors are all prominent men and women. The basic idea is an excellent one and should lead to that better understanding which will make both our nations more powerful and more useful.

The Very Rev. Albert Victor Baillie is the chaplain of the British royal family and a godson of the late Queen Victoria, having been named for her and for her husband, Prince Albert. Chicago church goers will have an opportunity to hear him preach this morning at St. Chrysostom's, in Dearborn avenue, or tonight before the Church club at Orchestra hall.

Background of Revolution.

One of the Civic opera's most devoted fans, who has a box which he and his wife always fill for their weekly nights besides attending many other opera performances, remarked to his chauffeur on his way downtown a few mornings after the last opera of the season: "Well, no more opera until next November."

The chauffeur nodded thoughtfully, then inquired with a melancholy air:

"Ain't that there Roosian opera coming here soon?"

Mr. P. had to admit that it was. And here it is opening tomorrow night with "Pique Dame."

I am sorry that circumstances over which I have no control are taking me out to the Pacific coast just now. I'd like to go to some of these Russian operas. The troupe, with its lurid background of revolutions, violence, narrow escapes, long detours to escape bloody bolsheviki, its romance in the midst of battlefields, and its wanderings in foreign lands fires the imagination and allures the fancy. The promised operas, too, sound gay, dashing, brilliant with that ineffable fascination that so many things Russian have. There is a tragic splendor, a quality of genius about the Russians up to now which one finds nowhere else. If they ever get prosperous and civilized, they will probably lose this glamour and become like all the rest of us, humdrum, worthy, uninteresting, possible even smug, though it is hard to imagine a Russian smug.

At any rate, you lucky ones are going to have another opportunity to hear and see Feodor Chaliapin, the great basso, the greatest of them all, during this engagement. The gay world, or its shattered remnants, will turn out in full force on Tuesday, when he makes his debut here in his most celebrated rôle, "Boris Godenow," the mad Russ king. This especial evening is in the hands of those backing Association house, who have bought out the Auditorium boxes and lower floor for that night.

There will also be some inviting Russian pieces never before given here, two by Tschaikowsky, "Mazeppa" and "Christmas Eve," as well as Rimsky-Korsakoff's "The Czar's Bride," and other novelties. I am sorry for chauffeurs who have two opera seasons in a winter, but I envy the people who can go to these Russian performances.

Washington—American Citizen.

Thursday is Washington's birthday. How are you going to celebrate it if you are not a bank clerk? Of all our toiling nation I am afraid that they are probably the most devoted to the Washington tradition and most enthustastic in preserving it. I am glad I am not of this generation of youth now drinking of the fount of knowledge.

When a recent contest was held offering a prize for the best composition from a school child on the father of his country, the winner, a little girl, said in her prize essay, "Nobody loves Washington. As long as that cherry tree episode is believed, he will be like a little tin god on wheels." Just why she got the prize I can't see; can you? With such sentiments expressed by the young of the land, it is evident that a new element is entering our national life. But Washington will stand even the coldest criticism of the youngest, most ignorant child.

Go to the Chicago Historical society rooms, and read his will, a document forty-two pages long, in which he made his famous bequest to a university to be built in the District of Columbia to promote the education of American youth in their native land so that they may avoid the temptations to dissipation and extravagance incident to foreign life, and may acquire those ideals and knowledge of our institutions which should make them loyal and good citizens of the republic Washington gave his life and fortune to help found. Thursday night Dr. James Alton James, head of the history department of Northwestern university, is going to deliver an address on "Washington—American Citizen." Dr. James has recently returned from visiting some of the new republics of the near east. He found Czecho-Slovakia especially interesting.

To fan a waning patriotism it might be a good thing for the public schools to arrange class visits to the Historical society collections. It would make a living personality of the father of his country if the children could see the little plot of the survey of some of Lord Fairfax's land which Washington made at the age of 10 years; the camp kit he used as a soldier; the plans of revolutionary battles finger marked and creased by much use by the hands that guided the destinies of this country; the velvet clothes he wore for the second inauguration, March 4, 1793, among which is a sort of corset worn no doubt to improve his almost faultless figure. The sight of these articles could not fail to give a touch of reality to a personality which time and other absorbing interests have rendered somewhat remote to the younger generation.

Present Blurs Past.

It is hardly to be wondered at that Chicago is not much interested in the past when her own present is so absorbing. Every day some new plan to make her more complete, more beautiful comes up. If you and I are not slaughtered by the murderous motors and if we steer clear of the still more destructive "hooch," we shall live to see this become quite a presentable burg.

There is the new campus which the Northwestern university is planning on the lake shore which will stretch from Chicago avenue to Huron street. This will be a great addition to our straight front, that line of fine buildings and parks which promises to make us the goal of beauty seekers in years to come.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander McKinlock are asking their friends to the Casino to see the sketches that James Gamble Rogers, formerly of Chicago now of New York, will present to show the proposed development of the Alexander McKinlock memorial campus which his parents are giving to the Northwestern university in memory of their only child who fell in the great war.

The faculty of the university is proposing to make this Chicago section of their institution an effective group of buildings, one worthy of the imposing site dedicated to it. Here they will place their schools of law (with its library), of medicine, of journalism and commerce. As the designer of the Harkness memorial at Yale, Mr. Rogers has reached the heights of his profession. That is by many considered the most beautiful piece of architecture in the country.

The name of young Alexander McKinlock will live longer than those of most of his contemporaries. His heroic death in fighting for his country insures a part of this continuance in the memory of men, but it is further secured by the devoted testimony of his parents who are founding in his name benefactions in different directions. They have built a freshman dormitory at Harvard called the Alexander McKinlock dormitory. Harvard was his "alma mater." They are also giving to the Art institute a central court in the new part of the institute which stretches eastward. This probably will be a cloistered place, with statues and fountains, a secluded and beautiful spot in which art students may get their midday whiff of fresh air and renew their inspiration for art and achievement.

Quite Unlike Any Other.

The Art institute is a much more remarkable feature of the city than the average citizen realizes. It is carried on with an enlightened understanding of today and a vision into the future which is not matched by any other enterprise of its kind in this country. It has an unceasing succession of exhibits of all kinds, collections that appeal to many different kinds of people. Pictures, sculpture, prints, architectural designs, landscape garden plans, textiles, rugs, tapestries, ceramics, wild flower exhibits; in short, nothing that is concerned with the esthetic or beautiful in life is beyond the scope of their activities. It was the first—in fact, I think it was the only—public gallery to open its doors to the exhibit of the cubists, post impressionists and futurists whose visit to this country made such a sensation ten or more years ago.

The Metropolitan in New York does none of these things. It is merely the repository of splendid art treasures gathered and given to it by the monarchs of finance whose kingdom is Wall street. The Metropolitan is no pioneer in discovering new artists or forms of artistic expression.

The policy of the Art institute has from the beginning been to make it the companion and possession of the people of Chicago. It is always opened free of charge on high days and holidays. It is made as popular, as diverting, and as accessible as a park. The crowds that throng it are a testimony to this generous, far-sighted policy. Its educational force is difficult to measure, but is as potent as its attendance is numerous.

Memorials to Sons and Daughters.

The various contributory organizations, such as the Friends of American Art, the Antiquarian, and the Arts club, enhance the value of the institute, which now numbers more art students than any other art museum in the country.

The new and extensive part which has been added in the last two years is to be called the Hutchinson wing, after that devoted and faithful custodian of the Art institute's destinies for many years past, Charles L. Hutchinson. It will include the Alexander McKinlock court, the Kenneth Sawyer Goodman theater, and the rooms of the Antiquarian society.

The theater is being built by William O. Goodman, the father of the late Kenneth Sawyer Goodman, who died

Get Rid of That Double Chin

MARVELOUS NEW CREAM RESTORES GIRLISH NECK LINES IN AMAZINGLY SHORT TIME!

NOTHING does more to destroy youthful looks in any woman than a "double chin." However attractive the face or figure a double chin often ages a woman's appearance a decade beyond her years.

And now a double chin is no longer necessary. The famous Century Laboratories—world's research headquarters for beauty specialties—have discovered and perfected a delightful reducing cream which, used as a neck massage twice daily, will banish any puffiness, heaviness or enlargement in the neck lines.

A double chin is not always a sign of overweight. Hence many women find that drastic dieting and exercise—while effective in reducing general overweight—are of no avail in slenderizing a flabby second chin.

Only a local treatment will banish superfluous neck flesh—without leaving the neck skin loose and flabby. And at last this long awaited local treatment has been found—the only logical and certain way to banish double chins—speedily, pleasantly—and for all time.

Applied With Patented Reducing Brush

The Reducing Cream (private laboratory formula) is applied to the chin and neck with a remarkable new invention—a rubber reducing brush with soft vacuum cup tentacles—which strengthen and vitalize the weak and sagging tissues and blood corpuscles under the chin.

The treatment itself is delightful. New life and tingle is immediately felt in the dull and heavy blood cells—responsible for the flabby chin flesh.

The cream fairly seems to dissolve the fat—contracting the superfluous tissue while leaving the skin taut, firm and velvety.

Results come in an amazingly short time—two or three treatments often show astounding improvement. And a faithful use of the cream and brush for a few weeks' time will banish the most generously inflated second chin—restoring the slender neck lines and contour of maidenhood.

It's Wrong to Blight Your Beauty With Heavy Neck Lines

So wholly unnecessary now! Any woman anywhere may try this new cream and brush treatment without a penny of risk. The coupon is all you need send—we do not even ask for references. And the results are guaranteed—or there is not a penny of charge. A grateful woman, we have found, is always fair. So we leave the decision entirely to you.

REMARKABLE NO-PROFIT OFFER
Wonderful new reducing brush with every jar of reducing cream

An elated customer is the best advertisement. So we are willing and eager to distribute the first ten thousand jars of this wonderful neck reducing cream without a penny of profit. You'll tell your friends—and that will bring us hosts of orders without any further advertising cost.

The Reducing Cream and the Reducing Brush will retail in drug and department stores at $3.50 for both. But on the first 10,000 orders we will include the beauty brush absolutely free—and will forward the cream at $1.87—actual cost. The price simply covers manufacturing, shipping, advertising and overhead without one penny of profit.

And remember—results are guaranteed. If the first five days' treatment does not prove to your satisfaction that the treatment is certain and positive—you may return the cream and brush—and we'll refund your money—every penny of it—by return mail.

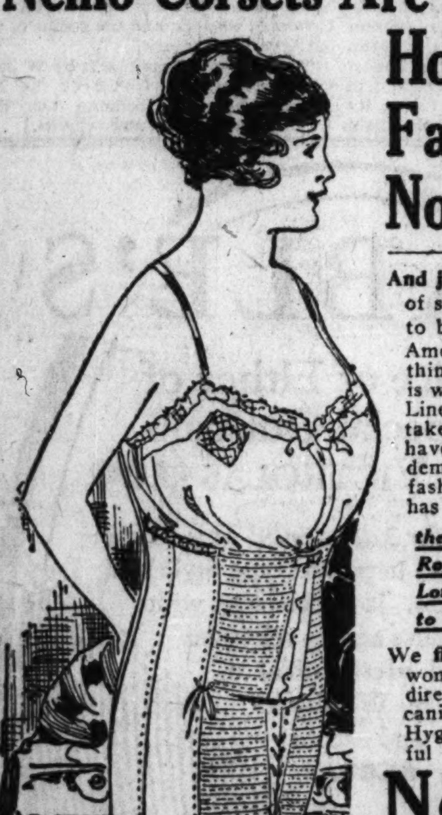
—Third Floor—Dearborn Street—



Extract of address by the Honorable Dr. Royal S. Copeland, commissioner of health of New York and United States senator elect, delivered at the Nemo Hygienic-Fashion Institute, New York.

"So you, too, who are serving society by helping women to have better bodies and better posture, and greater happiness of mind are promoting the public health. You are extending the span of life and rendering a real service to humanity; and I am glad to have the privilege of paying you that tribute. Your work is just as important as my work; and the work of those persons engaged in great industries like this one is helping humanity in a real sense. Do not let anyone get the idea into your head that your work is purely cosmetic; because, actually, you are adding to the well being, happiness and prosperity of the generation."

And just as Nemo Corsets are proud of the endorsement of such an authority as Dr. Copeland, so we are happy to be one of the chief distributors of Nemo Corsets in America. For years we have been advocating the very things that Dr. Copeland found so important—and that is why the thoughtful woman who demands Fashionable Lines, but comfort and health as well, comes here and takes the necessary time to carefully choose and to have as carefully fitted the Nemo Corset her figure demands, for such a corset alone can bring, not alone fashionable lines, but health and comfort as well, and has the endorsement of such scientific hygienists as Dr. Royal S. Copeland, the celebrated Dr. Adolph Lorenz, the equally well known Dr. Egbert Guernsey and the hosts of other hygienists to whose notice Nemo Corsets have come in their professional duties.

We fit Nemo Corsets to every woman—the slim woman, the medium woman, the plump woman, the stout woman—and fit them correctly, without extra charge—many times at the direct request of any one of many notable physicians in and around Chicago. Our Medicanical Health Station, the only one in the West, in charge of a specially trained Corset Hygienist, is at your service for consultation and advice at all times, and is especially helpful to women who need surgical fittings—no extra charge, of course.

Nemo Corsets in Complete Variety at $3 and Up to 13.50

·ART AND ARTISTS·

Food for Thought Here, but Neither Beauty Nor Humor

By Eleanor Jewett

THERE opened last Monday afternoon in the galleries of the Arts club one of those exhibitions which it has been the good fortune of the winter not to have had in profuse quantity. By some stroke of selective luck it has chanced that the more exacting of our modernists have not been brought forward this season into the limelight of public attention so, also, have they been shielded from the askance slips of the critic's pen. However, with the presentation of Walt Kuhn's paintings and water colors at the Arts club this delightful intermezzo has come to an abrupt end.

At first glance the exhibition is startling. Our eyes, unused for the moment to the exactions of blunt drawing and blunter colors, are dazzled. A suspicion of a smile flutters to them, then the realization of the story back of some of the crudities drives humor from the scene. There is little that is funny here. There is something that is tragic and more that is sincere. There is mood; there is energy; there is caprice; there is effect; there is effort—great effort.

Probably the most ghastly of the paintings, but the one that strikes nearest the truth in the reality it conjures up, is the "Prospectors," a horrible portrait of two men, like death's heads, disconsolate, hope abandoned, waiting for nothing, or everything, in the wretchedness of a frontier barroom. Which of the two is the more ghastly is hard to say. On the whole, though, the seated figure, with its sharp, upturned, blind feeling face, is more provocative of shudders than the whiter, deader, slacker figure of its companion.

Another large canvas, in which the power of the artist to illustrate graphically a determined mood is well expressed, is the "Sleeping Girl." The girl might from the sharpness of her features, the gauntness of her figure, and the shortness of her hair, be a boy, save that her slim, slippered feet betray her femininity. Aside from the feet and the abbreviated and disheveled ballet costume, one has no clew to the personality of the sleeper, but the effect of relaxation secured in the abandon of the slack limbs is remarkable.

In "Portrait" No. 20 the quizzical cock of the eyes is the telling stroke. In "Horse Thieves" the motif is tangled. The action is swamped in the blurred lines that sweep it in. So it is with the several other more or less complicated drawings and water colors where crowds and the peak of the event are simultaneously driven before you. For example, the "Attack on Stage," and, again, "The Arkansas Traveler," a chaotic expression of an idea that is there—like a needle in a haystack, vanishing when you think you see the point.

All in all, Walt Kuhn's exhibition contains food for thought, but neither beauty nor wit nor too much sense. It is interesting, as all interpretive effort is interesting, but its going will leave behind it no aching void nor mad desire to look upon his work again.

The second part of the Arts club show is gratifying after the abruptness of Mr. Kuhn's pictures. It is a collection of aquatints loaned by I. K. Friedman, and represents for the most part the France and England of a hundred years ago. Especialy delightful are the prints by Rowlandson. His "Bathing Machines," giving graphic details of those historic institutions, the "Race Ground," except for costume not so different in its atmosphere and crowds as those of today, and the amusing interior of a Cambridge campus with its jolly, portly, Dickens' characters come to life and disporting themselves right merrily, are three that linger long in your memory.

The views, more sober though no less authentic in historical incident, of imposing London buildings, and others of scenes in Paris, add to the charm of the exhibit. They are clear, quaint, and satisfying.

The exhibition will close Feb. 28.

"Cudell de Bronkhart," by V. T. Kirkbride, one of the sweetest portraits of children to be found in the Chicago Society of Etchers' exhibit in the print room of the Art institute. From every standpoint this etching exhibition is one of the finest the society has ever held, and it should be enjoyed to the full before its closing date in March.

The eleventh annual Swedish-American exhibition of paintings and sculpture was held last week in the rooms of the Swedish club. It was a pleasing exhibit; many of the paintings displayed rising above the level of any general average. Particularly was this the case with the pictures of John F. Carlson, A. N. A. The "Blowing Snow," a loaned canvas, was probably the most finished and the most beautiful piece of painting in the exhibit. His "Winter Silence" ran it a close second.

Hugo von Hofsten showed a group of eight water colors, each of them charming, though perhaps "In the Forest Preserve" and "Sunset on the Skokie" were the loveliest. As Frank V. Dudley is the painter-poet of the dune country, so is Mr. von Hofsten of the forest preserve. He knows it by heart, and its choicest beauties each year he sets on canvas for the edification and delight of us who know it too little.

A number of the paintings in the exhibition are to be sent, at the invitation of the Swedish government, to Gothenburg to be exhibited there beginning May 8. Among the canvases that will cross the Atlantic are "Winter Sunlight," by Gotthilf Ahlman; "East River, New York," by Karl Larsson; "Springtime," by Axel Linus; "Self-Portrait," by Arvid Nyholm; "Sea Power and Commerce," by Henry Reuterdahl; "Evening Glow," by Carl Ringius; "Night Reflections," by Tory Ross; "Spring Morning," by Henning Ryden; and "Lapplandskan," by Christian von Schneidau.

Several changes have been made during the last few weeks in the arrangement of the first floor galleries of the Art institute. All of the articles formerly in the Antiquarian rooms have been installed in the beautiful, well lighted galleries that were recently opened. These are to the right and down a few steps as one walks east to the end of Gunsaulus hall.

In the vacated galleries, including the corridor, which has been, up to this time, the home of the Higginbotham collection of Herculaneum and Pompeiian bronzes, the museum's collection of etchings, drawings, lithographs, prints, and water colors, will be hung. There will also be a new print library in this division of the building. The first exhibition to be attempted in the new quarters will be from the important Gurley collection, recently presented to the institute.

Gallery No. 5, the large room at the right of the main entrance to the museum, is to be used for the installation of the Pompeiian and Herculaneum bronzes, and will also house the Greek and Roman antiques. These consist of original marbles, architectural fragments, coins, terra cotta, Greek vases, Roman glassware, and other objects of Greco-Roman art.

This afternoon at 4 o'clock in the clubroom of the institute, Mme. Alla Ripley, president of the Fashion Art league, will talk on "Costume Design."

Tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in Fullerton hall, William M. Ivins Jr., curator of prints of the Metropolitan museum, will lecture on "French Portrait Engravings." The event is under the auspices of the new Print and Drawing club, of which Potter Palmer is president.

At 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon Miss Marion Gheen will speak in Fullerton hall on some of the aspects of interior decorating.

On Feb. 26 at 2:30 o'clock, in Fullerton hall, Miss Cornelia Conger will speak on "Charm and Comfort in the Home."

Tuesday afternoon of this week Frank Gardner Hale will speak in Fullerton hall at 4 o'clock on "Jewelry and the Craft Movement."

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Civics, Charity, Economics Occupy North End Club

By Kate Webber.

ONE of the most flourishing and interesting of the several prominent clubs of the north side is that energetic body of women known as the North End club, which recently celebrated its silver jubilee. Its meetings, held on every Monday at the Chicago northern Masonic temple, alternate as general club days, meetings and class days. Chairmen of the various departments plan and conduct these meetings, which are always of great interest to women of the community. Tomorrow Mlle. Marguerite Clement of Paris, France, will speak on "The People of France as They Really Are."

The civics and parliamentary law classes are under the leadership of Mrs. M. H. Lieber and meet in the morning, thus avoiding conflict with the afternoon program. The club was one of the first to have a citizenship class open to the community. Other studies are in home economics, drama, music, and art, and a new special department known as the committee for friendly coöperation with ex-service men.

The department of greatest interest to the entire membership is that of philanthropy, which has many ramifications. Several seasons ago the club undertook the sponsorship of a young Italian girl who gave promise of developing into a remarkable singer. Reports to the musical scholarship chairman from Italy, where she is studying, indicate that their protegé is progressing most favorably.

The philanthropy committee also sews for the School Children's Aid society and gives help to the Vocational Supervision league, the United Charities, the Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial lodging house and several other charitable organizations.

One of the important annual affairs is the annual view day reception and luncheon held at the Art institute, followed by a tour of the galleries to inspect the exhibition of paintings by Chicago artists. The club possesses a valuable collection of paintings, which at present are loaned to the Senn High school. Affiliation with the Municipal Art league and the Public School Art society is maintained.

A bulletin containing news of the club's activities and reports is issued monthly. The club's junior membership also is a worth while feature, which coöperates with the mother organization in working for club charities. The juniors also present a play each season.

The club has purchased recently a new site for building a permanent home and meeting place, which also will serve as a community center for the various activities of women in that section of the city.

Mrs. William F. Farrell is serving her second term as president of the North End club. The other officers are: Mrs. William C. Collins and Mrs. Samuel Frier, vice presidents; Mrs. Elias J. Ermeling, recording secretary; Mrs. Ralph H. Wheeler, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Maurice P. French, treasurer.

Mrs. William F. Farrell is president of the North End club, which will observe reciprocity day tomorrow at the Chicago Northern Masonic temple. Mrs. Edward S. Bailey and the club presidents of the Tenth district, I. F. W. C., will be guests, and Mlle. Marguerite Clement of Paris, France, will speak on "The People of France as They Really Are."

Mrs. Perkins B. Bass is a patroness for the second annual concert of the Florence Nightingale chorus of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing, to be given on the evening of Feb. 27 at the Blackstone. The funds derived will go toward the endowment fund for the enlargement and maintenance of the training school.

The eighth annual affair sponsored by St. Joseph's Ladies' Aid society will be a card party next Thursday afternoon at the Trianon, Cottage Grove and 62d street. Mrs. Thomas J. Healy, chairman of the affair, will be assisted by a large committee. The proceeds will go toward the maintenance of St. Joseph's Home for the Friendless at 739 East 35th street.

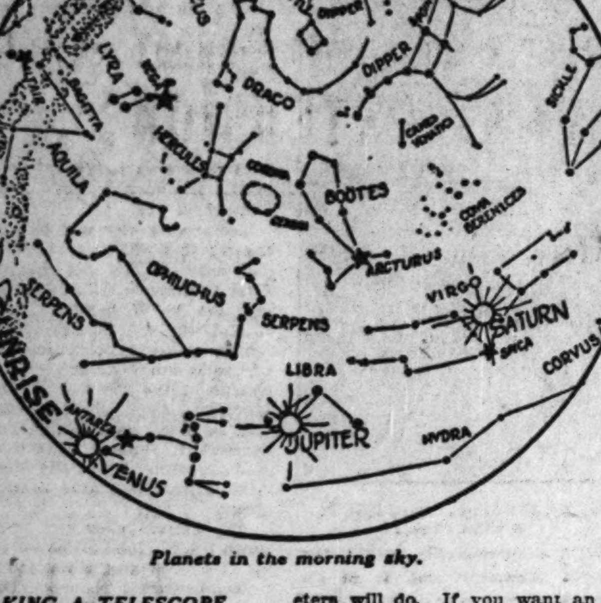
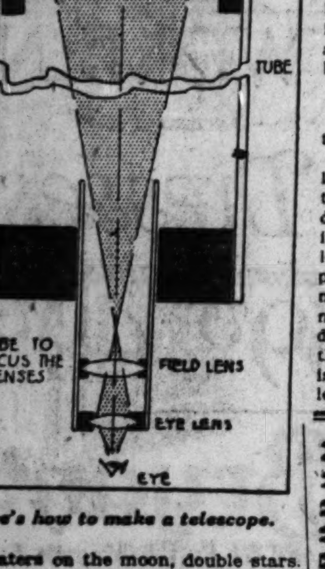
Telescopes



Planets in the morning sky.

MAKING A TELESCOPE.

HAVE you made your telescope yet? At least twice a year this department publishes directions showing how any amateur, with ordinary tools and common sense, can build a telescope that will reveal Saturn's rings, the moons of Jupiter, the craters on the moon, double stars and many other celestial objects.



Here's how to make a telescope.

Go to some reputable optician, and say, "I want a concavo-convex lens of 60 inches focus, spherically ground, and at least one inch in diameter. He will give you an uncut spectacle lens.

Then buy a little hand magnifier. One that enlarges objects four or five diameters will do. If you want an extra serviceable telescope, buy two magnifying lenses, the stronger somewhat smaller than the larger.

The large, thin spectacle lens is to be the object lens of the telescope. It magnifies but little. It is not meant to enlarge; its function is to be a light gatherer.

Mount the lens in the front end of a length of pipe. Rain pipe or stove pipe will do. Be sure that the lens sits squarely in the tube and that the tube is straight. Hold it in place with rings of paper; or, better, roll a cap out of paper and shellac and mount it in that.

Cut off the long tube about six inches shorter than the focal length of your lens. You can tell what this distance is by turning the lens against the sun and seeing how far away the clean bright spot falls.

Now fix a smaller focusing tube so that it will slide inside the long tube.

Suppose you are to make a three lens telescope. Set the larger of the two higher powered lenses part way down the focusing tube and fasten it in with paper rings. Push the smaller lens toward it until dust particles appear in silhouette upon the former's nearer face. You are near adjustment now. Push it in a little more, until the dust blurs out of sight. Then fasten the little lens here. The middle lens is called the field lens, while the small lens is known as the eye lens.

HEAR THE LARK!

THE prairie is plashy from melted snows and half drained puddles. Do not walk across it or you will sink ankle deep in the cold, oozy mud.

Listen! Did you hear that flutelike note? It is a meadow lark, one of the first birds of spring. See, there he is, sitting on a tussock of brown grass amid the water.

Larks come back long before the frost is out of the air. The swampy prairies and icy mucks are their protection.

How He Knows.

Henry arrived at breakfast in a cross frame of mind. He informed his wife that Tommy had taken some change from his pocket.

"It isn't fair to accuse Tommy," his wife remonstrated. Henry, you might as well say I took it."

"No, dear," the brute answered, "it wasn't all taken, you know." M. H.

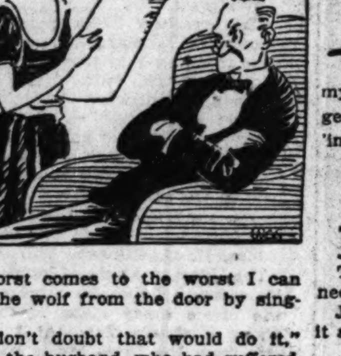
Perish the Thought.

"Well," said the cheerful wife who thought she had a soprano voice, "if the worst comes to the worst I can keep the wolf from the door by singing."



"I don't doubt that would do it," replied the husband, who had suffered much, "but suppose the wolf should happen to be deaf?" M. Q.

Confusion of Tongues.

Sunday school teacher: What was the Tower of Babel?

Tommie: Wasn't that the place where Solomon kept his 500 wives? M. H.

Cross Purposes.

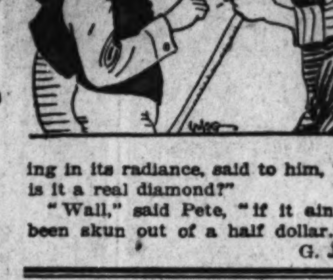
Let's Hope Not.

Pete, sweeper at a factory, returned from the city with a ring containing a supposed diamond of unusual size, of which e was exceedingly proud.

His employer, after weeks of basking in its radiance, said to him, "Pete, is it a real diamond?"



"Wall," said Pete, "if it ain't I've been skun out of a half dollar." G. J. R.

Men Who Know—or Will Learn Automotive Electricity

One of the world's largest carburetor manufacturers, located in Chicago, has changed his sales policy and is selling and servicing his carburetors through his own service stations. He has 1,500 such service stations now established; 1,000 more will be opened as quickly as possible.
He has requested the American Bureau of Engineering through its subsidiary, the Ambu Engineering Institute, to secure for him the necessary men. The only requirements are that these men must be trained in automotive electricity. He will then give them training at his factory on his carburetors.

This offers a wonderful opportunity for ambitious men to enter the big pay field of automotive electricity. Trained men are earning more in this big, uncrowded field than in any other trade. There are plenty of mechanics who can grind valves and make mechanical repairs, but trained electrical experts who can repair ignition, batteries, starter and electrical equipment are rare. Yet statistics show that 78 per cent of all automobile repairs are electrical. The average mechanic will spend hours finding a simple trouble. The trained automotive electrician will trace and repair it in a few minutes.

Unusual Opportunity Insuring Big Money, Steady Work

To those men who can qualify by putting in eight weeks at the Ambu Engineering Institute in intensive training, this is an unusual opportunity. Ambu graduates are being paid high salaries, and are recognized as expert automotive electricians all over the world. Classes are limited to twenty men. The next class starts February 26th. Success will reward those who act promptly. Full details will be given, if you will call, phone or write.

during the war while serving on the staff of Admiral Moffett, then commanding at the Great Lakes Naval Training station. Kenneth Goodman was always much interested in the drama, and wrote some clever short plays. A memorial of this kind is peculiarly appropriate. It's not likely. Most of us are content with feeling of our "strong right arm"—yet the arm hasn't half the burden of the foot.

Develop your foot muscles to a point where they will be able to carry the body weight without strain and foot fatigue. The Cantilever Shoe has a flexible shank that gives easy, sure support to the arch at every point—yet gives the arch muscles unhampered freedom of action. In a short time the foot develops a remarkable strength and vigor.

Cantilever oxfords are comfortable. The lines of the shoe are well proportioned and balanced. Widths from AAAA to D.

OTHER GIRLS HAD DOZENS OF FELLOWS—I WAS A WALL FLOWER

My Cheeks Were Pale and Sallow, My Neck Scrawny, My Lips Colorless: Today I am as Popular as Any of the Other Girls Because I Have Learned the Secret of Radiant Health and Beauty and Have a Well-Rounded Face and Figure.

Try making this slight change in YOUR MEALS for two weeks and watch for the astonishing results it so often gives.

For years I was so unattractive that I almost cried when I looked at myself in the mirror. Oh, how I envied other girls, whose dance cards were always filled and who were always popular and sought after by boys, who would not look at me twice. Just two weeks ago I read an article in the paper which told of a slight change in the daily diet which often changed women who had been thin, pale and unattractive, in some cases even for years, so that they got back that magnetic charm of radiant health. This article stated that the most important element in building a strong, beautiful body full of grace and magnetism with sparkling eyes and rosy cheeks was a peculiar form of iron found in the husks of grain and the peels and skins of certain fruits and vegetables. But modern methods of cooking throw these important things away so that probably 19 people out of 20 lack 100% in their blood. I tried mixing a little of iron, this peculiar form of iron, with my meals for two weeks. I feel and look years younger, with natural color in my lips and cheeks.

The above is a typical hypothetical case. It would seem that every woman whose attractiveness is impaired by lack of that magnetic charm that comes only with radiant health, would try adding a little of this newer form of iron to her daily food. It is comparatively inexpensive and may be obtained from your druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron, which should be mixed with your food as directed on each package. Amazing results are often secured in only two weeks' time. For sale by all druggists including

Russian Opera Promises a Month of Entertainment

Avram Ardatoff: Ah-vrahm Ahr-dah-tuff (second in each).

Nicolai Busanovsky: Nee-ko-lah-ee Boo-sah-nuff-skee (third in each).

Ina Daen: Ee-nah Dah-yen (accent first of first, second of second).

Vaidimir Daniloff: Vlah-dee-meer Dah-nee-luff (second in each).

Ivan Dneproff: Ee-vahn Nyeh-pruff (first of first, second of second).

Michail Fiveisky: Mee-kah-eel Fee-vay-ee-skee (second in each).

Eugene Fuerst: Pronounced as in German.

Gabriel Hrjanowsky: Gabriel Chah-nuff-skee (second syllable).

To be continued as desired. It is perhaps put more succinctly in that joyous and disrespectful book, "Perfect Behavior," by Donald Ogden Stuart, where you are assured that all you need to establish a reputation among those who go to music is a knowledge of the facts that in Russian the letter "w" is pronounced like "v," and that Rachmaninoff has a daughter in Vassar. With these facts memorized and expertly used the author assures you that you will be a success, even though you are so unversed in music as to believe that the celeste has something to do with "Aida" and that a minor triad is a young wood nymph.

Some Pleasant Prospects.

Miss Bourskaya will be heard several times during the first week, among others as the countess in "Pique Dame," in which she did a memorable bit of acting last year, and in the name part of "Carmen," in which she was a striking success with this company and at Ravinia, also in a single performance with the Chicago Civic company. Mr. Chaliapin is billed for three appearances in the title rôle of "Boris Godunoff." His first, on Tuesday night, will be for the benefit of the Association house. He will repeat the performance on Thursday night and Saturday afternoon.

The company further announces a ballet organization headed by Tina Valen, describing her as an 18 year old premiere danseuse and ballet director. She is said to have entered the Imperial Ballet school of Moscow at the age of 6 and to have been trained there for seven years. Other items refer to the excellent bass section in the chorus and the fact that the stage direction is carried on largely with the aid of a big Chinese gong suspended from a rope. This, they say, helps discipline.

With the Melody Makers.

The Winnipeg Male Voice choir is to return to Chicago. It will appear at Orchestra hall on Wednesday, under the direction of Hugh C. M. Ross, F. R. C. O. Word from Winnipeg is to the effect that it regards the organization as Chicago does the Civic opera, and that the expenses of its second tour are underwritten by public-spirited citizens who wish to proclaim to the world that Winnipeg can produce something besides No. 1 hard wheat and cattle.

If the chorus is as it was last year, the argument will be conclusive. It is an amateur organization, being recruited from the business men of the city, with Mr. Ross as the only professional musician, but it makes music in a way to excite the envy of those who do nothing but sing. Alberto Salvi, the harpist, will appear as soloist.

For at least two good reasons Florence Macbeth's song recital will be worth attending at the Studebaker this afternoon. The first is that it is for the benefit of a vocal scholarship fund to be given by Sigma Alpha Iota, a national musical sorority. The other is that it is by Miss Macbeth. She is an American singer who has distinctly made good, both with the audiences of the Chicago opera and in concert.

Mr. Stock and this week's soloist, the pianist, Wilhelm Bachaus, are determined, it would seem, to lead the Chicago Symphony orchestra over a wide field of old and new music. Mr. Bachaus will play twice, in Beethoven's Fourth Concerto and in the Pick-Mangiagalli Symphonic poem, "Sortilegi." The purely orchestral part of the program will include the overture to Mozart's "The Impresario," Reger's "A Romantic Suite," and two novelties by Santoliquido, "Twilight on the Sea" and "Perfumes of the Sahara Desert." The last named are apparently quite in line with some of the most earnest precepts of modernism. To see music in one and smell it in the other is part of the same movement, one infers, as to hear sculpture and taste pictures.

Coming Civic Music association concerts are thus announced: This afternoon, combined children's choruses of Palmer park and Scanlan school, directed by Gretchen Ernst Zschorna, assisted by Elsa Holinger, soprano, at Palmer park; also Florence Stephenson, soprano; Emilinda M. Sievers, contralto, and Sylvia Bargman, pianist, at Hamilton park. Tuesday evening, Hamilton park children's chorus, directed by Grace Medary Norbeck, at Ogden park.

An item regarding the Zoellner quartet in this column last Sunday was based upon information that at the time was regarded as accurate, but now appears to have been premature. Information from the management of the quartet is that it will continue touring at least during the present season. The Los Angeles school of music referred to in connection with them is apparently a matter of the future.

German Opera Making Good, Reports Say

Reports from differing angles on the newly arrived German opera company are beginning to penetrate the middle west. In general they are favorable. They are said to have done a business of $40,000 with five performances in Baltimore, all of which has its fascinations for the managerial ear, and they are reported to be a rather good singing organization, which is of more interest to those who buy tickets.

They had a bit of hard sledding before they could get started. A union ruling prevented them from bringing their own orchestra, and the one assembled in this country does not appear to have been ideal. A heavy bond was signed before the scenery and costumes were released by the customs authorities and various other expenses developed. They finally managed to get started in Baltimore, went from there to Philadelphia, and are now in New York at the Manhattan Opera house.

After the opening night in New York W. J. Henderson wrote thus in the Herald:

"The performance of 'Die Meistersinger,' while wanting any features of striking distinction, was decidedly creditable, and fairly won the applause of an audience unquestionably of friendly disposition. The scenery was unsuited to the theater and cramped the action, but the costuming was excellent, the stage management generally good, and the spirit of the representation one of fervor and of respect for the intentions of the composer. The conductor, Leo Blech, was admirable, albeit he was handicapped by an orchestra of union mechanics forced upon him in lieu of the orchestra which he would have brought over. The chorus was small but well drilled."

He has words of praise for Friedrich Plaschke as Hans Sachs, Robert Hutt as Walther, and Alexander Kipnis as Pogner. Paul Schwartz as David and Desider Zador as Beckmesser are declared mediocre, while Meta Seinemeyer as Eva is adjudged unequal to the score besides being dull, heavy and unengaging, and Jessyka Koettrik as Magdalena is lugubrious. He concludes:

"The cohesion of the representation was most commendable. There certainly was an ensemble and if the lyric powers of the company had been more widely distributed the magic of Wagner's music might have exerted its true spell, for the whole presentation was occupied with good intentions."

Whether or not the company will come to Chicago before returning to Germany still classifies among the indefinite futurities.

Two series of organ recitals will begin this week. The first will be at the First Presbyterian church. William E. Zeuch, who used to live in Chicago but is now the organist of South Congregational church, Boston, will play on Wednesday night, to be followed on March 10 by Marcel Dupré, organist of the Cathedral of Notre Dame, Paris, and on April 10 by Francis S. Moore of this city.

The second series, five in number, will take place at Kimball hall. Pietro Yon of New York will play Tuesday night, the following events being thus scheduled: Eric DeLamarter, March 20; John Doane, April 3; Hugh Porter, April 17; and Wilhelm Middelschulte, April 24.

HUGH C. M. ROSS.
Hugh C. M. Ross, former British artillery officer, is now conductor of the Winnipeg male voice choir, an organization of sixty singing business men from the Canadian city, which will give its second annual concert here Wednesday evening at Orchestra hall.

Boncilla

BEAUTIFIER

The Clasmic Pack
Is the Original, Genuine Clasmic Facial Pack

Here's a remarkable clasmic clay which offers you a complexion beauty that is really deeper than skin deep—and in an amazingly short time.

You don't have to wait weeks and months to see the results—they are delightfully apparent after the very first treatment.

Boncilla Beautifier demands no long, tedious facial massage. You simply spread it on your face, allow it to dry, and then remove it with a wet towel. The first application results in a glowing, youthful complexion beauty that is natural, lasting, real.

What Is This Clasmic Clay?

Boncilla Beautifier is a blue-gray clasmic clay of remarkable smoothness.

It contains certain medicinal qualities that act upon the skin just as famous mineral baths act upon the body—cleansing it thoroughly, drawing out impurities, stimulating the circulation, and revitalizing the nerve tissues.

How to Use Boncilla

You simply spread this fragrant clasmic pack on the face with your finger tips. It requires no tedious rubbing or massaging—the method of application is as inviting as the results are delightful.

Only Boncilla Will Accomplish These Results

Since Boncilla was first produced, many years ago, numerous other so-called clay packs have come on the market. We have personally tested them and find them to be very inferior imitations of Boncilla. So don't be discouraged if you have tried any imitation without results.

Boncilla, the original, genuine, clasmic face pack, is guaranteed to accomplish real deeper-than-skin-deep complexion beauty.

What Will Boncilla Do for You?

You can see, feel, know the splendid results of a Boncilla Beautifier Face Pack after the very first treatment. Boncilla is guaranteed to do these six definite things for the face or your money will be refunded:

1. Clears the complexion and gives it color.
2. Cleanses and closes enlarged pores, removing excess oiliness.
3. Removes blackheads and pimples.
4. Lifts out the lines.
5. Rebuilds drooping facial tissues.
6. Makes the skin soft and velvety.

It is while Boncilla is drying that the wonderful rejuvenating work is taking place. The action of this remarkable clay is going deep into the pores of the skin—cleansing them of every impurity, stimulating sluggish blood cells, building up sagging facial muscles.

Make This Inexpensive Test

The Boncilla Pack O' Beauty offers a splendid means to find out, at small cost, just what Boncilla can do for you—it costs only 50c, and contains enough Boncilla Beautifier, Boncilla Cold Cream, Boncilla Vanishing Cream, and Boncilla Face Powder for three to four complete facial packs. You can get the Pack O' Beauty at any department store or drug store; or, if your dealer cannot supply you immediately, mail the coupon below with 50c and we will mail it to you direct, postpaid.

WHAT MAKES A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN?

Eltastanna.

By Selby Maxwell.

ELTASTANNA IS MODERATE.

OCCASIONALLY in this modern, hurrying, speed crazed existence of ours we chance upon some remnant of an older culture, some living descendant of an order that is no more.

Such a person is Eltastanna. Her mind is a breath of the age of polished stone, of neolithic times, of the cities of the Swiss lakes, of Robenhausen, Geneva, and La Tenne. Her face recalls that of the lady of Hissarlik or, as we would call the town, ancient Troy, who, when her home was being burned by the Greeks, preferred to die by the flames rather than to accept dishonor from Homer's heroes.

Eltastanna is Alpine. She is of that widespread race of people who inhabit the uplands of the old world from France to China. Her face has a Tartar cast. Or, perhaps, it is old Belgian Or again it is ancient Swiss. See her black, snapping eyes. There is no mottling in these irises, no changing lights but only clear, steady brown. Her forehead and temples are full and broad. This is as they should be.

Notice the expression in her eyes They are wistful eyes that have known suffering and will know much more. Alpine people are born to suffer. Eltastanna will always be where there is patient enduring to be done, and she will do it.

Yet there is determination in her face. She is not a person to be pushed. She cannot be driven. Never make the mistake of attempting to coerce her.

You can override her will by main strength, you can prevent her from expressing herself, you can hurt her into silence without much effort, but you cannot change her mind in so doing. Her Alpine blood is stubborn, her people have never yielded anything but life in the face of the tyranny, adversity, oppression, and squeezed existences that have been imposed on them by blondes during the last 10,000 years. Her people are still here.

Madison Grant, Henry Fairfield Osborn, Lothrop Stoddard, and other Nordic thinkers have written books, and popular ones, too, denouncing Eltastanna's race and all its works. The Nordic mind does not grasp the Alpine mind, and with its characteristic imperious will it would destroy what it cannot dominate.

But who would wish to wipe beautiful Eltastanna from the earth? There is something wrong, some fallacy in the preaching of those who insist that all beauty is Nordic, all good is Nordic, and that the world should be all Nordic. Eltastanna belies it and with her soft voice contradicts them.

Her people cannot be dominated any more. They are subjugated now in every possible way beneath Nordic rule. In life, business, and pleasure they totally have forgotten their origin. They no longer speak their wild Asiatic tongues; even their racial names they have forgotten. They have nothing left but themselves. Yet they live. There must be something else in Alpine nature to make them strong or else they would not be here. Eltastanna reveals what it is. She loves music. She loves life. She is faithful. She is moderate.

She is almost everything that the Nordic chauvinists decry. If they only knew it, they need her influence to hold them in the track of common sense, to keep them level headed enough to use their good brains for useful purposes, and not be like the proverbial calf with too much rope.

CHARACTER IN PROFILES.

CAN you read profiles? What do long noses indicate? Or bulging brows? Or receding chins?

There are four types of profile—the vertical, the concave, the convex, and the "S" shaped. Each one has a definite meaning. You can be as sure of the reactions of such a person as if he were placarded with a sandwich board, front and back.

A convex profile proclaims a rapid thinker. It never fails. It also invariably denotes an ectrospective egocentric person. You can be as sure of it as you are that you are alive.

A concave face denotes a slow, labored, plodding type of mind. The dished-in face is philosophical, calm, collected, but once it makes up its mind it is usually right. This man's fault lies in being too conservative. He thinks too late.

The plane type of profile is moderate. This form denotes a good judge of human conduct and a fair one of things. The vertical profile is apt to go far in any pursuit because it has the happy faculty of keeping in the middle of the road.

The "S" shaped profile is the best for all around usage. Most handsome men possess it. A sharp nose usually accompanies this face. Such a profile denotes quick, decisive, correct thoughts and actions. But look out for an "S" turned backward. The reversed "S" is the weakest face of all. It is concave above, where convexity and reflective thought are most needed and convex below, denoting rapid action. This is the type that acts before he thinks, which is fatal to most pursuits of life.

BISCUITS AND BULLETS.

AN army fights on its belly. Biscuits are as important as bullets. The soldiers who have the most to eat always win, other things being equal. It follows, then, that one of the quickest ways to destroy the fighting power of an otherwise unbeatable enemy is to starve him.

Caesar once captured two entire armies by shutting off their food supply. Burgoyne's army, in our own Revolutionary war, was forced to capitulate for the same reason.

Burgoyne had all the military advantage on his side. His men were trained, while the Americans were raw; he had equipment while we had almost none. But as he advanced deeper into hostile American territory he found out a fact that he had not taken into account—that live upon the country he could not. He went on as far as he could, then suddenly found himself cut off and surrounded by the Americans. His food gave out, and there was nothing left to do but give up.

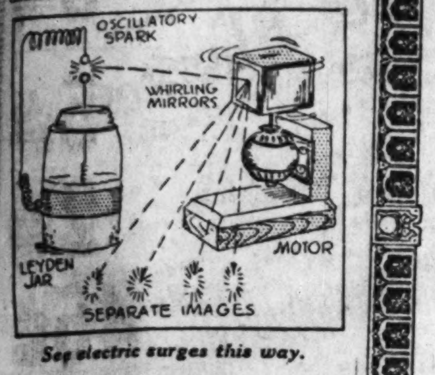
ELECTRICITY

ELECTRICITY AND MATTER.

ELECTRICITY is now believed to be made of matter. It is also a form of energy. Scientists say, however, that matter and energy are two aspects of the same thing. The proof they show to clinch their arguments is that electricity has inertia. It tends to move after a motive force has been withdrawn, exactly as matter does.

A pendulum and a condenser are said to be strictly parallel in action. Hang up a ball of lead by means of a fine black thread. Tie it in a drawn position with a white thread. Let it hang for an hour or more, until all vibrations have ceased in it. Then cautiously approach, and with a lighted match burn the white thread in two. Instantly the ball swings violently forward, goes up the opposite phase, passes, stops, turns, and comes swinging back.



See electric surges this way.

When the bob was held by the white thread it was in an unstable position in respect to gravity, and was therefore subject to a steady pull. This pull will always in the end carry the lead to the exact center of its swing, so that as it hangs, the black thread will point to the center of the earth.

But the lead possesses inertia. Once it has motion imparted to it, it resists giving it up again. It swings for a long time after the original force was applied because of this inertia.

Electricity acts the same way. Put a negative charge, made by rubbing a rubber comb against wool cloth, on one side of a leyden jar. When you have sufficient electricty on the jar bring the two wires together. A spark of fire snaps. This is an oscillating discharge.

To see the surging nature of an electric spark, you will need to mount a mirror, or perhaps several of them, upon the rotating shaft of an electric motor. Set this motor going full speed and watch the reflection of the spark. The whirling mirrors separate the images of the sparks, so that they do not all fall one on top of the other, and you see what looks like a string of bright beads.

When a path is presented to the negative electricity, it rushes en masse over to the positive side of the jar. But it possesses inertia, and drags with it some of the normal electricity in the plate. Thus a high positive charge is built up on the other plate. Then the phase turns, it rushes headlong back to the negative side, and then repeats the performance. The charge surges back and forth like a wave of water in a trough, and behaves so much like a piece of material that electricians say that it is indeed matter.

The Spanish Beggar's Priceless Gift

by Winnifred Ralston

FROM the day we started to school, Charity Winthrop and I were called the touseled-hair twins. Tom Harvey nicknamed us that—horrid, red-headed Tom Harvey who used to put burrs in our pigtails and angle worms in our inkwells.

Our mothers despaired of us. Our hair simply wouldn't behave. There were Martha Brown, Helen Stahl, Betty Davis and Leah Cohen—all with wonderful curly hair. But Charity and I could never coax ours out of a straight line.

As we grew older the hated name still clung to us. It followed us through the grades and into boarding school. Then Charity's family moved to Spain, where her father was in diplomatic service, and I didn't see her again for five years—not until last New Year's eve.

A party of us had gone to the Drake Hotel for dinner that night. As usual I was terribly embarrassed and ashamed of my hair. When the bobbing vogue first came in I had my hair cut, hoping against hope that would improve its looks. Realizing my mistake, I permitted it to grow again and by New Year's eve it was just long enough to be unmanageable.

Horribly self-conscious I was sitting at the table, scarcely touching my food, wishing I were home. It seemed that everyone had wonderful, lustrous, curly hair but me and I felt they were all laughing or worse, pitying me behind my back.

My eyes strayed to the dance floor and there I saw a beautiful girl dancing with Tom Harvey. Her eye caught mine and to my surprise she smiled and started toward me.

While there was something strangely familiar about her face I didn't recognize her—then. No—it—it couldn't be.

About this girl's face was a halo of golden curls. I think she had the most beautiful hair I ever saw. My face must have turned scarlet as I compared it mentally with my own straggly, ugly mop. I had never been so thoroughly ashamed of my hair before.

Of course you have guessed her identity—for it was really she—Charity Winthrop who once had dull straight hair like mine.

It had been five long years since I had seen her. There was everything to talk about, but I simply couldn't wait. I blurted out—"Charity Winthrop—tell me—what miracle has happened to your hair?"

She smiled and said mysteriously, "Come to my room and I will tell you the whole story." She was stopping at the hotel. We excused ourselves and rushed to Charity's room. I listened breathless while she told me this strange story:

Charity tells of the beggar's gift

"Our house in Madrid faced a little, old plaza where I often strolled after my siesta.

Miguel, the beggar, always occupied the end bench of the south end of the plaza. There he sat all day long, asking alms from the passersby. I always dropped a few centavos in his hat when I passed and he soon grew to know me.

The day before I was leaving Madrid I stopped to bid him goodby and pressed a gold coin in his palm. That was the best investment I ever made."

"Hija mia," he said, "You have been very kind to an old man. Digamelo (tell me) senorita, what it is your heart most desires."

"I laughed at the idea, then said jokingly, Miguel, my hair is straight and dull. I would have it lustrous and curly."

"Oigame, senorita," he said—"what you wish is even simpler than I thought. Many years ago—a Castilian prince was wedded to a Moorish beauty. Her hair was black as a raven's wing and straight as an arrow. Like you, this lady wanted los pelos rizos (curly hair). Her husband offered thousands of pesos to the man who would fulfil her wish. The prize fell to Pedro, the droguero. Out of roots and herbs he brewed a potion that converted the princess' straight unruly hair into a glorious mass of ringlet curls.

A Matchless Marcelle

Lovely Curls

"Pedro, son of the son of Pedro, has that secret today. Years ago I did him a great service. Here you will find him, go to him and tell your wish. Adios, senorita, vaya con Dios."

"You can't imagine, Winnifred, how funny it made me feel. I did not take it seriously, of course. I never expected to look up this mysterious Pedro, but some whim changed my mind and I called a coche and gave the driver the address Miguel had given me.

"At the door of the apothecary shop, Pedro, a funny old hawk-nosed Spaniard, met me. Nervously I stammered out my explanation. When I had finished, he bowed and vanished into the rear of his store. Presently he returned with a bottle which he handed to me.

"By this time I was terribly excited—could hardly wait until I reached home. When I was finally in my room alone, I took down my hair and applied the liquid as directed. In twenty minutes, not one second more, the transformation, which you have noted, had taken place.

"Come, Winnifred—apply it to your own hair and see what it can do for you."

Breathlessly I watched Charity take a bottle from her wardrobe trunk. Tremblingly my fingers undid my hair and applied the liquid.

Twenty minutes later as I looked into Charity's mirror I could hardly believe my eyes. The impossible had happened. My dull, straight hair had wound itself into curling tendrils. My head was a mass of ringlets and waves. It shone with a lustre it never had before.

You can imagine the amazement of the others in the party when I returned to the ballroom. Everybody noticed the change. Never did I have such a glorious night. I was popular. Men clustered about me. I had never been so happy.

The next morning when I awoke, I hardly dared look in my mirror fearing it had all been a dream. But it was true—gloriously true. My hair was curly and beautiful.

Then the thought came to me I had no right to keep this great secret to myself. There were thousands of women just like me who would give anything to know my precious secret.

So I asked Charity's permission to take a sample of the Spanish liquid to my cousin who is a chemist at the Century Laboratories. For days he worked, analyzing the liquid. Finally he solved the problem, isolated the two Spanish herbs, the important ingredients.

They experimented on fifty women and the results were simply astounding. Now he told me, the Century Chemists were prepared to supply the wonderful Spanish Curling Liquid to women everywhere.

Take advantage of their generous trial offer—

I told my cousin I did not want one penny for the information I had given him. I was only too glad to know the formula was to be so easily available. I did make one stipulation, however. I insisted that he introduce the discovery by selling it for a limited time at actual laboratory cost plus postage so that as many women as possible could take advantage of it. This he agreed to do.

That is the opportunity you have now. Please believe me, who was once called tousel-head—no matter how straight, dull and unmanageable your hair is, this Spanish Liquid Curler will work magic for you.

No need to undergo the torture and expense of the so-called permanent wave, which might even destroy your hair. You can have natural curly hair in twenty minutes. One application will keep your hair beautiful for a week or more.

Don't delay another day. For the Century Chemists guarantee satisfaction or refund your money. I know from actual experience that you will be more than pleased.

Every Hollywood Home Has Room for the Movies

By Mildred Spain.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.] — Monday — Club Royale for the stars and the weekly meeting of "Our Club" for the starlets.

Tuesday — Formal moving picture night at Coconnut grove, Ambassador hotel.

Wednesday—Sunset inn at the beach.

Thursday—The Café Montmartre, Hollywood's smartest rendezvous, or the weekly dance at the Hollywood hotel.

Friday—The prize fights at the Hollywood Legion stadium.

This leaves the week ends for gay outings to Big Bear for winter sports, or Tia Juana and the races.

Thus does filmdom's social calendar round itself out with few curvettings or tangents. Tucked in between motor trips and the usual round robin of dances there are—you've guessed it—movies! Nearly every home in the Beverly or Hollywood hills has one room where private showings of films are run off for the guests or, perhaps, just for the family.

At the home of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks moving pictures are shown almost every night after dinner. It is said travel films find most favor there. Perhaps this has something to do with the ship they are to charter for a trip around the world with fifty guests.

Bachelors Are Few.

Pola Negri and Charley Chaplin were the dinner guests of Ouida Bergere and her husband, George Fitzmaurice, Thursday night. "Bella Donna," Miss Negri's first American film, was shown for the guests in the theater room.

The engagement thermometer in Hollywood is way up near the top. There are so few bachelors left that they are held to be specimens of the neoflapper era. The engagement of Miss Jacqueline Logan and Jack Nolan of Colorado Springs has been announced. Miss Logan and Mr. Nolan were childhood sweethearts and later were graduated from the University of Colorado.

Miss Virginia Fox entertained "Our Club" at her home on Monday evening. Those present were Miss Helen Ferguson, Miss Laura La Plante, Miss Edna Murphy, Miss Mildred Davis, Miss Gloria Hope, Miss Lois Wilson, Miss May MacAvoy, Miss Patsy Ruth Miller, and Miss Vola Vale.

Mr. and Mrs. Nigel Barrie have left for a two months' tour of Egypt.

Lake Temiskaming, 300 miles northwest of Montreal, has had Miss Alice Brady for its guest.

The fad of carrying a big bouquet of California poppies, or roses, to the studio each morning has been started by Miss June Mathis of Goldwyn.

Mrs. A. La Badie, mother of the late Florence La Badie, has arrived in Hollywood with her niece, Miss Mary La Badie. Miss La Badie is well known on the English stage.

Tuesday evening James Cruze gave a dinner party for members of the cast of "The Covered Wagon." Miss Lois Wilson was the guest of honor.

Tuesday Night Popular.

The Tuesday night dance at Cocoanut Grove in the Ambassador hotel rarely fails to bring all of filmdom to dine, dance, and watch the dancing contests. Last Tuesday Miss Elaine Hammerstein was the guest of honor. She wore orchid chiffon and a corsage of orchids. Later she officiated as judge for the dancing contest. Lottie and Jack Pickford nearly won the silver cup, but it was awarded to a young naval officer and his wife, after much clapping and hand waving for both couples.

At other tables were Miss Edna Purviance and Ford Sterling, Miss Purviance radiant in white beaded satin and a bandeau of pale green; Miss Constance Talmadge in gray lace and a snug turban of silver cloth; Miss Teddy Sampson, with the Pickfords, in brilliant green for her piquant self.

Miss Estelle Taylor wore a hoopskirt gown that is the last word in smartness; Miss Ruth Roland a lace gown trimmed with blue ostrich feathers. Miss Miriam Cooper wore a low cut dinner dress of white satin and crystal beads; Miss Kathlyn Williams a peacock blue, and a wide bandeau of the same material; Miss Shirley Mason a debutante affair of tomato crepe, her bobbed hair unconfined. Miss Dupont was queenly in heavy white satin studded with rhinestones, a bandeau of diamonds her only jewels.

Saturday night a gorgeous dinner-dance was given by Mr. and Mrs. George Fitzmaurice. Early spring flowers were everywhere. Mrs. Fitzmaurice was charming in black georgette trimmed in heavy bands of black fox fur. Miss Betty Compson wore a quaint silver gown trimmed with a wide fichu of silver lace. Miss Pola Negri was her most effective self in pale yellow, a diamond necklace, and a wreath of gold leaves around her tightly banded hair. Black georgette embroidered in silver was worn by Miss Constance Talmadge. Mrs. Frank Mayo chose for the evening a rose and gold brocade gown that brought in the wearing of a black Spanish shawl.

Other guests were Miss Claire Windsor, Charley Chaplin, Miss Mary Miles Minter, Louis Sherwin, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Menjou, Rod La Roque, Miss Eleanor Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Neilan, Miss Mae Murray, Robert Leonard, Miss Lois Wilson, J. Warren Kerrigan, Jack Pickford, Miss Marjorie Daw, Miss Barbara La Marr, Eddie Sutherland, Miss May McAvoy, Mr. and Mrs. Conway Tearle, Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Lytell, Walter Morosco, Miss Bessie Love, and Sam Wood.

Miss Irene Castle is expected to arrive in Hollywood next Wednesday.

Ice skating, not surf swimming, is to be the pastime of Hollywood next week. Miss Dorothy Phillips and her husband, Allen Holubar, have built a huge rink at Culver City and all the film people have been invited.

Fer 'Em or Agin' 'Em? What Say You of the Movies?

Taken as a whole, do you think the movies aid or retard civilization? Do they make humans more human, or do they make monkeys of us? Answer! Answer!

Dear Mae Tinée. Having invited your humble followers to air their opinions of motion pictures, you have given me a chance to butt in again, and here I am. First of all, I consider the motion picture the modern wonder of the world, for it has enabled me "to take the wings of the morning and fly to the uttermost parts of the earth"; to view countries, cities, and towns, to see things in the air, on the land, and under the sea that I could never have seen but for this wonderful agency; it has enabled me to meet lovely women, talented men, children, dogs, cats, and seals that I never have seen.

But, like all powerful agencies, it can be made an instrument of tremendous harm as well as tremendous good. However, I doubt if there are many producers of such low down, mean, and sordid natures as to be deliberately, with malice aforethought, using the moving picture to debauch the morals of humanity. If there are any such they can be landed on by the public and driven out of business. I fail to see the terrible havoc being wrought on the morals of our community by the awful motion picture. From reading history I conclude that humanity is about as good today as it ever was. So, take it all in all, it appears to me that day by day in every way the photoplay is moving grandly onward and upward.

One function of the photoplay is of such importance as to render it paramount to anything that has heretofore appeared on the earth. I mean its power to preserve in immortal film the histrionic art of the stars of the mimic world, and my greatest regret is that it failed to appear hundreds of years ago, for the work of many great actors perished with their passing and is only a tradition.

What would I not give to see again that eminent actor Edwin Booth in "Hamlet" as he appeared years ago! It would be worth going miles to live through once more that one tense and thrilling scene when the Prince of Denmark, beholding his father's spirit for the first time, dropped to his knees and gasped in awestruck tones: "Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damned! Bring with you airs from heaven or blasts from hell!"

How would you like to go today and see on the screen David Garrick, Mrs. Scott Siddons, Edwin Forest, Mary Anderson, Junius Brutus Booth, Edwin Booth, or Joseph Jefferson, et al.? Wouldn't that be scrumptious? I'll say it would. Au revoir. D. M. S.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Disciples' Clergy to Hold Session Here Tomorrow

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Disciples of Christ of Chicago and vicinity will observe tomorrow as a special day. Beginning at 10:30 the Disciples' ministers will meet at the Great Northern hotel for the consideration of the subject, "The Message of Today." Lunch will follow and in the afternoon the discussion will be concerning evangelism. The morning speakers will be the Rev. Edward Scribner Ames and the Rev. D. A. Wickizer. The afternoon speakers will be the Rev. A. H. Gage, the Rev. Jesse Bader and others.

In the evening a social union dinner will be given at the Hotel La Salle. The principal speaker and guest will be the Rev. Edgar DeWitte Jones of Detroit, whose subject will be "The Vision of Washington and the Learning of Lincoln." Other speakers will be the Rev. Emory Ross of the Congo, Africa; Dr. J. C. Ogden, associated for fifteen years in Tibet with Dr. Shelton, who was killed by bandits, and the Rev. Jesse Bader.

One of the large national projects of the Disciples of Christ is the raising of a fund of $100,000 as a memorial to Dr. Shelton for the education of missionaries who will carry the gospel into Tibet and complete the work begun by Dr. Shelton. In many congregations the Shelton memorial fund will be presented today.

Several bishops and leading pastors of the Catholic church joined in paying tribute last week to Mother Mary Xavier Flanagan, in charge of the convent of Mercy and Mercy home, 29th street and South Wabash avenue, in recognition of the fiftieth anniversary of her entrance into the sisterhood of the church. She was mother superior for several terms, mistress of novices for a length of time, and for ten years in charge of the St. Xavier's academy. A two days' celebration was held. The alumnæ presented her, among other gifts, with an imported stained glass window for the chapel.

A party for the benefit of St. Joseph's Home for the Friendless, 739 East 35th street, will be held on next Thursday, Washington's birthday, from 2 to 5 p. m. at the Trianon, 62d street and Cottage Grove avenue.

Lenten services are being held in all Catholic churches. At St. Patrick's, Des Plaines and Adams streets, a mission will be held by the Oblate fathers this week for men, next week for women, and the third week for the general public. At St. Mary's church, Paulist, 9th street and South Wabash avenue, there will be a mass and sermon at 11 and evening sermon. On Wednesday evenings the subject will be "Marriage."

The Rev. Clinton C. Cox, pastor of the Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and Marshfield avenue, will speak at 8 p. m. on "The Economic and Moral Aspects of the Childless Home."

The Very Rev. A. V. Baillie, C. V. O., dean of St. George's chapel, Windsor, the chapel royal of the king and queen of England, will preach at 11 o'clock today at St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church, 1414 Dearborn avenue. Tomorrow he will be the guest of the Episcopal clergy round table at 180 North Wabash avenue. Bishop Burleson of South Dakota will also be a guest. Dean Baillie will speak at 7 p. m. at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall.

The Spanish war veterans will attend the People's church, 4650 Sheridan road, today at 11 o'clock. The pastor, the Rev. Bradley, will speak on "A Forgotten Moment in American History." The sinking of the battleship Maine will be commemorated.

THE RT. REV. ARCHIMANDRITE OF SERBIA—FATHER MARDARY.

The Rt. Rev. Archimandrite Father Mardary, administrator of the Serbian Eastern Orthodox diocese in the United States of America and Canada, has taken up his residence in Chicago at 1905 Fowler street and will at once proceed to organize congregations throughout his territory. He hopes, he says, to organize fifty new congregations in addition to those already organized and to establish other branches of work.

There are twenty-six bishops in the church in Serbia, but Bishop Mardary is the only Serbian bishop in this country. He says he wants his people residing here to become true Americans, learn the English language and support American institutions.

Bishop Mardary was formerly in Russia, and because of his outspoken denunciation of the former czar and the monk Rasputin was banished to Siberia. He was restored to the church under Kerensky. Because of the low rate of exchange in his native country, Bishop Mardary appeals to all citizens who want to see the Serbs religiously cared for in America to assist him in his mission.

Extensive advertising is being done in the churches of the Chicago Church federation, by letters, bulletins, and posters, of the meetings which will begin one week from tomorrow in the Olympic theater with S. D. Gordon of "Quiet Talks" fame as speaker. The meetings will continue daily until Easter.

A mission for men and women will be conducted by the Rev. Joseph A. McLaughlin, S. J., and the Rev. William M. Magee, S. J., beginning today and extending over next Sunday, at the Holy Family church, Roosevelt road and May street.

The Rt. Rev. James Wise, Episcopal bishop of Kansas, will speak at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall at 8 o'clock.

Advertising Campaign for HENBER Pencils

We want every one to become acquainted with our pencils, the most useful of all writing appliances. They make suitable gifts for every occasion.

Lady's and Gent's Style

The illustration shows our Gentleman's Sterling Silver style (regular $3.50, now $3 or two for $5, Lady's or Gent's). The $5 gold (Lady's or Gent's) comes in Colonial Hexagon shape. The Henber has many distinctive features: Repelling lead device; safety clasp; chase engraved barrel; non-clogging mechanism, etc.

Follow These Easy Rules 1. Any one living outside of Minneapolis may compete for the free prizes except employees or their relatives of the Henber Company.

2. Whoever sends in the largest number of words which correctly name the objects shown in the picture starting with "C" will be awarded first prize, and so on down the list of 50 free prizes. One point will be allowed for each correct word, and one point deducted for each incorrect word or omission of a correct word.

3. In case of ties for any prize offered the full amount of each prize tied for will be awarded to each tying contestant. The list winning first prize will be published at the close of the contest. Enlarged copy of picture will be furnished on request.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when properly prepared and taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, and after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest quality Willow charcoal powdered to extreme fineness, then compressed in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being sweetened to be smooth and palatable.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continuous use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

Many physicians advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat. They are also believed to greatly benefit the liver. These lozenges cost but thirty cents a box at drug stores, and you get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets.

WANTED—

A very good position in the women's advertising department of a large newspaper is awaiting a substantial young woman, preferably a college graduate, whose major subjects should be of help to her in advertising sales work.

To qualify you should be attractive, possess a pleasing personality, and the ability to convince people with whom you would come in contact of your viewpoint.

If you are interested in such a position and wish to work permanently, write us a letter, giving your age, whether married or single, as well as salary desired, address, and telephone number. Address E B 331, Tribune.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

START A STORE OF YOUR OWN

Handle the kind of goods that sell big
Every day in the year,
To rich and poor alike.
Every-day necessities,
At popular prices.
Start a store that is THE store for people who spend
In nickels, dimes and quarters. The kind of a store that yields a larger profit on investment than any other kind of store;
The kind that makes a profit
While other stores are standing still.

WE WILL SHOW YOU HOW

Let us show you how you can start such a store.
$2,500 to $6,000 will be sufficient capital.
You don't have to be an expert, or a trained merchant.
We will gladly show you
How to get a choice location,
Where to get your fixtures, and how to use them;
How to select your stock and how to arrange it;
How to mark your goods and how to make a profit;
How to make simple window trims that will sell goods;
How to get the people inside your store.
In short, we give you the benefit of 45 years' experience in showing men and women how to become successful merchants.
If you prefer to take over an established business we can put you in touch with one store in a suburb of Chicago which can be bought for $2,200, or one in Lockport for $1,500.
You incur no obligation whatever in requesting details of our plan.
All we ask is that you come in and see us or write us a letter in strictest confidence—telling us fully and frankly about yourself, how much capital you have to invest, and where you would prefer to locate.

WHEN BIRD-SYKES SAY:
"REBUILT"

Coach work, which includes removing body and fender dents, re-covering worn tops, repairing and fitting of curtains, also upholstery, etc., is accomplished by experts in our shops.

Every "Bird-Sykes" Rebuilt car is given a high grade paint job. Every "Rebuilt" car is thoroughly tested to meet our rigid standards and is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes. If anything turns up unsatisfactory within a reasonable time Bird-Sykes Co. will make good without cost to purchaser.

Equipped with steel dump body, two hooks, exceptionally good tires, etc. This is a reliable heavy duty truck that offers thorough dependability and is ready for instant service, with no expenditure other than the purchase price. $3,500.

PACKARD MODEL E-D 3½ TON TRUCK. This is a practically new truck; has been used less than 4,500 miles and carries our standard new truck guarantee and service. Hidden in your mouth are six tiny glands

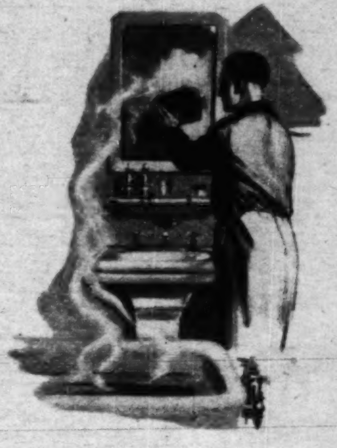
The profound importance of these tiny glands in protecting your teeth from sure decay has only recently been fully realized by dental and medical science



Trying to keep the teeth clean by brushing alone is like trying to keep the bathroom mirror polished when the hot water is running.

ONLY your glands can successfully fight the enemy that attacks your teeth.

This enemy is there all the time—24 hours a day—and just brushing your teeth won't rid you of the danger. Tiny bits of food remain in spite of brushing and these ferment and turn into acids, just as milk turns sour. Acids are thus formed constantly in your mouth, attacking the delicate enamel of your teeth.

The six glands—tiny but big in importance—alone can save your teeth

Hidden in your mouth are six tiny glands of utmost importance. When these are working normally they keep your mouth bathed with healing germ-free fluids. These fluids neutralize and wash away the acids as fast as they form.

Ages ago the glands were stimulated sufficiently by the chewing of rough, coarse food—but today, the soft prepared foods of our modern civilization give us no chance to chew enough to stimulate the glands.

Unless we make an effort to rectify this condition we are failing to get the protection from those six tiny glands that Nature meant us to have!

A dentifrice that keeps the glands healthy

Pebeco Tooth Paste in addition to cleansing and polishing your teeth, by its very presence in your mouth, encourages the salivary glands to normal healthy activity.

By the regular use of Pebeco your teeth and gums are kept bathed in natural healing fluids.

Pebeco keeps these glands at work pouring out germ-free fluids, not just once in a while, but 24 hours a day.

This easy gland test will convince you

Send the coupon below with 10 cents today for material for testing whether your six tiny glands are active enough to protect your teeth from deadly acids.

We will include a junior size tube of Pebeco and our booklet—"How the Glands Protect the Teeth." Lehn & Fink, Inc., Dept. Z-4, 635 Greenwich St., New York.

GOLFING GRANDMA beats woman champion, Miss Glenna Collet. Mrs. Fox is 60 years old. She has played in twenty women's championship meets. She loves her golf, but she has even a greater interest in life—ten grandchildren.

FREE Trial Bottle Tells the Story

Age is Judged by Gray Hair

Hair streaked with gray is fatal to a youthful appearance, no matter how young your face is. People don't look twice—they simply rate you a middle aged woman. This I know from my own experience, for I too was prematurely gray.

I perfected my famous hair color restorer to bring back the original color to my own hair. When I learned its value — when I was certain beyond doubt that it would restore gray hair safely, surely and easily, I offered it to all other gray haired people. Now millions have proved its value and so will millions more. Over 10,000,000 bottles have been sold.

What it is

My restorer is a clear, colorless liquid, clean as water — no relation whatever to sticky, greasy, repulsive ordinary dyes. It leaves your hair clean, soft and fluffy, a pleasure to wave and dress. It doesn't interfere with shampooing—there is nothing to wash off or rub off.

The restored color is perfectly even and natural in all lights and this color is not affected by washing, sea bathing, perspiration or any other cause. Use my hair color restorer and you can forget you ever had gray hair.

Another great discovery

While the formula for my restorer is time-tried and tested, my laboratories have recently discovered a new method of application. This consists of the use of a special preparatory powder which acts as a tonic and antiseptic. It greatly benefits the hair and puts it in perfect condition for restoration.

A trial package of this preparatory powder is included in my special patented free trial outfit, which I gladly send free on request, absolutely free, postage prepaid. It contains a trial bottle of my restorer, the above mentioned trial package of the preparatory powder and full directions and explanations for making a convincing test on a single lock of hair.

This test is your protection against unsatisfactory preparations for which extravagant claims are made but which can't do the work. It proves to you beyond a doubt that Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer brings back the perfect natural color to your hair, without danger of streaking or discoloration.

It is easily applied by simply combing through the hair. No outside aid or expert skill required.

Then when you know beyond a doubt just what my restorer is and what it will do, get a full sized bottle from your druggist. If he cannot supply you, or offers a substitute, write direct to me and I will take care of your needs.

Bleeding gums are the danger signal

Do you know that four persons out of every five past forty, according to irrefutable dental statistics, and many thousands younger, are afflicted with Pyorrhea?

Has Nature warned you, with tender, bleeding gums, of Pyorrhea's presence or coming?

Can you afford to take chances, to wait, when your teeth and health are menaced and the odds are so overwhelmingly against you?

Go to your dentist for advice. Have him inspect your gums and teeth regularly. Undoubtedly, he will tell you to brush your teeth, twice daily, with Forhan's For the Gums.

Pyorrhea is the foeman of teeth and health alike. When it strikes, the gums recede, the loosened teeth drop out or must be extracted, germs gather in pus-pockets that form at the roots and infection often spreads throughout the system.

Forhan's For the Gums, in turn, is Pyorrhea's foeman. When used in time and used consistently, it will prevent Pyorrhea or check its progress, and, in addition, keep the teeth white, the gums firm, and the mouth healthy.

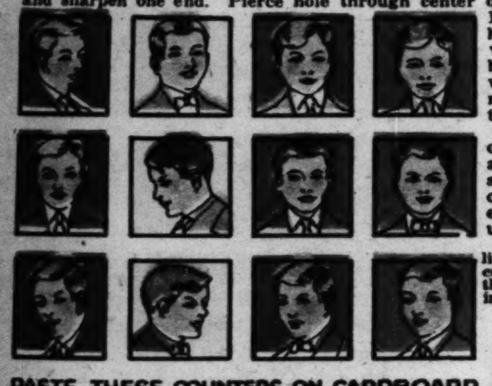
INSTRUCTIONS

Cut out entire game. It may be fastened in many ways. You may place it on the table, floor, or pin it on the tablecloth. Better still, paste it on a piece of heavy cardboard.

Cut out spinner and paste it on a piece of heavy cardboard. Then cut cardboard to shape of spinner. Trim a wooden match to 1¾ inch length and sharpen one end. Pierce hole through center of spinner with a pin. Insert match in pinhole and push it halfway through cardboard, making a top with which to spin numbers. (See illustration.)

Paste the 12 counters on heavy cardboard and cut each one out separately, trimming closely. Three counters of one color are used by each player.

Cut out rules on dotted line and paste on piece of cardboard to preserve them. Play the game as instructed by the rules.



PASTE THESE COUNTERS ON CARDBOARD AND CUT OUT SEPARATELY

RULES

The game of "Bank Directors" may be played by 2, 3, or 4 players.

Each player takes 3 counters of one color. Each counter represents a messenger boy who aspires to become a Bank Director. The object is to move the counters around board from space marked "Start" to the center marked "Bank Directors." Green counters start from green space marked "Start," red counters from red space marked "Start," etc.

Players must spin a "5" to start each counter. Once started, counters are moved number of spaces shown by spinner, moving around board as indicated by arrows. Side on which spinner falls indicates number of spaces to move. Players take turns using spinner. Each player gets one spin at a time, unless counter falls on space which allows an extra spin, or a space which directs to miss a spin.

When counters have been moved once around board and reach path of corresponding color which leads to center of board, they move in toward "Bank Directors." Red counters turn in on the red path, green turn in on green path, etc. "Bank Directors" must be reached by exact spin.

Any player may be sent back to start over by another player's counter arriving at the same space except:

(a) from spaces marked "Safety."

(b) where one player has two counters on same space, forming a blockade which cannot be passed.

To start over, player must spin a "5."

The player who gets all three of his Messenger Boys to "Bank Directors" first, wins the game.

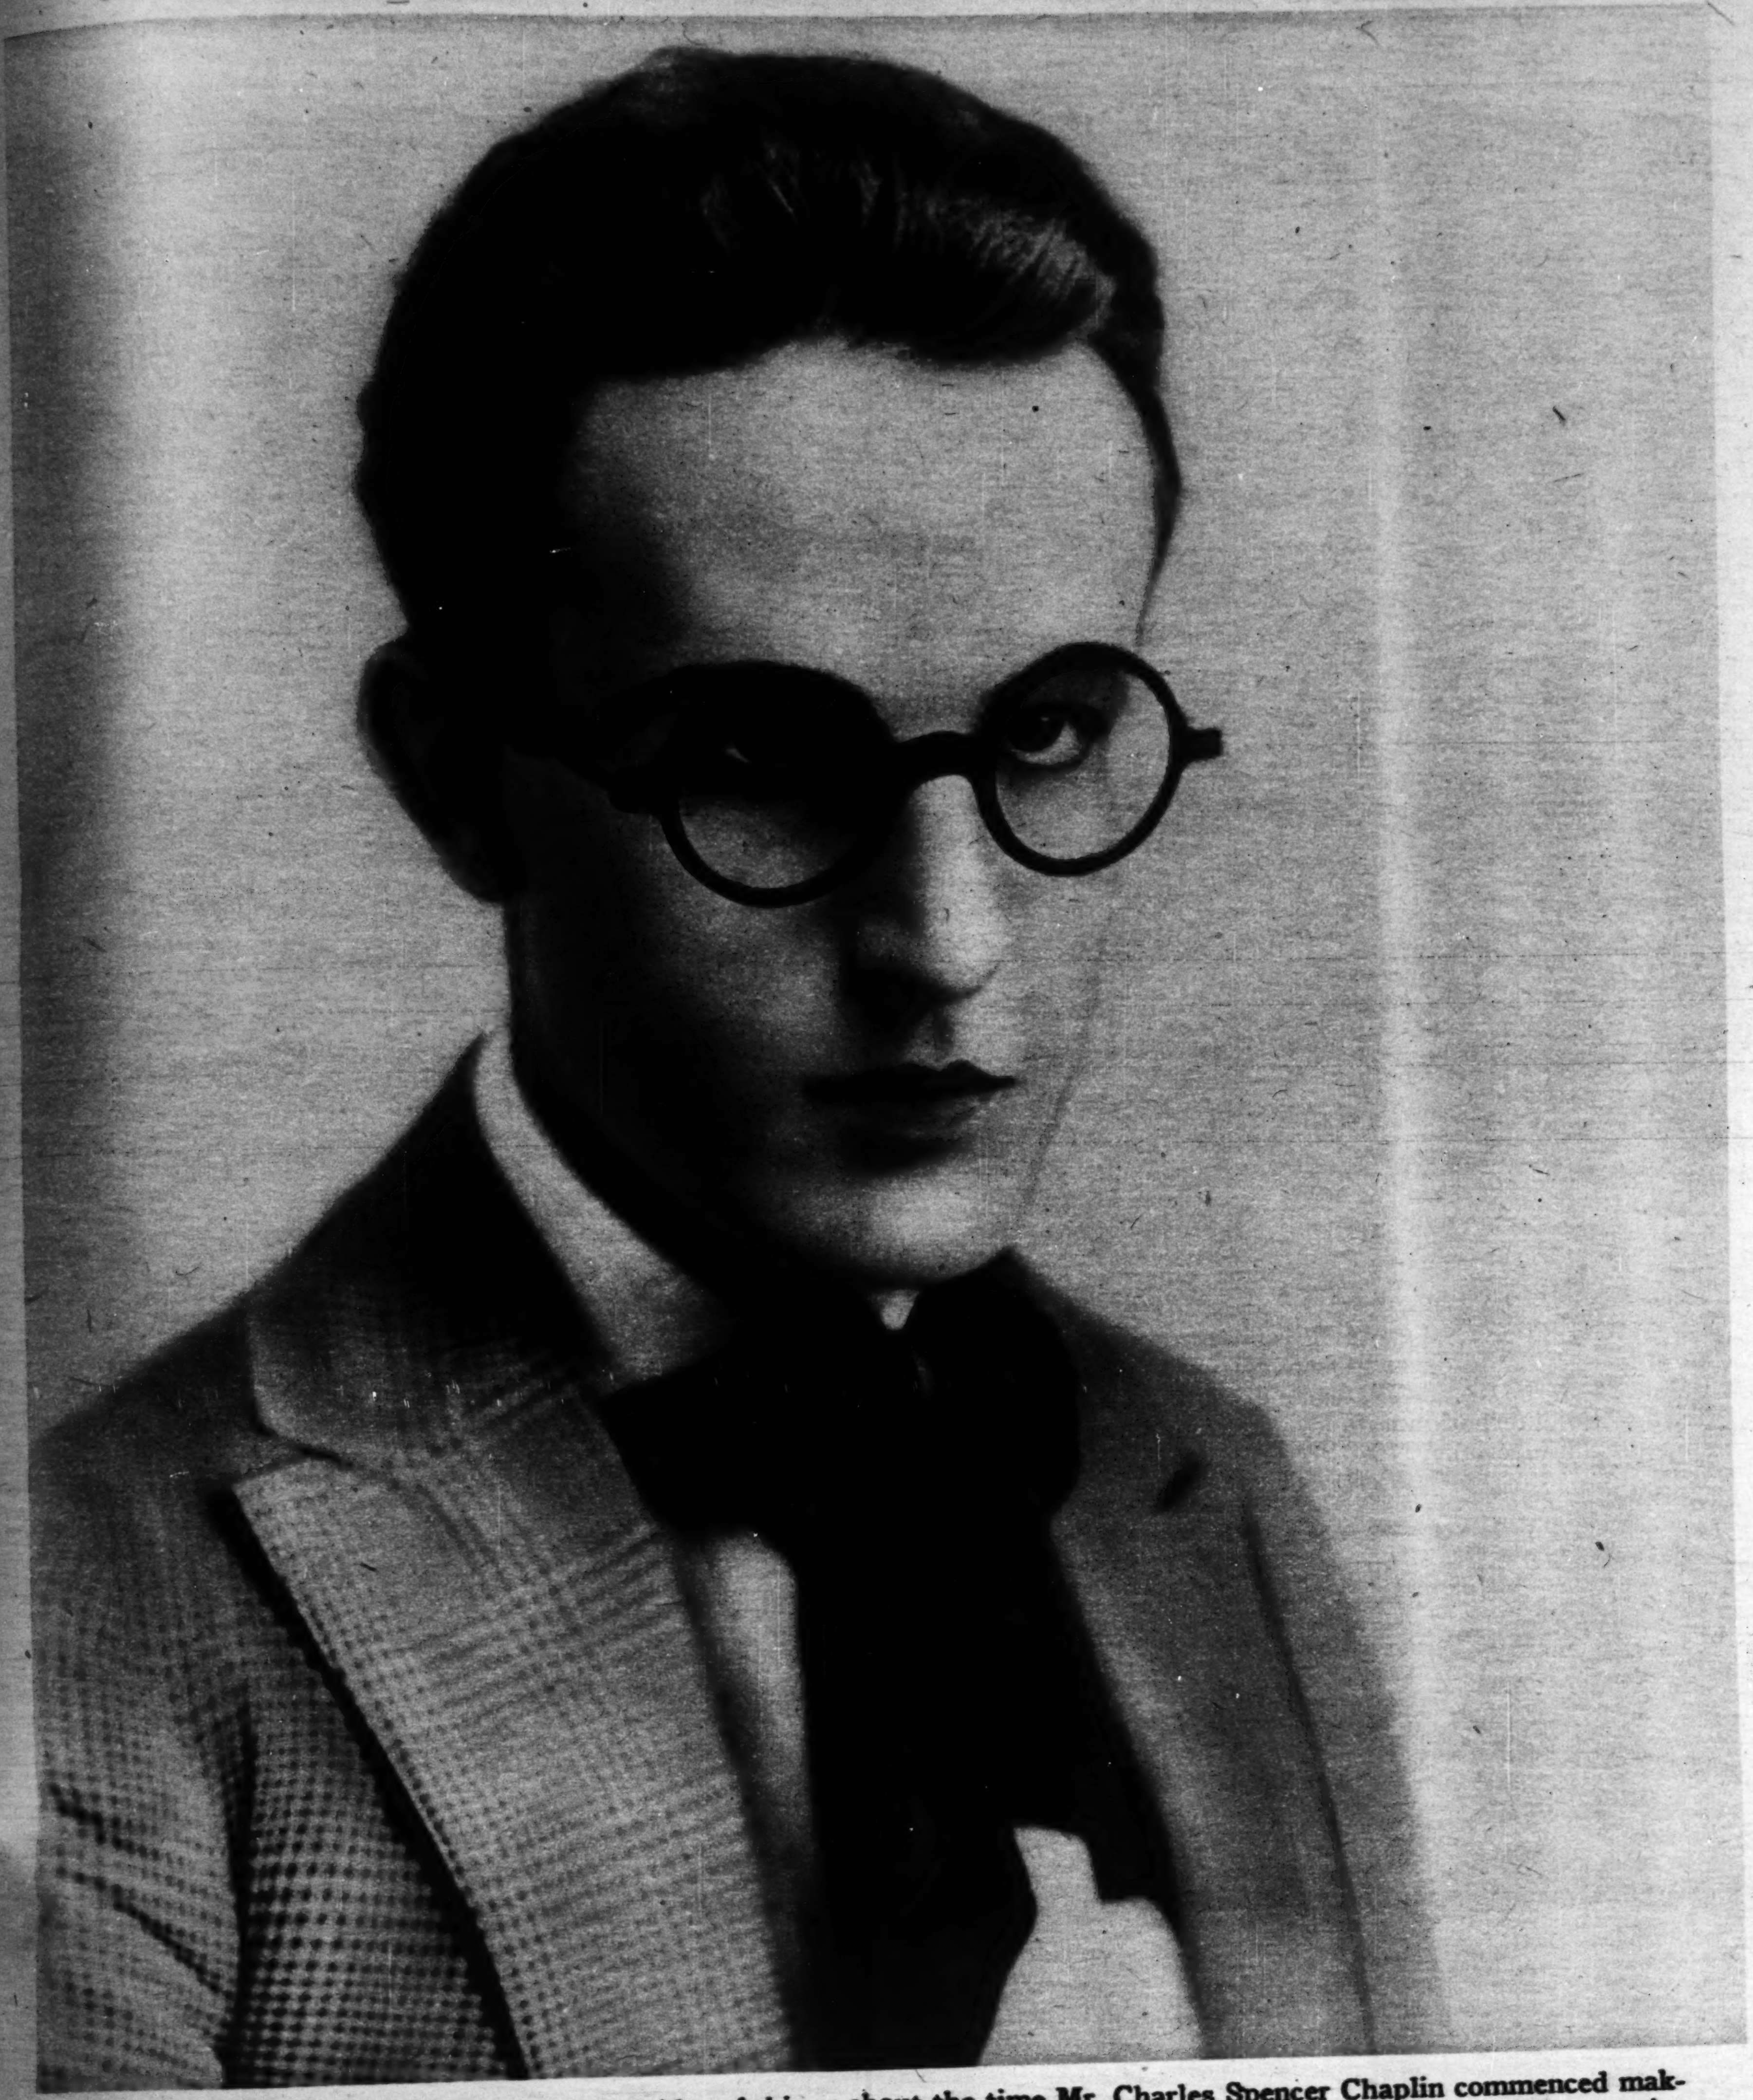
FILMDOM'S FUNNY "FOUR EYES."



HAROLD LLOYD edged into the midst of things about the time Mr. Charles Spencer Chaplin commenced making himself scarce. When people couldn't page a Chaplin comedy they remembered that a funny fellow in tortoise shell glasses had given them a pretty good time now and then. They began asking where his comedies could be found. Before we knew it Harold Lloyd was a real institution. ("What does she mean—'institution'?" asked Mr. Lloyd, looking up his lawyer's telephone number.)

This bespectacled gentleman's "drag" with his public is due to several facts—that his pictures are usually original, clean, and laughable. He has the reputation in real life of being a most modest young man, and certainly his work upon the screen would seem to bear out the impression. He never "plays to the camera," is a hard worker, and a cleanly and personable young fellow to boot.

FILM FANS AND FILM FOLK FONDLY CALL HIM "FOUR EYES." There's a tongue-twister—(almost!)

Blue Ribbon Fiction

Tom

By Anna Wahlenberg

TRANSLATION BY EDWIN BJORKMAN

Exiled from the Home and the Master He Loved, the Faithful Dog Labored by Day and by Night to Win His Reprieve.

DURING the first weeks of his life Tom was a perfect specimen of a little northland spits. Like his brothers and sisters, he was permitted to live because their master, the manager of the iron works, had promised them to friends and acquaintances. But a serious misfortune befell Tom before he was a month old. He lost a part of his tail.

No one could ever find out how it happened. Perhaps his own mother, Bella, bit off the missing piece in a fit of misplaced educational enthusiasm, or it may have been removed in some other way. The fact remains, however, that Tom's tail was not complete, and with the loss of that tail fraction his value as a perfect dog was gone. Not a single one of the manager's friends cared to have him. And the manager would probably have finished him with a shot if the children had not begged so hard to have him spared. They did not worry about the exact length of his tail, but had as much fun with him after as before the catastrophe. And so he was granted life on sufferance for the time being.

And Tom grew into a pretty big dog, thriving mightily and not missing that tail piece at all, because he was quite unaware of ever having had it. Everything was right if he was accustomed to it, and if he was not it was out of order. That was his philosophy of life. And he had a most remarkable sense for orderliness.

He tolerated the comings and goings of the housecat about the plant because that was in the order of things. But if a strange cat dared to cross the fence, that was out of order and had to be punished. If Tom got a beating from his master without quite knowing why, he submitted humbly to it as something perfectly proper, because it was the privilege of his master to beat him whenever he pleased. But if the gardener struck at him because he had torn up the flower beds, then Tom set up a fierce yelp and tried to bite the hand of retribution. There being no precedent for such effrontery on the part of the gardener, Tom ruled it quite out of order.

Tom's sense of order was so highly developed that it did not satisfy him merely to accept what he regarded as order and oppose what he thought out of order, but soon he began of his own impulse to take an active part in the preservation of order.

Every night a watchman patrolled the plant, inspecting every building in his search for fire or for possible intruders bent on mischief. Bella had accompanied him on his rounds for several years, and now Tom joined the patrol. No one else thought that he was needed, but he did, and that was enough for himself. He felt that something unpleasant must happen unless he helped to watch over the cherished place and all it contained.

It would be dawn before he lay down to sleep, and even then he closed only one eye at a time. And toward noon began his other self-imposed job as watchman, which was to look after Baby.

BABY was the smallest child in the manager's family, a little girl of three—which meant that she was twice as old as Tom. But, as Tom was twice as large, he felt toward her a certain superiority, which, however, was mixed with respect as well as love, for, after all, she belonged to the master's family. Every member of that family had the right to do whatever they pleased with everything and everybody within the plant. At their own sweet will they could make you happy with food and caresses or unhappy by harsh words and blows.

Baby could tug as hard as she pleased at his thick black coat. She could even pull his sensitive ears without protest on his part. And he did not stir when she filled his eyes with sand. But if a stranger appeared among the buildings, then he placed himself in front of her, barking and protective, no matter how hard she beat him to get him out of the way. For on such occasions he felt himself entitled to rule with the double right of superior strength and superior reason.

And at night, when she ran away from her toys, leaving her ball in the strawberry bed, her pail and spade in the sand pile, and her doll somewhere among the weeds on the outskirts, then it was Tom who put everything in order in so far as the nurse had not already done so. The nurse had been told to collect the scattered playthings and put them in a little go-cart that stood under the stairway leading to the veranda, but frequently she forgot all about it, and still more often she failed to find some of the things, and then the time came for Tom to show his superior ability.

He found the ball, even if it had gone over the fence; he discovered the doll, even if it had been dropped in the thickest part of the shrubbery; he dug out the pail and the spade, even if they were completely buried in the sand pile. And then he put everything carefully into the cart. He never forgot or neglected his task, and at last the nurse didn't bother at all about the toys, but left entirely to Tom the duty which he filled so much better than she.

IT was spring and Tom was just two years old when the manager received a friendly visit from a landed proprietor living about three miles from the works. It was to him Tom had been promised, and it was he who had refused him on account of the missing tail piece. On seeing the dog again it occurred to this man that Tom might take the place of a herder's dog that had been lost recently. For it is not so very important whether the tail of such a dog be complete or not. So he reclaimed the once scorned gift and got it without protest, because the manager differed from Tom by thinking him quite superfluous. Bella and the watchman had patrolled the place by themselves so many years that one might expect them to continue doing so effectively.

When the visitor left that evening he took Tom along, and Tom went securely leashed and lifted into the carriage by the manager himself.

It was no fun to leave that way with a perfect stranger, tied up at the bottom of the carriage. Tom's whole body trembled with anxiety and agitation. But as the master himself had lifted him into the carriage and turned him over to the stranger, Tom considered opposition out of the question. Perhaps it was a form of punishment, he thought. He must have done something wrong, although he could not guess what it might be. And there was nothing to do but to submit, for whatever the master did must be right, even if he couldn't see the reason for it.

During the first weeks Tom's new owner kept him chained to a kennel in order to teach him where he belonged now. And he got his food from the girl whom later he was to follow through field and forest. But sorrow and longing took away his appetite so that he could hardly touch food. All day long he lay with his nose turned in the direction of the old home, staring at the tops of the tall chimneys that rose above a screen of little wooded hills.

He wondered how long his punishment would last—his punishment for a crime of which he was not aware. Never before had any punishment lasted so long. He yearned to cringe at his master's feet with whisking tail and twisting body, so that his unknown crime might be expiated. And then he thought of the turn that things might take over there when he didn't share the night watch. And he thought of Baby's playthings, which some one might steal if they were left lying around at night.

Sometimes his longing became so heavy that he had to rise, stretch out his neck, put his nose into the air, and break out into prolonged, penetrating howls, one following the other.

But then he got a beating from his new owner or from any one else who happened to be near at hand. Howling was not permitted about the place.

WHEN the cows were turned to grass Tom was freed from the kennel but not from the chain. This was merely lengthened by a piece of rope on which the herd girl had a firm hold, for now Tom was to learn the art of intercepting strayed cows and turning them back to the herd.

The job was not unpleasant, especially when, after a few days, the girl trusted him enough to take off the chain. But no sooner were the cows grazing quietly, the girl seated on a rock with her knitting, and Tom himself stretched at full length in the grass for a rest, than the longing and the sorrow seized him again. And at last one day they grew irresistible. Suddenly leaving the girl and the cows to their own devices, he sped away like an arrow across rocks and logs and fields and fences, straight home to the beloved old place.

Just as he slipped through the back gate it occurred to him that they might be angry with him because he had stayed away so long. It was true that the master himself had lifted him into the carriage and sent him away, but perhaps he never meant that Tom should be gone such an unconscionably long time. And he recalled how, as a puppy, he had been beaten for venturing beyond the limits of the plant. Yes, they were probably very angry at him, and he had better proceed with caution.

Stealthily he made his way along the fence to the vegetable garden, and finally he sneaked into the kitchen as the least dangerous spot in the whole house, for the servant girls had never tried to beat him. They might give him a kick or two at the most, and that could be borne.

"Why, there is Tom!"

It was the cook who first caught sight of him as he crouched at the door with drooping earlaps. But she looked friendly rather than angry, and she did not kick him when he writhed his way to her feet, but instead she began to pat him and pet him.

He got a bowl of water to slake his thirst and wash the dust off his tongue that hung way out of his mouth. Then a good sized soup bone was produced from the pantry.

While he was busy with this dainty the report of his arrival spread through the place. All the children rushed into the kitchen, yelling with delight. He was surrounded, patted, caressed, kissed even, and all the time Baby had her arms about his neck.

There could be no mistake about his being heartily welcome, and so Tom leaped and barked in mad joyfulness. At last the mistress appeared, too, and, encouraged by all the kindness bestowed on him, Tom leaped up at her in proof of his great devotion. He was a little disappointed, however, for she looked very seriously at him, but when finally she greeted him with a few hesitant pats he took these as a sign of welcome and ran madly around the room. He was overwhelmed with happiness. He was home again, and all was well.

Suddenly he sped away like an arrow.

There was no end to his leaps and his circlings, and when he saw the door open to the main suite he started on a wild chase through all the rooms, followed by an excited and noisy throng of children.

In the midst of this pursuit, when the yelling and barking and laughing had reached a climax, the door to the manager's room was flung open and the master himself appeared in the doorway with a scowl on his forehead and wrath in his eyes.

The play came to a sudden end. Tom understood at once that his fortune was not quite as prosperous as he had imagined a moment earlier. Like a worm he wriggled his way across the floor to the master in order to show his deep remorse and to get pardon for the crime he was unaware of having committed.

But the master did not say a word. Instead he went back into his room, from which he soon returned with a whip that Tom recognized only too well. Then he knew at once that he had become guilty of another incomprehensible crime. And the punishment followed immediately.

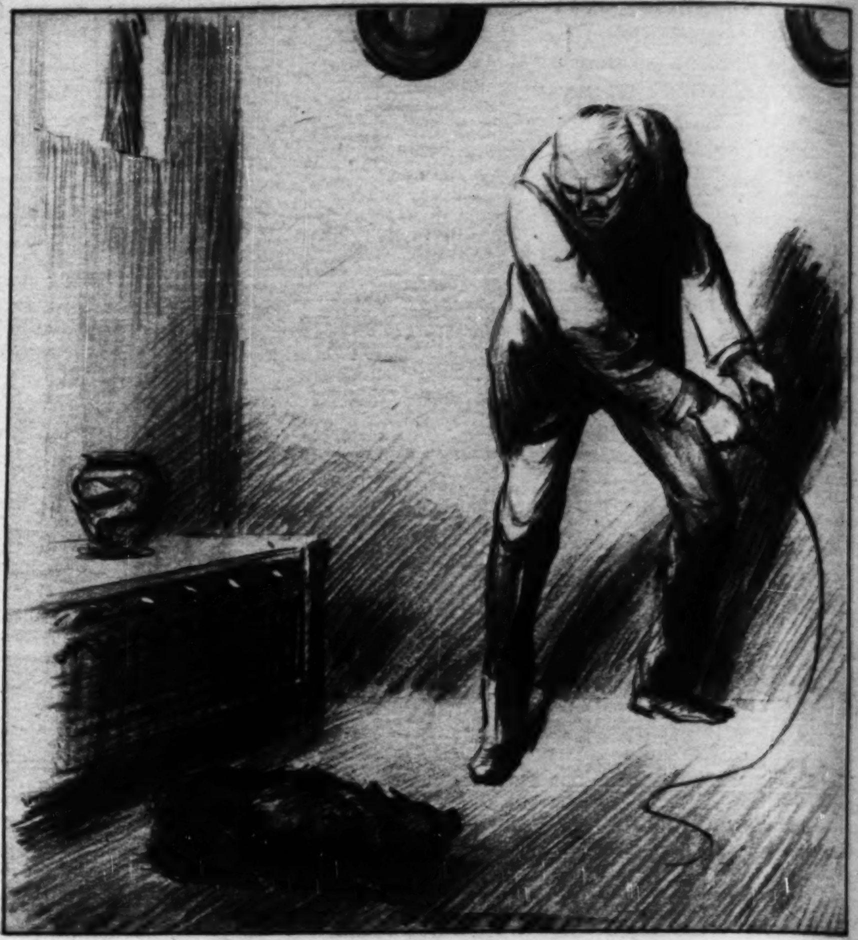
Lash after lash cut with a hiss through his thick fell. Never before had he received such punishment. When it came to an end at last they tied a rope around his neck and turned him over to a boy who led him back to his new master, the landed proprietor.

There he got another beating. Then he was chained to the kennel again for weeks. And it was only after a new trial period at the end of a rope held by the girl that he was set free once more. By that time he understood that he had been given new duties which could not be neglected.

Day after day he followed the girl faithfully through glen and glade, keeping the cows in order. But at night he lay outside the house with his nose pointing to the tall chimneys that could be seen above the treetops, and his heart was full of yearning for the old home. There was nothing to do about this yearning. It would not leave him.

ONE night as he lay there staring at the chimney tops it occurred to him that, after all, he was free to do what he pleased while it remained dark. There were no cows to watch then. If he returned in time next morning there was no reason why he might not run over to the old place and have a look at it. No one would know it, for no one was awake at either place.

As once before, he went at top speed the shortest route across fields and through wooded hillsides to the well known place. The gate was closed when he reached there, so that he could not get in the usual way.



Never before had he received such punishment.

But he knew well what to do. A plunge into the creek that ran past the works, a quick swim around the fence that extended some distance into the water, a leap to the shore where the willows stood, and there he was in the midst of the garden.

It was a pleasure to run sniffingly along the graveled walks. He picked up the scent of many familiar feet—the master's, the mistress', the cook's, the housemaid's, the gardener's, the children's—all could be easily distinguished. Then he struck the scent of Baby, and suddenly he recalled the playthings that should be collected.

He circled the lawns with his nose close to the grass. Now and then he raised his head as if to catch a scent on the wing.

All of a sudden he found one. Sic it! It led him to the jasmines. There, in the midst of a thick cluster and half buried in the black earth, he found a ball—Baby's familiar old ball. It was damp and dirty as if it had been lying there through many rains. Tom picked it up triumphantly and carried it in his mouth to its proper place by the veranda steps. Evidently it was high time that he came home and kept things in order once more.

The cart was in its accustomed place, and he dropped the ball among the other toys. After sniffing at them a while for the mere pleasure of catching the well known smell, he was off again.

He had to examine the plant itself. There was no trouble in getting there, for the fence separating the works from the manager's private grounds was a little out of repair right back of the icehouse. There was a hole he had used innumerable times to get in and out. In a moment he had found it, squirmed neatly through the narrow opening, and reached the barren soil among the buildings, where nothing grew but cinders and slag. Once more he began his sniffing search. But a few zigzaggings sufficed to put him on the trail of Bella and the watchman, who were engaged in their customary nightly rounds.

He slowed down when he caught sight of them, uncertain whether he should risk showing himself or not. The experience of his previous visit furnished no encouragement. But Bella discovered him, uttered a funny little bark, and came right up to him to bestow her gracious cognizance. This helped the watchman to identify the visitor.

The man stopped still and began to think hard. The manager had given strict orders both to his own family and to the people at the works to chase Tom away if he turned up again, and above all not to show him any friendliness. And the watchman had always proved himself a faithful and obedient servant. Nevertheless obedience seemed strangely difficult on this occasion. He tried to raise his night stick threateningly at Tom, but it seemed heavy as lead. And in the end he decided to play deaf and dumb and go about his task as if nothing had happened.

Bella returned and took up her customary place beside him. Soon he noticed another black head just beyond hers. Tom had resumed his old place as participant in the night patrol. One round after another was completed without any effort on Tom's part to attract the attention of his old friend the watchman, and the latter continued on his way as if he had not seen the dog.

The master himself appeared, with wrath in his eyes.

It did Tom's yearning heart a lot of good to be back again watching over the dear old home. It was almost as it used to be.

Shortly after dawn the watchman noticed suddenly that only one shaggy black head with pointed ears remained beside him. Turning around, he caught a glimpse of Tom in full run toward the fence, where a moment later he disappeared through the hole. He was heading for his new home to resume his daily duties over there.

WHEN Baby began to take her treasures out of the cart next morning she set up a cry of joy. She had found the ball that had been missing so long, and a great inquiry followed to discover who had picked it up. But no one claimed the honor.

Not long afterward the pail and the spade became the centers of a similar mystery. The nurse looked vainly for them in the evening, but next morning they occupied their usual place in the cart. It was impossible to discover who had put them there. The mystery increased still further when the nurse one morning proceeded to pick up the toys which she had forgotten the night before. She remembered perfectly that she had left them under some trees, but there was no trace of them left at that spot. On her return to the building she found them all in the cart. It was quite uncanny, and probably it would have remained a mystery forever if the watchman had not happened into the kitchen while the cook and the nurse were discussing the matter.

He smiled in such a manner that they had to ask him what he meant. Perhaps it was he who had begun to make rounds in the park and the garden, too.

"No," he said, "but I know who makes the rounds over here, for afterward he comes and shares my watch all night long, every night."

"It's Tom!" both girls cried simultaneously.

Then they began to whisper. It wouldn't do to talk aloud of Tom. The very walls had ears. And Tom was everybody's friend. It would never do to betray him.

But a few days later it had become a public secret that Tom visited the place every night to resume his old duties as collector of the toys and assistant watchman. Most of the people had seen him, both around the house and in the works. Two of the oldest children stayed awake one night to watch him from one of the ground floor windows, and so did their mother one night when her husband was away. But the manager's orders were held in such respect that no one left the house when the dog was there, no one called to him, no one spoke to him or patted him if passing him at the works. The only thing that could be done was to overlook his existence in order not to betray his secret. And in that way Tom was permitted to continue for a long time, coming and going more like a ghost than a living being, silent as a ghost and treated like one.

THE only one who remained in absolute ignorance of these nightly visitations was the manager. For this reason he became highly surprised when, on his return from an unaccustomed night inspection of one of the furnaces, he came across the watchman and saw him accompanied by two dogs instead of one.

"Hey there!"

The watchman had seen him, but had continued straight on in the hope of getting out of sight without being noticed. The loud command gave him no choice but to return in company with Bella.

Tom, on the other hand, remained at a distance, standing as if nailed to the spot and fixing his glance on the master. His eyes glistened in the vague twilight as if lighted by his conflicting emotions. One moment his pointed ears lay flat along his head in an agony of fear and anxiety, but in the next they pointed straight forward in an equally intense outburst of longing for the beloved master, who now was so close to him. And his tail, which he kept between his hind legs, was becoming irresistible in its desire to wag.

"What dog is that?" the manager demanded of the watchman, although he knew well enough without asking.

"Tom," replied the watchman rather timidly in anticipation of the coming storm.

But suddenly his courage returned and made him face the manager with a straight back and a firm look.

"Tom is a good dog," he said, "and you ought to know it. If he thinks it's up to him to do something he will do it, no matter what happens. He comes over here every blessed night to pick up Baby's toys, and then he goes the rounds with me as he used to do. But at dawn he makes a bee line for the other place and does his duty over there, too."

THE manager didn't have a word in answer to this unusual display of independence. It looked as if he hadn't heard at all. He stood leaning on his stick and looking hard at Tom.

Then he turned as if he meant to go right home and join the rest in pretending that Tom did not exist. But a moment later he turned back again and stood looking at the dog as before. There was a pull in Tom's yearning eyes from which he couldn't get away. And suddenly he had a sense of being on the verge of repulsing a faithful friend. Nothing but a dog, and yet a friend with a faithful, loving heart—could one afford to refuse what he offered?

Unconsciously he shaped his lips to an almost inaudible whistling. But Tom caught it. He did not move from the spot, but his ears stood straight up, his body swayed with a snakelike wriggle, his tail wagged furiously, and he let out a faint whine, as if he had asked for a confirmation of what he had just heard.

Then he heard what he hoped for — the shrill whistle call that had not reached his ears for such a long time. In two leaps he was at the feet of the master he loved so inexpressibly, and for whom he had yearned so tormentingly. One moment he leapt madly at him, and the next he licked his hands in a passion of gratitude and devotion.

At last he was pardoned for that unknown crime. Now he knew it, not only by the whistle but because the master's hand passed caressingly over his thick coat. And then, on top of it, he was allowed to go home with the master, through the garden, right into the house, straight up to the door of the master's own room.

There the master's own hands spread a rug for him. And long after the master had disappeared Tom lay on that rug with his nose pointing at the door, toward which he now and then raised his eyes. Of course, he knew now that everything was all right again and that he would be permitted to stay where he was, but every so often he had to look at that door in order to make sure that it was really true.

It is a little hard to grasp one's own happiness when one has been unhappy for a very long time.

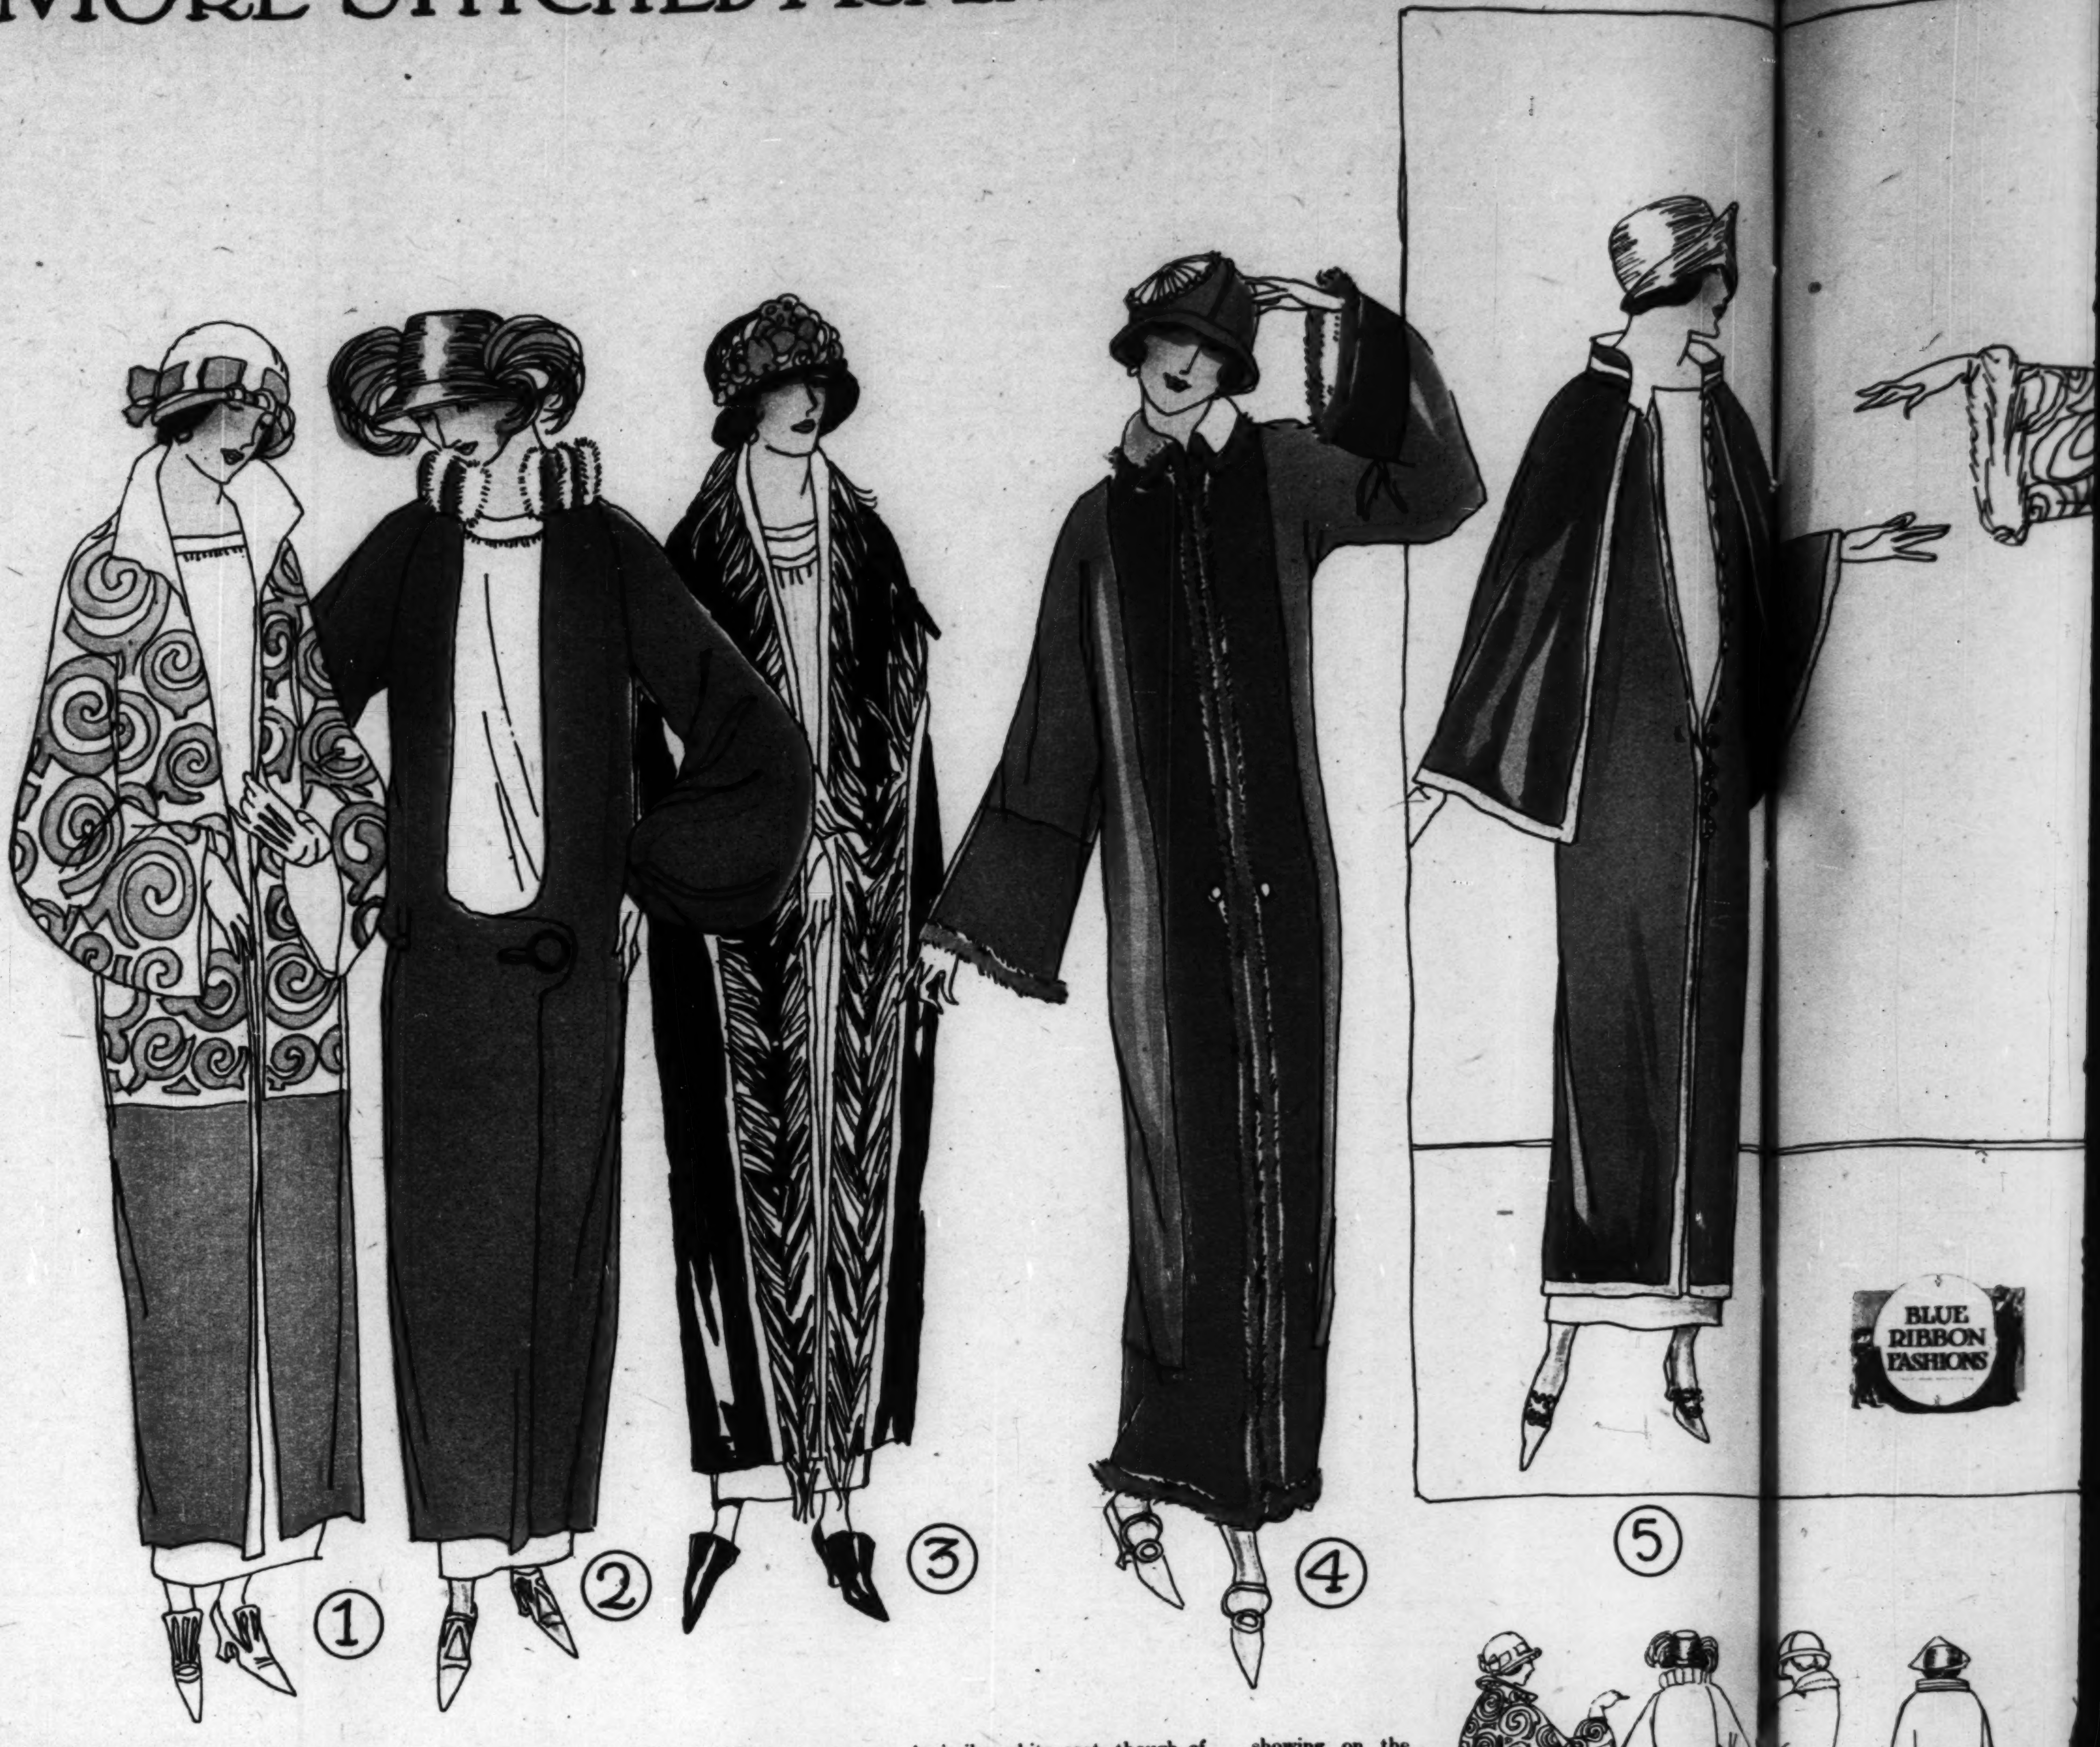
MORE STITCHED AGAINST THAN PLAIN of C[illegible]TH are N



This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The spring coat is not the simple habiliment of other years. It is bold of braiding, and frequently boastfully brilliant of coloring. Dressy coats have quite a reputation to live up to this spring to equal the advance guard headed Palm Beachwards. At that, a surprising number of pure white ones were in the phalanx, and pale grays and beiges, all braided in self-tones to the utmost seam.

A bedspread we once had at home is typical of the braiding on many new coats. Mother bought it from an Armenian peddler. It was white and chain stitched all over, with yellow silk in a rising sun pattern. Yesterday I saw that rising sun playing over the back of a white crepe coat, chain stitching and all, and overflowing on the raglan sleeve. The front was of plain white crepe, caught to the left side in wrap style with self-strings.

There were shams, small replicas of that big counterpane. They would turn very well today into such hip length, chain embroidered jackets as are being shown. They sport a side sash tie of contrasting hue to the embroidery, and are meant for wear with plaited white skirts.

Remember the Turkish curtains stuck all over with tin to represent mirrors? This material, mirrors and all, is shown worked up into jackets in a leading shop!

In short, you cannot go wrong by working up any far east fabric, be it bayadere stripes, Persian chain embroidery, India shawls, Greek cottage embroidery on black, or what not, into a spring coat.

The only rule to observe is to let no inch of plain goods escape the needle. Braid it with soutache or chain stitching, applique it, band it, conceal its original significance as much as possible.

Thus we get coats like No. 6, works of art with their lovely braiding. This is of white taffeta, braided with narrow, shining silk. The semi-shawl collar is characteristic of many of the spring wraps. A similar white coat, though of wool, showed the material of which it was made only in a band down the front and another around the natural waistline. Otherwise it was incrusted with rattail silk braid, hand sewn in a carefully studied design for that coat alone. It had a straight collar, buttoned under the chin, no belt, but the usual side tie of self-material.

Ordinarily the back line of coats is unbroken. If the designer's fancy gives itself scope, it is with front arrangements. But embroidery designs know no front or back. In fact, the heavy embroidery act is most often performed on the back, above the waistline. This may be all solid embroidery.

A charming allover embroidered coat of the strictly straight, hook to the left side order was all white, except in two or three carefully selected spots, where the white chain stitching changed to green—a bit of dragon, perhaps; or the skeleton of a leaf.

The straight band or flange collar is much seen, as in the second figure I am showing on the left, and more particularly in No. 5.

Monkey fur is liked as well as ever for trimming. Hats and dresses for spring, as well as coats, use it. In the third figure from the left I am showing it is on a garment designed to make a mature figure look slender. This is a cape of black flat crêpe. White monkey fur is used. The colors could be reversed to equal advantage. Monkey fur in black frequently sets off a white coat, outlining its turnback cuffs and the edge of its high collar.

Rose color is in high favor for spring. The first figure to the left shows a practical as well as pretty coat for pleasant weather us[illegible]pliqued on white. No. 2 is a [illegible] French blue kitten's ear [illegible] you do not see is of black duvetyn. Bands of white lapin trim the standup collar. The back is bloused, a detail closely observed on coats for youth.

As straight up and down as a ruler is coat No. 4, and guiltless of belt or girdle. It is of gray twill with vermilion flannel banding and beaver edging. Simple but stunning, and practical, in its way, for hard usage. And again we see the cocarde, trimming a four piece, head shaped sports hat of gray satin.

To button right up and down from neck to hem is quite the thing with the new worsted things, be they coats or dresses. I am illustrating the principle in No. 5, a gray blue cape coat trimmed with gray blue braid carrying a silver thread. The cape and long coat combination affords a utility garment, as serviceable for city wear as for around beach or country club activity. Notice the Milan shape worn with it. It has the new flaring front, one side is longer than the other, and there is very little back brim.

The damsel walking out of the picture over No. 7 has had more done to her back than the mode usually affects. In backs, that is. For not only is she bloused; she is tucked. Cleverly, too. Fan shaped tucking, at that. Note that only the waist is involved in the plot-- the skirt is as plain as plain, and suggests even a pull forward. Quite the accepted silhouette, after all.

We are all quite mad this spring about Chinese embroidery. For that matter, we are crazy about embroidery of any kind, shape, or description—wool, or silk, or cotton, ancient or modern.

Plenty of good Chinese embroidery is to be had in this country, and designers are taking note of it more and more in their color councils.

Hence its rich blue on the square collar and deep cuffs of the brown crêpe coat. The cuff edges are gathered into a narrow band, as with the second coat to the left. This large, warm, closely held sleeve has advantages that we who went through the winter with the flare cut cannot extol too much, though spring soon may show up its weak points.

In the colorful coat to the right we have accent in plenty. Its lines are Chinese to a degree. But the material is flannel of vermilion hue and the embroidery design, though Chinese in effect, is worked up out of good old western flannel cloth, in vermilion, emerald green, brown, and blue shades. A clever garment, worn in the right place! It needs country or seaside background in plenty.

Interest in trimming consisting of many horizontal rows of narrow tubing of self material has not subsided. This form of trimming constituted the big collar and wide turnback cuffs of a dashing coat of gray crepe worn at a church wedding. There was nothing else to it except splendid lines.

As for utility topcoats, soft surface fabrics rule. Camel's hair has found a definite place here, and new worsteds with silky sheen. Straight lines are most practical with these, but they are seen in wrap arounds, too.

AMATEUR NIGHT

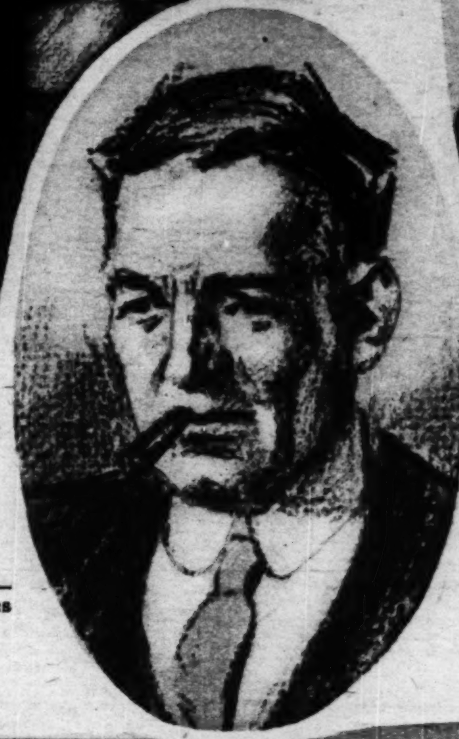
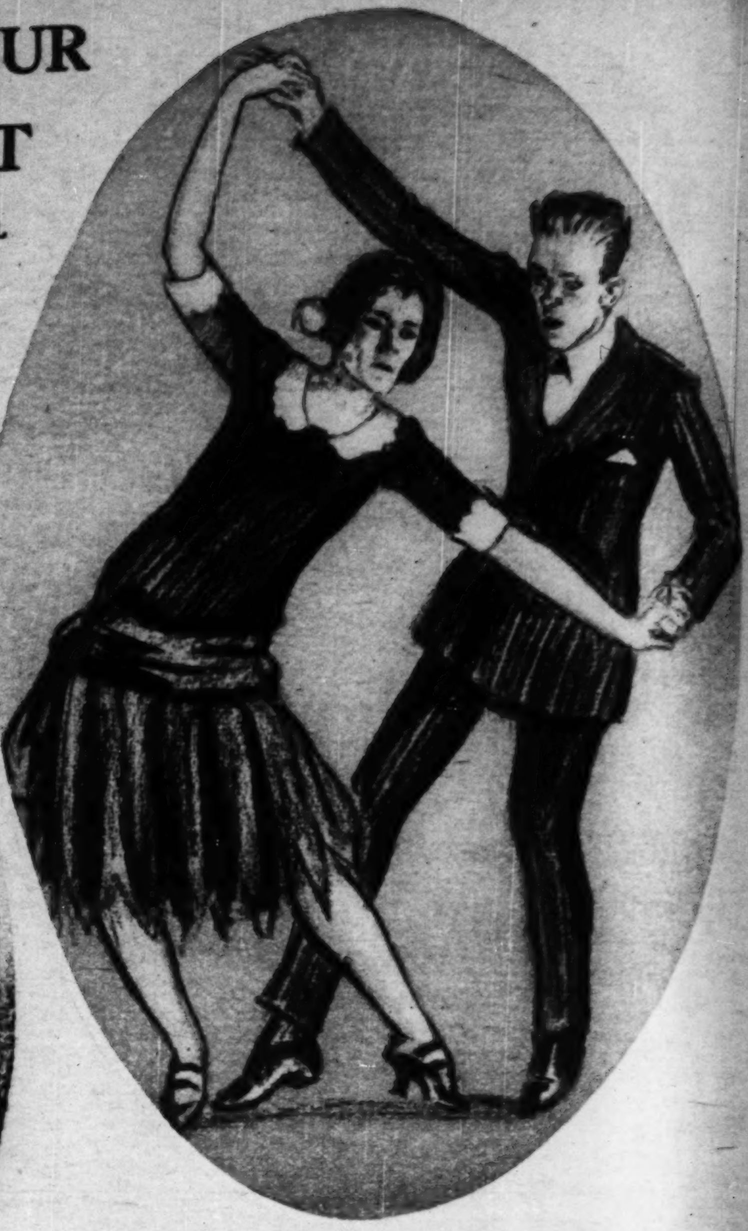
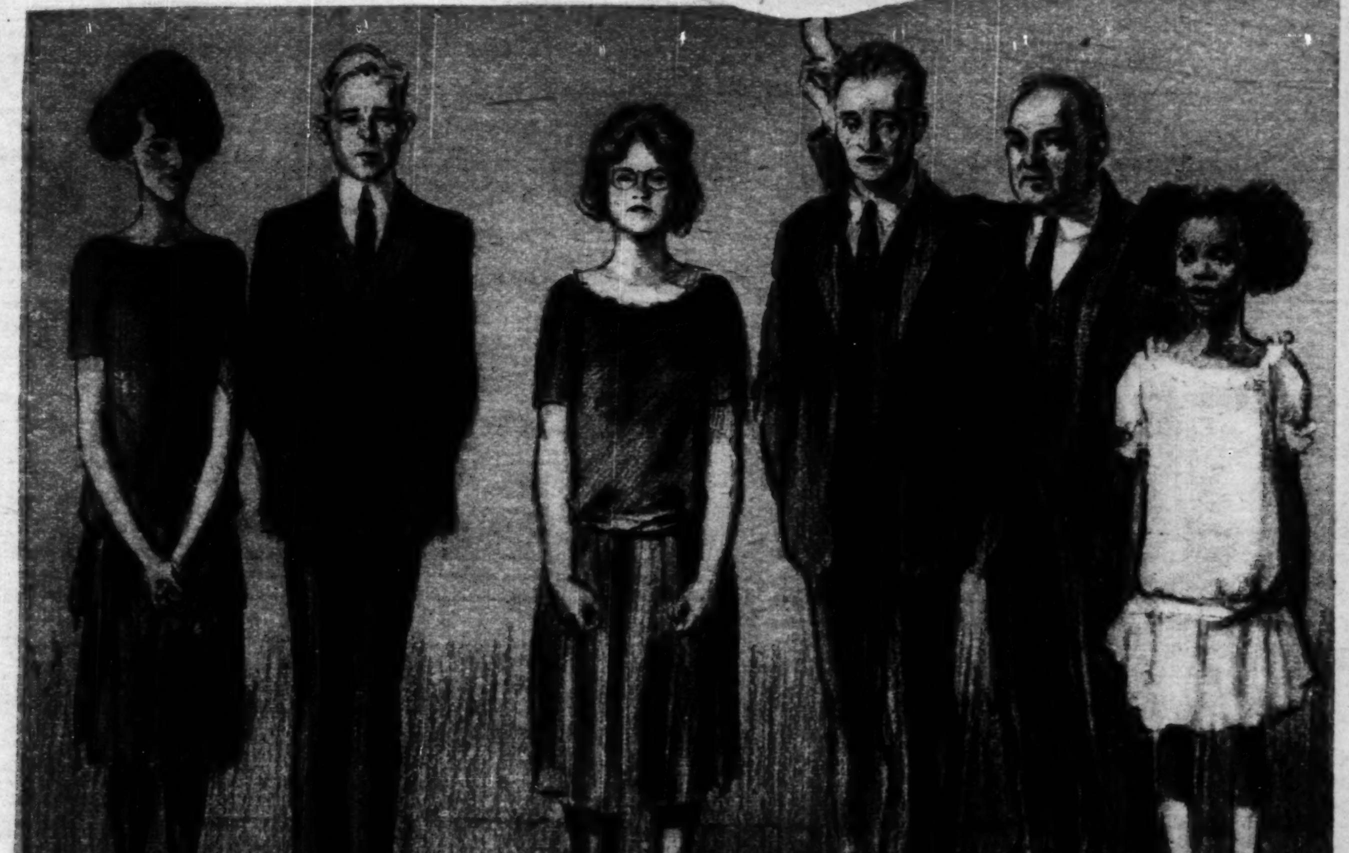
Beautiful lady slummer in Box B, about to throw money on the stage. The quarter will land just back of the trap drummer, but then, you know, it's the thought that prompts the deed that really counts, etc.



The cynic. "Aw, these guys ain't amateurs—they get 'em from an agency that supplies amateurs!"



Exponents of fancy and bizarre ballroom dancing being very fancy and just too bizarre for words. The shallow stage is making Miss Mahoney just a wee bit nervous. Twice now has she danced her way in among the footlight bulbs.



Awarding first prize on amateur night is fraught with consequences, when you pause to consider—and well you may—that like as not some little home will be disrupted tomorrow when Morris or Hulda decides to take up a career. And all because of first prize on amateur night at a burlesque house. The four acts being judged by Manager Dooling—with a great deal of help from the audience—are, reading, as they say, from left to right, Miss Louise Hennessy and her partner, Mr. Olaf Oleson, in eccentric ballroom dancing (the audience felt it was very eccentric dancing); Miss May Rappelsky, in a casket of vocal gems if you please; Mr. Jack Broilstein in comic sayings and riddles, and little Mattie Prowl of the chocolate belt. Mattie did herself proud with "The Sheik of Alabam'" and a somersault at the finish will probably get her first prize. And from tonight on Mattie will be spoiled for household duties.

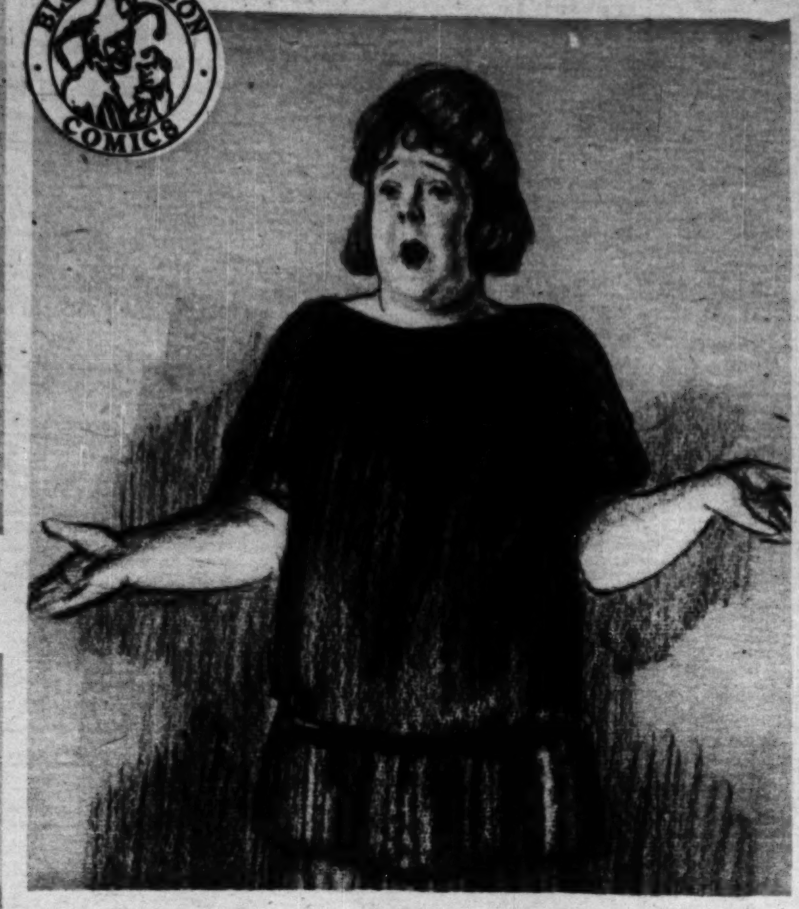
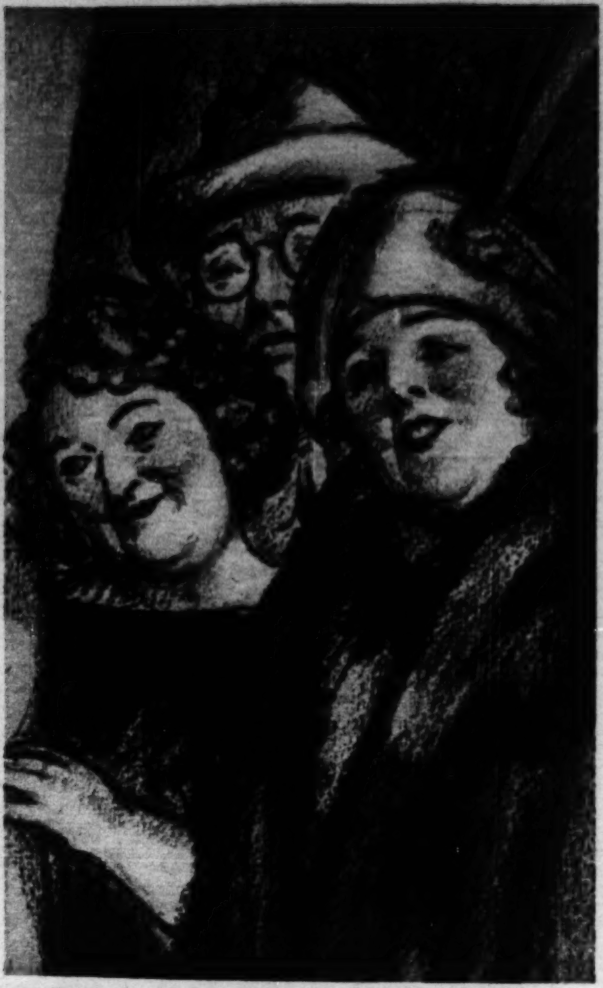
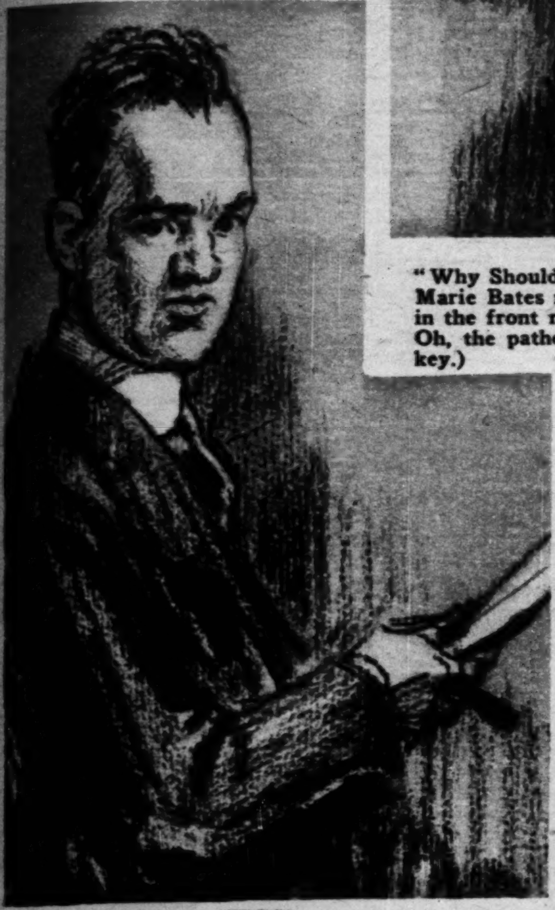
Very frightened young man about to render a ballad about red roses and mem'ries and a face so fond and true.



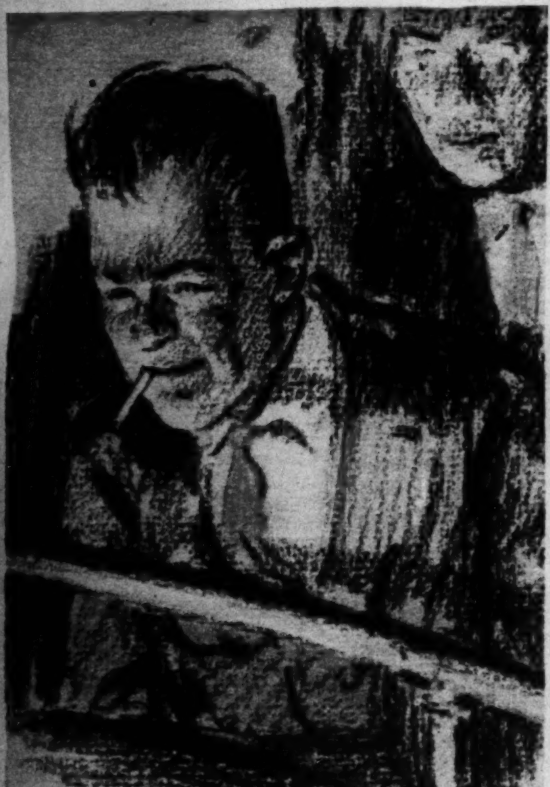
"Why Should I Cry Over You?" is a sad song. And the way Etta Marie Bates renders it you'd swear she was asking it of every man in the front rows, to say nothing of Boxes A and B, left and right. Oh, the pathos of it. (Too bad the fool orchestra has the wrong key.)



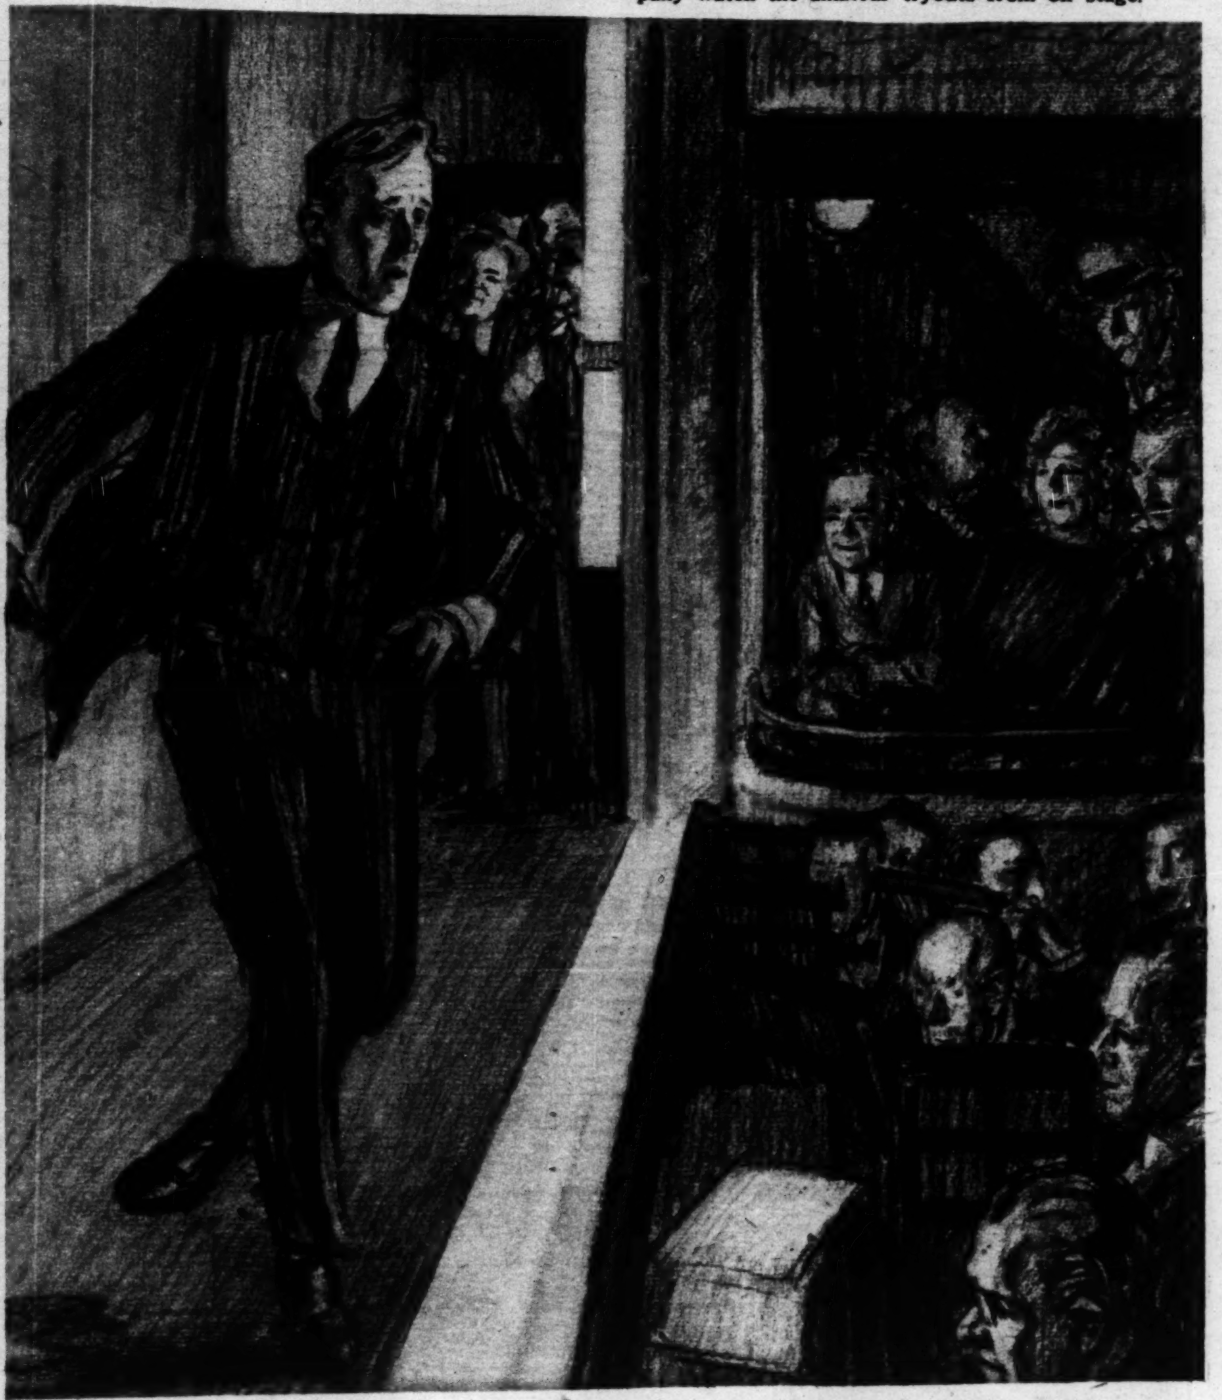
Members of the "Kids from Kewpieland" company watch the amateur tryouts from off stage.



"Come on, boys, give her a chance!" The master of ceremonies appeals to their better natures.



"The hook for you, Percy! Give him the hook!"



Handsome Joe Goebel, the pride of the shipping department, is doing the fancy and eccentric stepping that made him the talk of the hour at the Pastime Social club when he did practically the same act at the semi-annual ball. He's not going quite as big tonight. The music probably.

Something Different

By Franklin P. Harry

Think You There Is Nothing New in Romance? Angie Thought So, and See What Happened!

IN spite of the fact that Andre had given her his best table and the lunch which she had ordered for herself and Bebe Clayton was proving unusually good, and that she was hungry with an altogether unspoiled appetite, Angie managed to look bored. That was Angie's natural pose, though it was, in truth, only partially assumed. Things came so easily to her—Dad was prone to loosen up quite royally with his ducats!—that almost anything palled upon Miss Kent after a while. Even the Little Pecan!

"Life certainly is a mess, come to consider it," she sighed plaintively, attacking the artichokes which had beep served with the Little Pecan's famous hollandaise. "Just one wormy thing after another! If it isn't this it's that, and I'm blessed if I know which is worse!"

"Isn't it!" agreed her friend, who would have agreed to anything Angie said, seeing that Miss Kent always paid for everything when they shopped around together.

"Not a spark of originality in the whole wormy world!" Angie went on to lament. "Not a spark! Everybody imitates everybody else like a pack of monkeys. You know what your friends are going to say before they say it, because it will be just what someone else has said—the mimics! And it's the same with their actions and their thoughts. Copycats, all of them!" she scorned. "I tell you I'm sick of taking things for granted. Of pawing one around right after the introduction, as if one were a pet kitten or a colt. Ugh! There's no mystery about the thing they call Love any more—just snatch and grab. I slapped Freddy Colter's face last night for being—unoriginal!"

Bebe deemed it wise to eat along in silence.

"I want to love somebody," Angie said earnestly, "just as hard as I can, and forever. But a lovely chance I'll ever have of doing it, the way things go these days. They all disgust me before I have a chance to become interested—same brand of cigarets, same speeches, same fresh eye work on short acquaintance.

"Why, even the Chinese have something on us! Somebody arranges the marriage, and you don't know who you're getting until the last moment! At least they have that thrill to make it worth while.

"Maybe I'm reverting backward. I don't know. Might be feeling the strain of some old Puritan ancestor in me. It's not that I don't want a mate. I do! I want one just as earnestly as some—some primitive woman. But he'll have to leave out the cave man stuff or the present day methods. I want to be made love to without the physical contact—at first. Lord knows, we're not animals!"

She paused to light a long, slender pipe which she dug up from a natty little contrivance which compactly held not only it but a lip stick, a powder puff, and a small mirror. With the absurd strawlike stem between her teeth she leaned eagerly across the table.

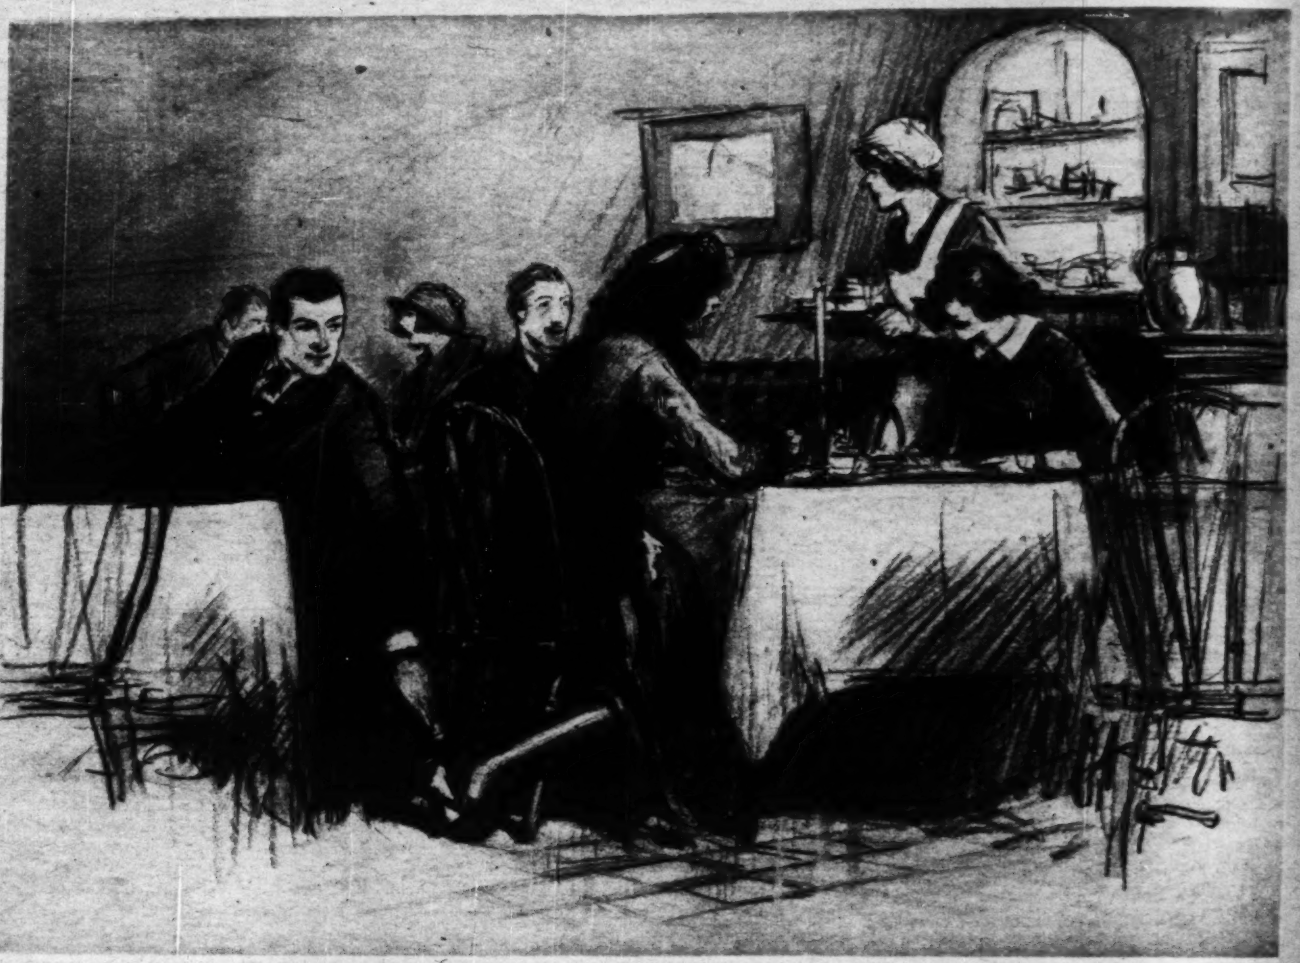
"The trouble is, Bebe" she continued, "we've speeded up and speeded up until we've run clear away from romance. We start our little story around chapter ten instead of at the beginning, when all the time it's the beginning that whets our appetites. I want a good beginning. I'm willing to work swiftly, but there's got to be something different about it. I'm ripe for whatever it is," she was regarding her friend with a reckless expression, a tiny spiral of smoke curling up from her lips, "and game enough to meet him half way. Just let some man go about it right—away from the usual lines—and I'll marry him if he's a hodcarrier!"

"Angie, you're a nut!" Bebe breathed, eyes at their widest. She had never heard Angie prattle so wildly before.

Without troubling to reply, eyes glittering through narrowed lids, Angie sat and smoked furiously, one leg thrust backward until its smooth black silk curve projected directly beneath the gray clad elbow of the man sitting at the table behind hers. It was an alluring, an arresting shapeliness calculated to capture the attention of the most blase, for beyond its tapering ankle tilted a trim, small foot partially encased in a black and white sports shoe. Only partially encased, for the good looking little foot had slipped itself almost entirely free of its natty, low housing. The round, silken heel had ventured clear of its white kid fitting, Angie, for the moment, having found the trapping slightly uncomfortable.

He of the gray clad elbow, after a moment's thoughtful scrutiny, was moved to do a curious thing. First he hastily selected a cigaret from a small case and freed the paper wrapper of its contents. Then, placing the scrap of paper on the smooth surface of his plate, he wrote several words upon it with a lead pencil, after which he folded the missive to thumb nail size. Then, with a dexterity which, under the circumstances, bespoke splendid nerves he dangled his arm at his side, inched closer, and dropped the paper between Angie's little round heel and the back of her shoe. There wasn't much space in which to work, but it fell squarely without touching her into the cuplike receptable, and shortly thereafter Angie walked out with it under the arch of her foot.

"KDKA? Why, that's radio for Pittsburgh," Angie murmured to herself, puzzled, when later, stripped to step-ins, one shoe off, she sat with the bit of paper in her hand. She was "between clothes" with dinner just ahead.



It fell squarely, without touching her, into the cuplike receptacle.

Pittsburgh, of course—that was easy, the second born of the Kent family being radio mad. Angie, in the last few weeks, had debated fratricide more than once. Already she had discovered that fifteen can ride its own particular hobby just as mercilessly as fifty. Petey Kent had talked rheostats and vacuum tubes and variometers and call letters, whenever she came within hearing distance of him, until every particle of the insulation of patience had been scraped off her nerves.

But the other part of the note required more thought. It read:

"KDKA—8-18-22-9:30 p. m. Brand new aspirant. Dor."

Having recalled to mind her travels since she had left home before lunch, and not remembering having removed her shoe except to sluff it off for a few minutes in the Little Pecan, it was quite plain to Angie that the pert scrap of paper had been slipped in at that time. Consequently she would be justified in assuming that "brand new aspirant" meant the writer had overheard her conversation with Bebe and had decided to enter the list. Her hopes had grown bright for the best, when she had reasoned thus far. Truly the writer must be a person of quick action to leap into the game so swiftly, and of ingenuity—judging by the novel way he had notified her. The drab edges of life began to glow rosily at once. Now as to KDKA—

The radio program for Friday, which would be the eighteenth of August, gave her no help. There was nothing promised for nine-thirty. The last thing listed, a most stupid sounding talk, was scheduled for nine o'clock.

Optimistic, however, and with the closest approach to a flutter of excitement she had experienced for ages, Angie cut her engagements for Friday and devoted the evening to Brother Petey. It was flattering, to say the least, the sweet sisterly interest she took in his hobby. She waited until he was busy, strolled in carelessly, and listened with marvelous patience to a long discourse on grids and ticklers and the like. She played him so skillfully that she was actually hearing the Pittsburgh program without his being aware of the fact that KDKA was the station she most wished to hear.

The nine o'clock talk was awful. Petey was alert to cut the man off at his last word, but his audience interposed.

"Wait a bit, Pete," she cried. "There might be more to it—or something else."

"Aw, how do you get that way? Program's right before you!"

"I've got a hunch, dear. Leave it tuned as it is—just a few minutes."

Petey looked at her suspiciously, but suffered the little dials to remain as they were. The round, open mouth of the horn stared her out of countenance with its provoking silence. But they were forced to wait only a few minutes. Suddenly out of the nowhere came the tinkle of a piano.

For the first time in moons she caught the light of a mounting respect for her in Petey's eyes. So she had been tipped off! registered his freckled countenance. It was something to have inside dope on a wireless program, something that the papers had not recorded.

PRESENTLY, on the heels of a lingering chord, a man's voice swam out into the room—not a remarkable voice, just a baritone a trifle above the average. In spite of the mechanism by which it was carried it sounded warm and tender and pleasing.

She groped back of her head for the push button and switched off the lights, and immediately the singer seemed to be over there, near the soft glow of the detector bulbs.

"Drink to me only with thine eyes and I will pledge with mine——"

It was old Ben Jonson's love song—the oldest love song in the English language. The voice was warming to the words with an exultant swing. "Or leave a kiss within the cup and I'll not ask for wine!"

Over mountain land and meadow beneath the stars he was singing—she pictured the towering black hills that lay between, the grimy, ugly coal mines, the tortuous mountain streams, the crooked valleys—and for the time being the fervor of the quaint old song tore from her the flippant, cynical cloak with which she was wont to shroud herself, and something like the real Angie beneath listened with her soul in her eyes. She was glad that Petey could not see her distinctly. The distant singer was singing to her. To her! To her, alone! Though thousands and thousands the country over might be listening, not one of them dreamed that it was meant as a serenade—a serenade to her!

The last verse paid itself out, word by word, like beads upon a rosary. She listened regretfully, hungrily, clutching the sounds, miserly, until they slipped beyond her hearing. But eventually the voice died away, the piano rippled after it and dwindled until nothing remained but the bubble and crackle of the static. With a sigh she snapped on the lights.

"Say, Ange, how did you know that fellow was going to sing?" Petey blurted, eyeing her with astonishment.

"Child," she said superiorly, returning to her bored manner with a carefully simulated yawn, "I know heaps of things you haven't begun to dream of yet!"

All things considered, the brand new aspirant made a beautiful beginning. And he was not content to rest on his laurels.

BRIGHT and early the next morning she received one of those little wax cylinders which threaten to snatch the bread out of the mouths of the stenographers of the land, all done up carefully in a small box and forwarded by special delivery. Angie, the devil of curiosity nudging her in the short ribs with his elbow, forthwith hastened with it to her father's office.

One of the denizens she found there delightedly fluttered about her, obligingly slid the wax record into a machine, clamped the ear pieces upon Angie's ears, and at the press of a button the voice of last night, speaking this time, poured softly forth:

"Behold thou art fair, my love;
Behold thou art fair;
Thou hast doves' eyes within thy locks:
Thy hair is as a flock of goats——"

"Well, for Pete's sake! (This was Angie, not Solomon.) How does he get that way? A flock of——"

But the voice was going on, smooth, bland, even, putting into that portion of the Song of Songs a personal touch that Solomon himself might have envied. Angie heard him through, pink to the ears. But no one else heard, so after a moment she treated herself to an encore, instead of smashing the bit of wax as she had at first indignantly thought of doing. And by the time the roll had reeled itself off the second time she had grown so accustomed to the words and the perfectly adorable rhythm that she played it again and again until the needle had literally gouged the words out of their grooves.

She took the record with her when she left, sweetly declining the office man's offer to have it typewritten for her.

The next day there was a larger package for her. Enormous. She hoped, while she was signing for it, that it was a whole armful of wax rolls, which showed progress for Dor. Instead, when she had removed the wrappings, it turned out to be nothing but an inflated rubber balloon—a big yellow one—just a toy such as brings tragedy, after a time, into every juvenile's heart, come circus day.

Not a word of writing upon it or within the box. She snatched up the plump yellow nothing and shook it anxiously. A rattle within its yellow depths rewarded her. Quite mercilessly she stabbed into its vitals with an orangewood stick, whereupon it exploded with a loud plop, filling the room with a delightful fragrance.

"How in the world did he know that! My favorite perfume!" she cried in delighted astonishment, wrinkling the prettiest little nose in seven states and reveling in the intriguing odor of the very latest in perfumery. "Kiss of Springtime! How perfectly gorgeous!" she murmured, then came suddenly back to life with a darting, curious eye upon the shattered yellow fragments of the balloon.

"Ah! Come to mother, little billy-duck, come to mother!" she commanded triumphantly, snatching at a square of folded paper and beginning to devour the writing she found inside with eager eyes.

At the end of the first line she stopped, genuinely startled.

"You infernal little imp!" she read, and to make sure her eye darted back over it again. "Well—the ide-a!" with a round-eyed gasp.

"You've succeeded in finding the ticklish spot in my heart and I'm having convulsions!" Was he absolutely devoid of sense? "You didn't begin it in the Little Pecan the other day, it started long before that,"—Well, she should hope it had, by the tone of him!—"but what you said across the table to your friend certainly speeded up my reactions! I'm yours—here is my humble neck ready for the smooth sole of your adorable foot." Who could help giggling? "A thousand dreams camp on my pillow at night, batten down my eyelids into day dreams during the day." Now that was considerably better, she softened a bit, but just for a moment. Rambled the next line: "I am continually torn between conflicting desires—to kiss you times without number for the mischief you've wrought, or to turn you over my knee and apply a palm that fairly itches! I can't tell which I ache to do most—I'll probably do both when the time comes.

"Lord, how I love you! Dor."

"Well, if that's his idea of a love letter, he'd better stick to poetry!" she stormed. But her eye roamed back to that line—

"A thousand dreams camp on my pillow——" She burst out laughing. "Isn't he a dear!" and she did the very thing those old ladies used to do back in eighteen seventy-five—she kissed the missive and actually blushed.

The next day it was music—early in the morning, just when the dawn came stealing into the garden and all the good suburban fathers thereabouts were deep in the hay in that last precious, delicious hour before the hastily snatched breakfast and the seven-twenty-two.

A flute came up and sat on the garden wall, held in place, of course, by the necessary hands, and the hands themselves supported by a dim trunk and a pair of thin legs, and presently soft sounds stole forth and mounted with all the silvery crescendo of a lark's song as the player lost himself in the melody.

"O Sole Mio" is a nice tune. Lots of folks take to it warmly. Angie, flushed and lovely with sleep, if you can believe that, scrambled out of bed and knelt in her pajamas by the window. Her eyes were star-bright and yet misty and yet doubtful, registering, thereby, three separate sets of emotions. It was quite evident that she liked the playing and didn't mind a bit having her slumbers disturbed, but Pa Kent wasn't at all of the same mind. His shutters banged back wrathfully and he emitted an angry bellow. This at the beginning of the second stanza.

Whatever action he contemplated, if any, however, was rendered unnecessary by the timely arrival of a policeman. The disturber was suddenly snatched, right in the middle of a delicious note.

Angie, at the risk of her young life, leaned far over the sill and saw the poor wretch being marched off down the street shoulder to shoulder with the burly bluecoat. Wasn't it just too dreadful!

It seemed a long twenty-four hours until the next morning. She wondered if he had been lodged in jail, not knowing, of course, that Dor hadn't the faintest idea of how to play a flute, and that he had been "doubled" by an obliging son of Italy for a consideration and the fine which the law subsequently imposed, both of which were cheerfully paid. Angie fumed and fretted and worried, and positively didn't know what on earth to do.

BUT the dear old tomorrow came with a package, which one of the maids brought up to Angie when she came to call her. Angie postured herself upon the bed like a peach bloom shrouded Buddha, and snatched off the wrappings.

No note of explanation—just a pair of black silk stockings. But it must mean that he was safe. Still, she was disappointed. She gripped a toe hold upon the unoffending hose and flirted them their full length with a despairing hope that she might shake something out of them. She didn't, but her searching eyes caught a gleam of embroidery across the silken tops, she inspected closer, she suddenly giggled. There was the message, done in fairy-like embroidery with patient, tiny stitches, the few words in mingled shades of apple green and silver. How delightfully absurd!

She thrust her toes into the glimmering tubes to get the best effect, and drew the sleek things snugly about her ankles. She patted and fussed them up and over her rounded knees unto a satin smoothness. Presently the stitched message stood out clear along the stretched tops; two words on the left one, three on the right:

"Heart's Desire! I Love You!"

Not so bad! Not so bad, that!

Then came the first message with the carrier pigeon. The following day of course, when the foregoing had had plenty of time to sink in, Angie was just attacking her toast, the tray on her knees.

The bird stared through the bars of its small cage at her with uneasy, furtive eyes. Attached to one of its legs was a tiny metal cylinder. Angie hitched herself to a more comfortable position in bed, shoved aside her breakfast, and eagerly seized the bird. Her eyes were fever bright with expectancy. There was no telling what this mysterious Dor would think of next.

The cylinder yielded up a bit of much rolled India paper which, spread out, looked strikingly like a Chinese puzzle. She studied it right side up, upside down, sidewise, slantwise—a puckered frown between her brows.

The round circle at the top was a moon—of that she was certain, for it had "Moon" printed above it—and this spidery thing was a ladder leaning—ah! It was a drawing! A drawing of the garden—her garden out back—there was the walk, this the side of the house upon which her window opened, the ladder was in the small alley on the outside, leaning against the high brick wall which separated it from the grounds. The thing to which the arrow pointed was intended to represent the summer house.

Now the moon meant night, of course, and the ladder—— Ridiculous! The meaning of the drawing was perfectly clear to her, but she chose to ignore it, dimpling, however, as she turned the plat over and hastily wrote:

"Beautiful. Draw a goat in the alley. I love a touch of realism. A."

Then she rolled the paper up carefully, fitted it into its tube, scrambled out of bed, and took the pigeon to the window. But before she released the little messenger she raised it and smoothed its soft feathers against her cheek. With a flirt of its wings it took to the air, circled higher and wider overhead, and flew south.

QUITE cheerfully it returned the next morning, bearing the same plat within the little cylinder, the desired goat obligingly sketched in. He was a sad looking animal, and he stood in the alley and gazed beseechingly at the brick wall which separated him from the garden. And just as beseechingly, over the arrow which pointed toward the summer house was printed in capitals as above the moon: "WHEN?"

And as further persuasion, below the message she had written across the back was scrawled:

"Now that you've got my goat—have pity. "Dor."

"O, well," Angie decided, eyes twinkling contradiction to her resigned tone of voice, "one can always scream. Even my music teacher conceded that my voice has remarkable carrying power, especially when I go off key. Be a sport, Angie! You can't get experience without experiencing it!" So she wrote:

"Tonight, 10:30," after his "When?"

This time she kissed the pigeon before she released it. Probably just because she adored carrier pigeons.

Having been scheduled for a much later turn, the moon was still in the wings waiting for its cue, and the stage was warm and dark and smelling heavenly of honeysuckles when Angie slipped into the small building at the appointed hour. She wore a black dress, a thin scarf hiding the white gleam of her arms and shoulders, and she slid into the darkest corner. There was a street light in the alley behind the brick wall, and the dull glow of it cut a straight black line across the lower part of the garden which she could view uninterrupted from one end to the other.

The head and shoulders of a man in silhouette popped above the black line within a split second of the appointed time, and Angie prayed earnestly that the vigilant policeman on the beat would not come upon the scene and spoil things. It would be terrible to have the poor soul hauled off to the station house a second time. Besides, night and the ladder combined would seem so—so incriminating. They might put him in the penitentiary for years and years.

The visitor seemed an agonizingly long time pulling up his ladder and letting it down again on the inside. Finally he accomplished it. Thereupon, in due course, she heard the soft thud of approaching footsteps, and then, dimly, she descried him in the doorway.

"Look out for your shins, please—the corner of the bench juts out," she warned softly. "Straight ahead, toward this."

She held out her hand, and the dull glow from the illuminated face of her wrist watch guided him. Angie had done a little figuring beforehand.

A little blunderingly, he achieved a seat beside her.

"Say, I think this is wonderful of you," he began. "I wouldn't——"

"Sh! Please don't speak—just yet! Just sit here—near me. No, don't hold my hand. I want to feel your presence. O, everything depends on that! If you have a sympathetic presence I shall feel it in a moment!"

"I'll do any——"

"Sh!"

He lapsed into obedient silence.

A minute of the honeysuckle laden void passed. In due course another slipped by to keep it company, and another and another, until there was considerable of a flock of them. Still he sat like a statue. All of the twelfth part of an hour slid by before she broke the silence.

SHE led up to it by a little shiver, and by an almost inaudible catch of her breath. Nervous and beginning to cry, he reasoned, when she upset his reasoning by giggling explosively.

"O—O! Isn't this rich!"

"Rich?"

"Making you sit like that when you're just bubbling with all kinds of delightful speeches! And all of them like that strip in the comics—'they don't mean anything!' Wait!" she commanded, when he sought to interrupt. "I'm serious now. We might just as well get this thing over with at once. What do you think of me, letting you come like this, without knowing whether you were—were a rich man, poor man, beggar man, or thief?" she laughed.

"I think you're doubly adorable for taking the chance!" he said with conviction. "You're no more in the dark than I am, for I won't know until I leave the garden just which of the four I shall be. It depends entirely on you. I'm not averse to being the fourth!"

"The fourth? Again, please?"

"O, not your jewels, or the family plate. You!"

"You mean that you'd throw me over your shoulder like a bag of grain and try to get me up that ladder?"

"I'd make a mean little try at it!"

"Silly! With me screaming my lungs out!" she scoffed.

"Scarcely. You'd be quite smothered with kisses before I'd start out with you," he said assuredly. "You know I owe you a lot." He sighed. "This keep-your-distance courtship certainly has had its limitations!"

"If you found it so irksome, why didn't you quit?" she snapped.

"I never quit. Anyway," complacently, "it's over, now." He leaned toward her with an assured laugh. "Tell me the first chapter of how much you love me," he invited, "then we'll set the date for the wedding, and after that——"

"After that—what, pray?" she asked inelegantly.

"Why, you can tell me several more chapters."

"I'll do nothing of the sort. I don't like your attitude a bit. You take things entirely as a matter of course. I'm supposed to fall right into your arms. Mr. Brooke—Mr. Dorchester Brooke—you're crazy!"

A MOMENT of amazed silence, a long moment in which she instantly sensed his genuine hurt and disappointment; a moment which frightened and sobered her.

"Then you knew who it was all along," he said bitterly. "It wasn't any game at all! Still, I might have known. It seems that I'm—well, seventeen kinds of an idiot!"

Again the honeysuckle laden silence, though this time her quick breathing kept it from being utterly desolate and dead.

"I've been the—idiot," she murmured contritely.

He gave no sign that he heard. Presently she plucked at his sleeve.

"I—I saw you at the table next mine that day and I—I talked like a simpleton just to attract your attention. I wondered if you had imagination. I knew a good bit about you. Sooner or later we'd be sure to meet—and I hated to see us start out in the same old rut. The things I said I really meant—about men and loving some one—and I still mean them. It was a lovely experiment, but my nerve failed me at the last moment. When you came in here, sat beside me—all at once I saw what it would mean if you were only playing. I'm not sure you aren't, even now. And Dor——" appealingly.

"Yes?" noncommittally and with aggravating coolness of tone.

She drew a long, steadying breath.

"And Dor, I'm not Chinese a bit. I—I just had to know who I was guh-going to fall in love with!" she further confessed with a tearful slash at the King's own.

She began to cry. Even though it was dark he knew that, though she made no sound. He slipped a comforting arm around her.

"And, as you knew, did you fall in—good and plenty?" he demanded.

Probably the length of three ticks of the clock passed. All at once, with a spasmodic gesture, he seized her with both arms, with a roughness that hurt her though she thrilled to its sincerity. She was conscious that the grip of his fingers would leave blue marks by morning, but she didn't care a hoot. She had just said "Yes!"

INDIAN BLOOD? BY Robert E·Pinkerton

HOW THE STORY STARTED

FOR thirteen years Wen-dah-ban was kept hidden in the Ojibwa forests by Nee-tah-wee-gan, wife of Pe-tah-bo. The latter jested always with his wife that the boy was the son of a white man, but never would she name his father. Her hatred of all whites grew with the years. When 15 Wen-dah-ban is taken to the trading post by Pe-tah-bo. There the boy sees white people for the first time and longs to be a white man. When he is 14 he is sent into the forests till he shall have the dream that shall determine his career. He dreams he is white, and returns and tells his guardians of the vision. Returning next season to the trading post, he quits Pe-tah-bo there and asks Merton Layard, the Hudson's Bay company manager, for work. The boy relates his dream and Merton exclaims, "By God, I believe you are white!"

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

Donald Norton.

IN the north country June is the smile of a bitter old man. The sun is bright and warm, the waters are blue and placid, the poplars and birches open their buds and drip ointment into eyes smarting from the long strain of dreary monotones. Yet the vast spruce swamps are desolate, the great, sprawling lakes empty, and the loneliness crushing. The harsh, relentless spirit of the land is wafted on the gentlest summer breeze.

Evelyn Layard had never been able to escape this thought. Cruel and ruthless she knew the north to be, and only a conviction that the human soul is supreme, that environment and circumstances are never unconquerable, had carried her through eight years as the wife of a Hudson Bay company's post manager. That she had won happiness and contentment she ascribed to the love of her husband and to her philosophy, never realizing the part played by her own warm, impulsive, compassionate nature and by her capacity to act upon conviction.

It was this compassion and this capacity that led her immediately to the championship of Wen-dah-ban's cause. When she talked to him she was more deeply moved than her husband had been. The boy did not repeat the vehement declarations he had made in the trade shop, but she did catch glimpses of the high resolve that had defied Nee-tah-wee-gan and had made it possible for this shy, wilderness bred creature to open his heart to a strange white man.

And more than anything else, for she had felt the bitter, ruthless north and knew the hard, dreary lives of its children, she was moved by this spontaneous effort of a boy to rise above his environment and above cirsumstance.

"He will never stick it out," Merton said, when she announced that she would help him. "You'll simply lead him on to ultimate unhappiness."

"At least we should give him the chance he asks for," she answered. "I am going to do what I can for him while Pe-tah-bo is away with the fur brigade."

Merton smiled. He loved these impulsive attempts to lighten the burden of a savage life, even though they always failed, for to him they were an expression of Evelyn's blindly altruistic nature. Now he was glad that she would have such an effort to occupy her during his long journey to Fort Bruce.

It was thus that Wen-dah-ban was suddenly removed from the harsh, stiffling sway of Nee-tah-wee-gan's venomous nature to the sympathetic and unfolding influence of Evelyn Layard, and almost instantly he began to pay her in a manner she had not expected. In the first few days he was silent and unresponsive. He did the very thing she dreaded—followed her about like a dog, watching her with wide, sober eyes, listening with painful attention when she spoke in English. Yet those eyes were clear and direct, never furtive or with hidden lights. They began to haunt her, and to escape them she found tasks for him to do.

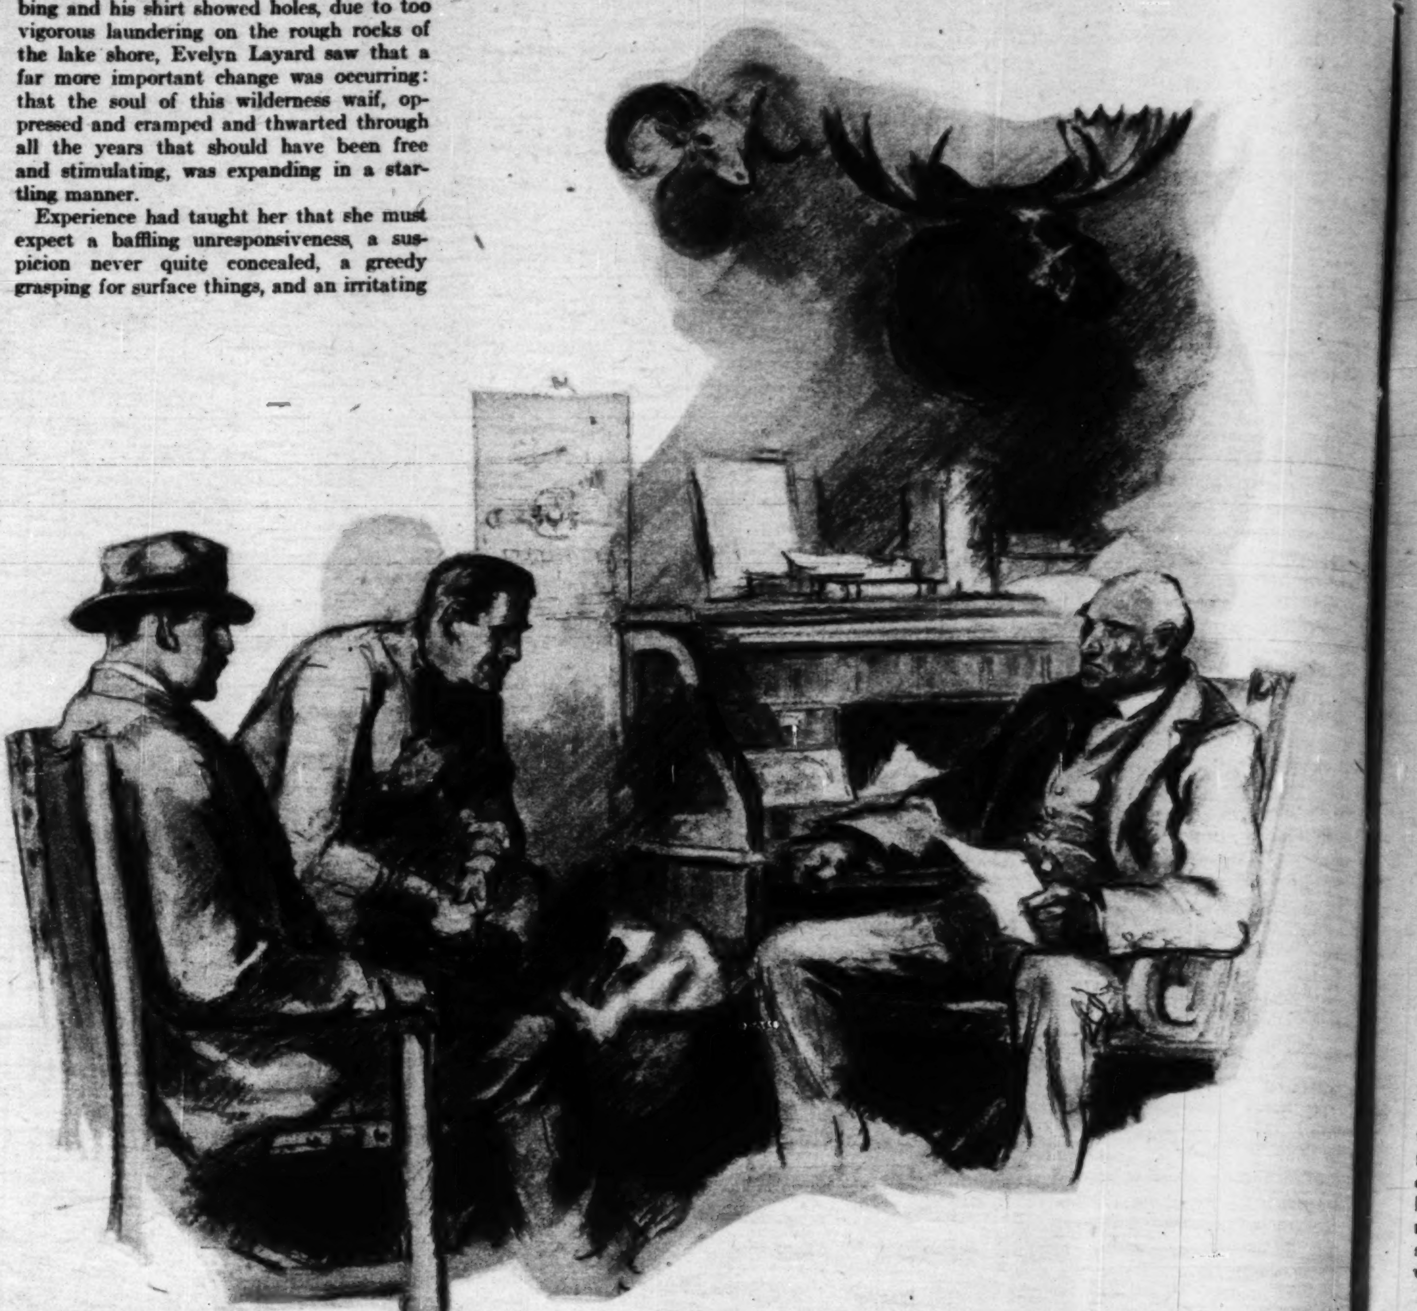
The change was startling. He did everything with an amazing faithfulness and a quick grasp of its significance. She had believed those first dumb, staring days were due to embarrassment and curiosity, and now she realized that he had been studying the ways of the people he had determined to make his own.

And as Wen-dah-ban learned and developed, as the first halting but clear English words began to come, as his face took on the reddened brightness of repeated scrubbing and his shirt showed holes, due to too vigorous laundering on the rough rocks of the lake shore, Evelyn Layard saw that a far more important change was occurring: that the soul of this wilderness waif, oppressed and cramped and thwarted through all the years that should have been free and stimulating, was expanding in a startling manner.

Experience had taught her that she must expect a baffling unresponsiveness, a suspicion never quite concealed, a greedy grasping for surface things, and an irritating disregard for underlying essentials. It is the thing the white man has always had to contend with in his efforts to elevate people of other races, and Evelyn had encountered it many times when training native servants.

In Wen-dah-ban it was wholly lacking. There was an intentness of purpose that sometimes was pitiful because it expressed the yearning of a starved spirit; there was a perfection in tasks and duties set for him, a strained eagerness to please; and yet there was always something more, something deeper, something that evaded Evelyn until she recognized it as a sense of race equality.

"He told the truth when he said he felt all white," she told Merton after he had returned from Fort Bruce. "It isn't only that I never knew an Indian or half-breed who thinks as he does, and it isn't that he lacks the half-breed's superciliousness toward Indians when he thinks he is becoming a white man. Wen-dah-ban hasn't that at all, nor is it a calm assumption that he is white. He just seems to feel that he is."



When Mactavish glared post managers began to tremble.

"I'll admit he possesses one quality no Indian ever had," Merton answered. "Since I've been back I've noticed that he sticks to a thing until he gets it, and then jumps right into something else. Doesn't he ever stop to play? He's just a boy."

"That's the pitiful part of it!" Evelyn exclaimed. "He's so serious. He's never known childhood. Nee-tah-wee-gan must have been a terrible creature, and just now, when he should be care free, he has shouldered this enormous burden upon himself."

"He doesn't seem to stagger under it."

"No, but he will some day; some day when he has grown up and reaches out for the thing he desires most. Then he will discover that unseen wall, that impassable thing that has been reared between the races, and—it is terrible, Merton, for he will not have deserved it."

BUT Wen-dah-ban did not suspect the presence of that unseen wall. His quick, eager feet were taking him up the white man's ladder and his faith in the white man's judgment when he reached the top made so subtle an appeal to the heart of Evelyn Layard she was rushed into a recognition of his viewpoint despite the warnings of her husband.

"He's different, Merton!" she protested. "If he fails it will be our fault and not his. I know how you feel about half-breeds, but Wen-dah-ban is the exception."

Merton smiled in indulgence of a faith that had persisted despite years of disillusionment.

"I know," he answered. "The boy gets you. He did me, too, that first morning in the trade shop. But don't count too much on it. Remember that you're building castles on the foundation of an unknown father."

"But that's only another reason," Evelyn replied. "Whoever the man was, he's given the boy something, something even stronger than Nee-tah-wee-gan's influence. I don't mean just honesty. Many Indians have that. I mean an integrity of character, a sense of right that he must live up to not because he wants to please us but because there's something in him that compels it.

"That," and her voice softened as she turned her tear dimmed eyes away, "is why I want to help him, to make up to him now while I can for the sorrows and struggles that will come."

It was to this warm hearted champion that Wen-dah-ban came one day in early winter. Evelyn had already arranged that he was to remain at the fort and Pe-tah-bo had gone back to his wigwam and Nee-tah-wee-gan long before.

"I am called Wen-dah-ban," he began seriously. "It means 'coming dawn,' that it was then I was born. But it is an Indian name and I am not an Indian. I must have a white man's name."

There was something so confident and yet so pitiful in the request, something so expressive of his whole life's problem, Evelyn turned away to hide the quick tears. She saw him not only as a nameless, raceless, kinless waif, but as one destined to go on through life without contracts, belonging neither to one world nor to the other, with nothing behind him, nothing in front.

"Had you thought of a name?" she asked.

"I don't know the white man's names,

"And you—you have never heard your father's name?"

It was the first time Evelyn had ever mentioned the subject to him, but he was not embarrassed.

"Nee-tah-wee-gan keeps silent," he answered simply. "Pe-tah-bo often asked her. It made her angry and she would shout at him and she always said that she would never tell. So I cannot have my father's name."

Again the tears came, but she winked them back furiously.

"Wen-dah-ban," she said in a choked voice, "you shall have a name. You shall have my father's. I have always loved it. I think it is a beautiful name. Donald Norton. Do you like it?"

She did not tie strings to her gift. She did not tell him her father had been a good man and urge him to be worthy of the name. It had come from her warm, compassionate heart, and although he did not understand its significance he did sense the generous impulse and respond to it.

"You are very good to me," he said. "I like Donald Norton."

Unconsciously he had reached forth a hand. Never before had tenderness come so close. He felt it all around, suffocating and entrancing, and then suddenly Evelyn had thrown her arms about him and strained him close. He felt a kiss on his cheek and then each cheek was wet.

He had never been kissed before. Not since infancy had he wept. In sudden confusion he dug his fists into his eyes and turned quickly away.

BEFORE the winter was over Merton Layard began to share his wife's viewpoint. Wen-dah-ban, or Donald, as he was now called, made an appeal to the fur trader just as surely, though in a different way, as he did to Evelyn. The woman's heart had been touched by the pitiful, lonely figure, the man's by the youngster's courage and determination. He shared in the work of instruction and in the pleasure it gave, and when spring came he was as firm a champion of the boy as Evelyn.

In June the hunters arrived and among them was Pe-tah-bo. The big, good natured Indian clucked in amazement when he saw Donald.

"You dreamed true," he said, and there was a note of awe in his voice. "You are a white man."

Then his eyes danced and his mouth widened in a grin.

"Nee-tah-wee-gan is here," he said. "When she sees you she will be like a lynx in a trap."

But Nee-tah-wee-gan did not come near the fort for several days. She was camped far down the shore and did not visit the other Indians, practically none of whom she had seen for fifteen years. And then one noon when Donald came out of the trade shop he found her huddled against the whitewashed walls.

"Keen nish-e-nabe!" she hissed. "You are an Indian."

"Kah-win!" he retorted.

"So! You think you are a white man?"

"Yes," Donald answered confidently. "It is as I dreamed. I am learning to become one of them."

"You!" she burst forth, scornfully, the word "keen" lending itself to the derision of her shrill voice. "You! One of them! It is easier for an Indian to make his canoe fly like a bird than to become a white man. You do not know the white man. He will let you work, slave like a dog, learn his ways, and then, when your back is turned, he laughs at you.

"He will take our women, but he will never take our children. Often have I heard the white man say, 'One drop of red blood and all is red.' You think I do not know? My father was white, and he left me and my mother and returned to his own country. Do you think the blood of such a man has made you white?"

"But my father——" Donald began.

Nee-tah-wee-gan's shrill laughter stopped him.

"Your father!" she gloated. "How you wish you knew! But you never will. You are the son of Nee-tah-wee-gan. That is all you know, and it is all they care. Some day they will tell you so and send you back to your own people.'

"Fool! Work for them. Listen to their lies when they say they are making you one of them. Some day you will learn the truth."

She had begun her tirade in the shrill voice he remembered so well, venomous and bitter and unrelenting, but now her tone changed: Her black eyes fastened upon him and into her tone came some of the solemnity of a prophecy or a curse.

"Go!" she cried. "Go and find that it is as I tell you! Now you are a child and it is easy to deceive you, but when you are a man and would take one of their women you will learn that it is as I say. Go put wings on your canoe and ride in the clouds and say you are a white man, but some day they will say to you what I say now, 'You are an Indian.'"

She repeated the last words, "Keen nish-e-nabe," gloatingly, as though the sound of them were a source of infinite pleasure, and then drew her shawl about her head. The boy, more awed and shaken than he had ever been before, stumbled away toward the dwelling house.

After that Nee-tah-wee-gan came to the fort each day. She rarely spoke to any one, but would squat in front of the trade shop and watch for Donald as he went about his daily tasks. Sooner or later he would have to pass her, and always she would hiss the words, low and venomous:

"Keen nish-e-nabe."

Never during that summer was he permitted to forget it. "You are an Indian!" was dinned into his ears constantly. Each night when he went to bed he remembered it. Each morning when he arose he dreaded it. Indians and employés of the fort heard it and always laughed, for their greatest amusement is derived from torture and ridicule, but Nee-tah-wee-gan was careful never to let the Layards hear her.

And then one day Janet, walking softly in her moccasins, came up behind the Indian woman as Donald was passing.

"Keen nish-e-nabe!" Nee-tah-wee-gan hissed.

"Kah-win!" the little girl cried angrily in Ojibway. "Wen-dah-ban kah-win nish-e-nabe! You are a mean old woman to say such a thing. You can't be his mother or you wouldn't be so cruel to him."

Nee-tah-wee-gan spat contemptuously on the ground near Janet's feet.

"Wen-dah-ban is an Indian," she repeated, coldly. "Some day you will remember what I have told you."

She pulled her shawl about her head, and Janet ran in search of her father. Merton set a trap for the woman and heard one of her vitriolic tirades. Without speaking to the boy about it, he ordered Nee-tah-wee-gan to keep away from the vicinity of the fort. The next summer she did not come to Kenogami with Pe-tah-bo.

FOUR wonderful years followed for Donald. Kenogami was a small world, an infinitesimal world isolated by the great distances, twisting waterways, and long winter trails of the north, and in that world the boy won a place. Some quality in him conquered the inevitable feeling of race superiority, conquered British aloofness and the precedents of fur land, because it had conquered the hearts of the Layards.

Yet the entering wedge had ceased to be a factor. The woman's heart was no longer touched by a pitiful, lonely figure or the man's by a boy's courage and determination. In himself alone, without the background of the wigwam and Nee-tah-wee-gan, there was something magnetic and lovable. In the warmth and understanding of the Layard home he quickly shed the dwarfing effects of his boyhood and expanded in a startling and agreeable manner.

"I'm going to put that boy in charge of the outpost at Wabinosh this fall," Merton told Duncan Mactavish, the district manager, one summer. "He's only nineteen, but he's the best man for the place, now that old Finlayson has taken a pension. And look at this list of books he wants me to bring him from the district library."

The old Scotchman, who had spent half a century in fur land, glanced over the sheet.

"On the strength of that alone I would say you are making a mistake," he commented. "He wants a college, not an outpost. But give him the place."

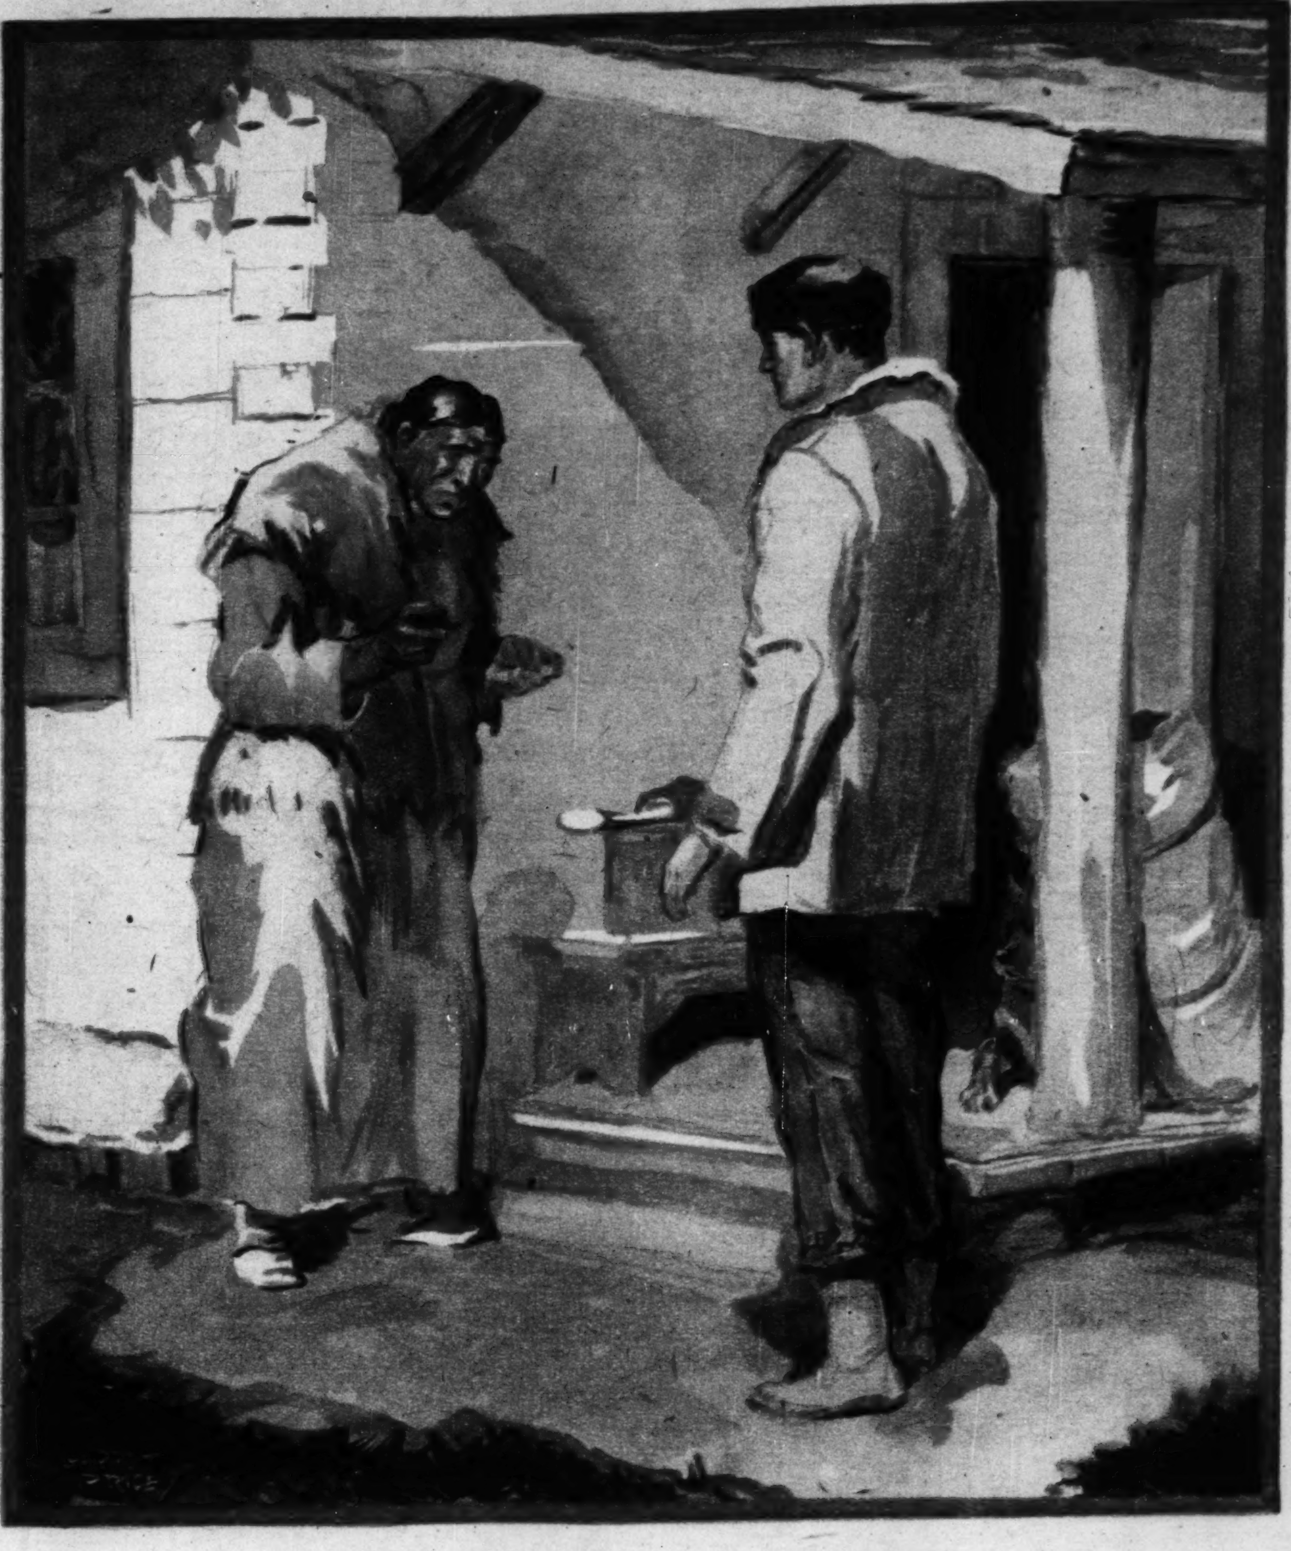
Donald's work at Wabinosh confirmed Merton's judgment. He took in a record amount of fur and kept the books in better shape than any predecessor.

"I'm taking Donald to Fort Bruce this summer," Merton told Evelyn. "The boy's a born fur trader, and I think Mactavish will give him a contract as a post manager."

But he was mistaken in believing he had an ally in the kindly old district manager, himself the father of two halfbreed boys who had long before been post managers. Mactavish displayed a dismaying lack of enthusiasm.



"Keen-nish-e-nabe," she hissed. "You are an Indian!"

"Huh," he grunted as he glanced over the reports Merton placed before him. "He hasn't lost the smoke smell yet. Send him back to Wabinosh for another year."

"But don't you see?" Merton protested. "He's earned something better. The boy's made good."

"In one season? It takes more than a snowbird to make a winter in the north country."

It was hard for Merton to carry this news to Donald, but the boy accepted the district manager's decision with only a curious tightening of his lips.

"Never mind," and Merton laid a kindly hand on his shoulder. "There's an old saying that the slower the climb the surer the step, and when you have once convinced Duncan Mactavish you'll have a friend for life."

But Evelyn was open in her denunciation of the district manager's action when she ran down to the shore to meet them and to hear what she had fully expected would be good news.

"To Wabinosh another year!" she exclaimed angrily. "It's a shame! I'd like to tell him so myself. Donald, you deserved something better."

"Perhaps," and the youth's smile proved that he had triumphed over any disappointment he may have felt, "but I'm young and there's plenty of time to give Mr. Mactavish the proof he seems to want."

It was in this spirit that he started to the tiny outpost which had seemed like a kingdom to him only the year before. He arrived to find the caretaker hysterical with momentous news and a free trader erecting a post a quarter of a mile from the Hudson's Bay establishment.

IN the century and a half of its existence Fort Kenogami had never known opposition. Isolated in that vast territory to the south and west of Hudson bay, separated by hundreds of miles of difficult waterways from railhead or sea, it had been too impregnable a redoubt for free traders to attack.

Gradually but surely, ever since the days when it relinquished its monopoly, the Hudson's Bay company has been forced to admit the presence of these outlanders. It has fought them and it still fights them with the fervor of religious fanaticism and the pride and strength of an ancient feudalism that refuses to die, but today the north is dotted with twin posts and crossed by twin lines of commerce.

In this half century of bitter struggle Kenogami was one of the few posts that had remained aloof from warfare. Free traders had looked upon it greedily, but none had dared carry the fight to so inaccessible a spot. The great company began to believe it invulnerable, and all its servants spoke with pride of this stronghold of the olden days.

Donald Norton's sole world had been Kenogami and the Hudson's Bay company. His fourteen years in a wigwam had given him the impression there was no other world. The Ojibwa's name for the Hudson's Bay is "that to which we owe thanks." His association with the Layards had magnified the impression from which that name had originated and thus a devotion to the service had been bred in him since the beginning. In addition he had made success in that service his goal, the highest he knew.

Donald threw himself into the struggle with the fervor of a neophyte but with a clearness of vision that permitted him to grasp the essentials of the situation. Though his desire was to attack he saw that in reality he must defend. The Hudson's Bay had everything. To insure victory he need only maintain that position, keep the opposition from getting anything, and along these lines he planned his campaign.

Almost immediately a new element entered the situation. The day after his arrival at Wabinosh Nee-tah-wee-gan appeared in the trade shop.

"I have come to watch Wen-dah-ban, my son, try to be a white man," she announced contemptuously.

Donald knew that not only would Mactavish and Layard disapprove of her living at the outpost, but he distrusted her. He had never been able to understand her attitude toward him and since he had left her home he had sensed a deeply hidden cause for hostility.

Despite her protests and denunciation he insisted that she erect her wigwam outside the clearing. He agreed, however, to supply her with rations from his own scanty store, though he knew it meant he would be forced to subsist largely on fish and rabbits through the winter.

When Nee-tah-wee-gan saw that he was adamant she obeyed with a sudden submissiveness that would have aroused his suspicions had he not been so occupied with the free trader.

But if Nee-tah-wee-gan had any idea of undermining her son's efforts by helping the opposition she was given little opportunity. The skill and foresight with which Donald conducted his campaign quickly made themselves felt. Before the hunters departed for their winter camps the Keewatin Trading company's fate was decided. In February William Bawlf, manager of the sporadic enterprise, abandoned the attempt.

"How about this free trader at Wabinosh?" Duncan Mactavish demanded when Merton and Donald arrived at Fort Bruce the next summer.

"How did you know he was there?" Merton countered. "I didn't know it myself until he had gone."

"Never mind that. When did he start work?"

"Early in September," Donald answered. "He had two buildings nearly done when I got there."

"Why didn't you send word to Layard?"

"There wasn't time for him to reach Wabinosh before the hunters would be outfitted and gone."

"What did you do?"

"BAWLF had a large part of his trading outfit cachéd a hundred miles south. I hired all the hunters at increased wages and set them to fishing. When Bawlf wanted to bring in his caché he couldn't get any one to work for him."

"By what right did you raise wages?"

"It was better to spend a few dollars that way than to lose several thousand dollars' worth of fur later."

"But why didn't you put them at work on something away from the post?" Mactavish persisted. "Then this free trader couldn't influence them."

"But I wanted the fish."

"Why?"

"It was the seventh year. I knew rabbits would be scarce and there would be starving times before spring."

"Huh! Then what?"

"In January the hunters began bringing their families to the post. There was nothing to eat in the bush—no rabbits. I fed the women and children on the fish I had put up in the fall, outfitted the men with flour and pork, and sent them back to hunt."

"Dug into your year's reserve supply, eh? Don't you know that is against my express orders?"

"Yes," Donald answered, "but I knew that before spring we would be able to buy a trading outfit at our own price."

"Huh!" Mactavish growled. "I want you to understand, young man, that regulations are to be obeyed."

"I understood that I was there to get the fur."

Mactavish glared at him, and when Mactavish glared post managers long in the service began to tremble. But the glare suddenly turned into a grin.

"That's all now," the old Scotchman said. "Come in this afternoon and I'll have a new contract drawn up for you to sign. And get ready to go out with the Whitefish Lake brigade. There's a free trader out there, the same company, I'd like to see you try your hand at."

"You mean——" Donald stammered.

"I mean you're to be manager of Whitefish Lake post. MacKar has been there three years and he's losing ground. But run along now. There's a few things I want to talk over with Layard."

"Look here!" Merton exclaimed when Donald had gone. "You knew last summer that the Keewatin company was going to make a try at Wabinosh."

Mactavish grinned.

"Well, you tested him out! I told you he had the right stuff in him."

"You have to prove everything, though. The boy is going to make a great fur man. You couldn't have handled that situation any better yourself."

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

ANYHOW, IT WAS A GREAT RACE.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"SAY, Chuck, I got an idea," said the Dunce as he sat down on the lead pencil from which he and the Chinaman were sawing logs for the Teenie Weenie stoves.

"Allie same, me bet it something to eat," laughed the Chinaman. "You all time wantin' to eat."

"No, it's not something to eat," mimicked the Dunce. "I've got a real idea, and I'll tell you if you care to hear what it is."

"Allie light, me listen," answered the Chinaman.

"I've been thinkin' while we have been cuttin' these logs that it wouldn't be much of a job for us to make a couple of scooters."

"What scooters?" asked the Chinaman.

"Scooters!" cried the Dunce in astonishment. "Do you mean to sit there on that lead pencil and tell me you don't know what scooters are?"

"Me know nothin' much about scooters," said the Chinaman.

"Well, I should say you didn't," laughed the Dunce. "Well, a scooter is a little kind of wagon with two wheels on which you stand with one foot and push yourself along with the other foot. Crickety, but you can go fast."

"Where you goin' to get wheels?" asked the Chinaman.

"Easy," answered the Dunce in a most superior manner. "Easy. We can get a few wheels by just usin' this saw for a few minutes—saw 'em right off this lead pencil, punch the lead out, and there you have perfect wheels."

"Me see! Me see!" cried the Chinaman. "Allie same, let's cut 'em off click."

The little fellows picked up the saw they had been using, and in a few minutes they had cut off four thin slices from the lead pencil.

Next they found a few slender pieces of wood and some fine wire, with which they set to work building the scooters. It was quite dark before they had finished the work, but early the next morning the two Teenie Weenies looked for a place to try the scooters out.

"We'll have to go into some house," said the Dunce, "for there's too much snow on the ground. We'll have to find some place where there is a smooth floor."

The two little fellows made their way into a big house near by, and in a jiffy they were scooting around over a smooth piece of oilcloth on the kitchen floor.

After a few days' practice the two little fellows were so skillful they could scoot about with great speed.

"I'll bet you I could beat you in a race," boasted the Dunce one evening.

"Allie same, me bet you two grains of rice you can no beatie me," answered the Chinaman.

"I can so," cried the Dunce, "and to prove it I'll race you tomorrow. I'll bet you half a hickory nut meat against your two grains of rice that I can beat you easy."

"Allie light, me racie you tomorrow."

The next day the two Teenie Weenies, followed by several of the little tribe, hurried to the house where the race was to be held. There was a great big piece of oilcloth on the floor, which made a wonderfully smooth place for the race. It was finally decided the race should be run over a course stretching from the leg of the kitchen table to a cat's saucer of milk which sat on the floor.

"Now, you will start from the table leg and race around the saucer," said the General, who had been chosen as judge. "The fellow who gets back to the table leg first, after having circled the saucer five times, wins the race."

When all was ready the Cowboy fired his pistol and the little racers flew away with all their speed. They went around the saucer so fast the watching Teenie Weenies could hardly see them. Sometimes the Dunce would get a trifle ahead, and then the Chinaman would lead for a few inches, but most of the time they kept rather even. Four times the little fellows flew around the saucer, but the fifth time they had a collision. The Chinaman was about an inch and a half ahead when the Dunce put on a spurt of speed, and some way or other he bumped into the flying Chinaman. Both of the little fellows were thrown high in the air—probably not over five or six inches, but high for a Teenie Weenie—and when the Dunce landed he sat right in the middle of the saucer of milk. The Chinaman's nose was bumped rather hard and it bled a few drops, but otherwise there was no damage done.

"I won the race!" shouted the Dunce from the saucer of milk.

"Me win it. Me winded!" cried the Chinaman.

"Neither one of you won," laughed the General as he ran up to the saucer. "You will have to run this race over some time."

The Dunce crawled out of the saucer, and the General made him go under a radiator, where he took off his wet clothes and dried them.

"Anyhow," muttered the Dunce to himself as he sat waiting for his clothes to dry, "it was a great race even if I did fall into the cat's milk."

Like your arm—your intestines grow weak without exercise —then disease begins

YOU know how the muscles of your arms and legs get soft and flabby without exercise.

Hidden in your body is another set of muscles —more vital to your health, than almost any others—which suffer in exactly the same way.

They are the muscles of the colon or large intestine—nature's provision for removing the body's waste.

Like a set of powerful clamps, these muscles contract in rapid succession and so force the contents of the colon along and out of your system.

It is no exaggeration to say that the weakening of these muscles is the greatest single cause of disease and sickness today.

How modern life weakens them

The reason is simple: we inherited our bodies from ancestors who ate an abundance of the raw foods of the forest. Such foods exercised the intestinal muscles, and gave them real work to do. But modern civilization demands a more delicate, concentrated diet—and as a result, the intestinal muscles grow weak and flabby. That is the basic cause, doctors say, of half the ills which afflict us today. And so the first thing that doctors want to know—no matter what you consult them for—is: Are your intestinal muscles acting regularly to free you of these poisons?

The simple food that is restoring health to thousands

The only way to relieve constipation permanently is by exercising these muscles as nature intended.

Everywhere physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast today—not as a medicine, but as a fresh corrective food which gives the intestinal muscles regular, natural exercise.

Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants, which mix with the waste products in the colon, softening them and increasing the bulk of the waste. This greater bulk gently encourages the muscles to act, and at the same time strengthens them by offering just the resistance they need.

Your own physician will heartily endorse this principle of regularly exercising the intestinal muscles as the only way to relieve constipation and all its evils.

Fleischmann's Yeast is in no sense a purgative and does not produce immediate violent action. It must be eaten regularly to secure lasting results.

Eat at least 2 or 3 cakes a day—plain or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal, or the last thing at night. If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep in a cool, dry place for several days. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast. All grocers have it.

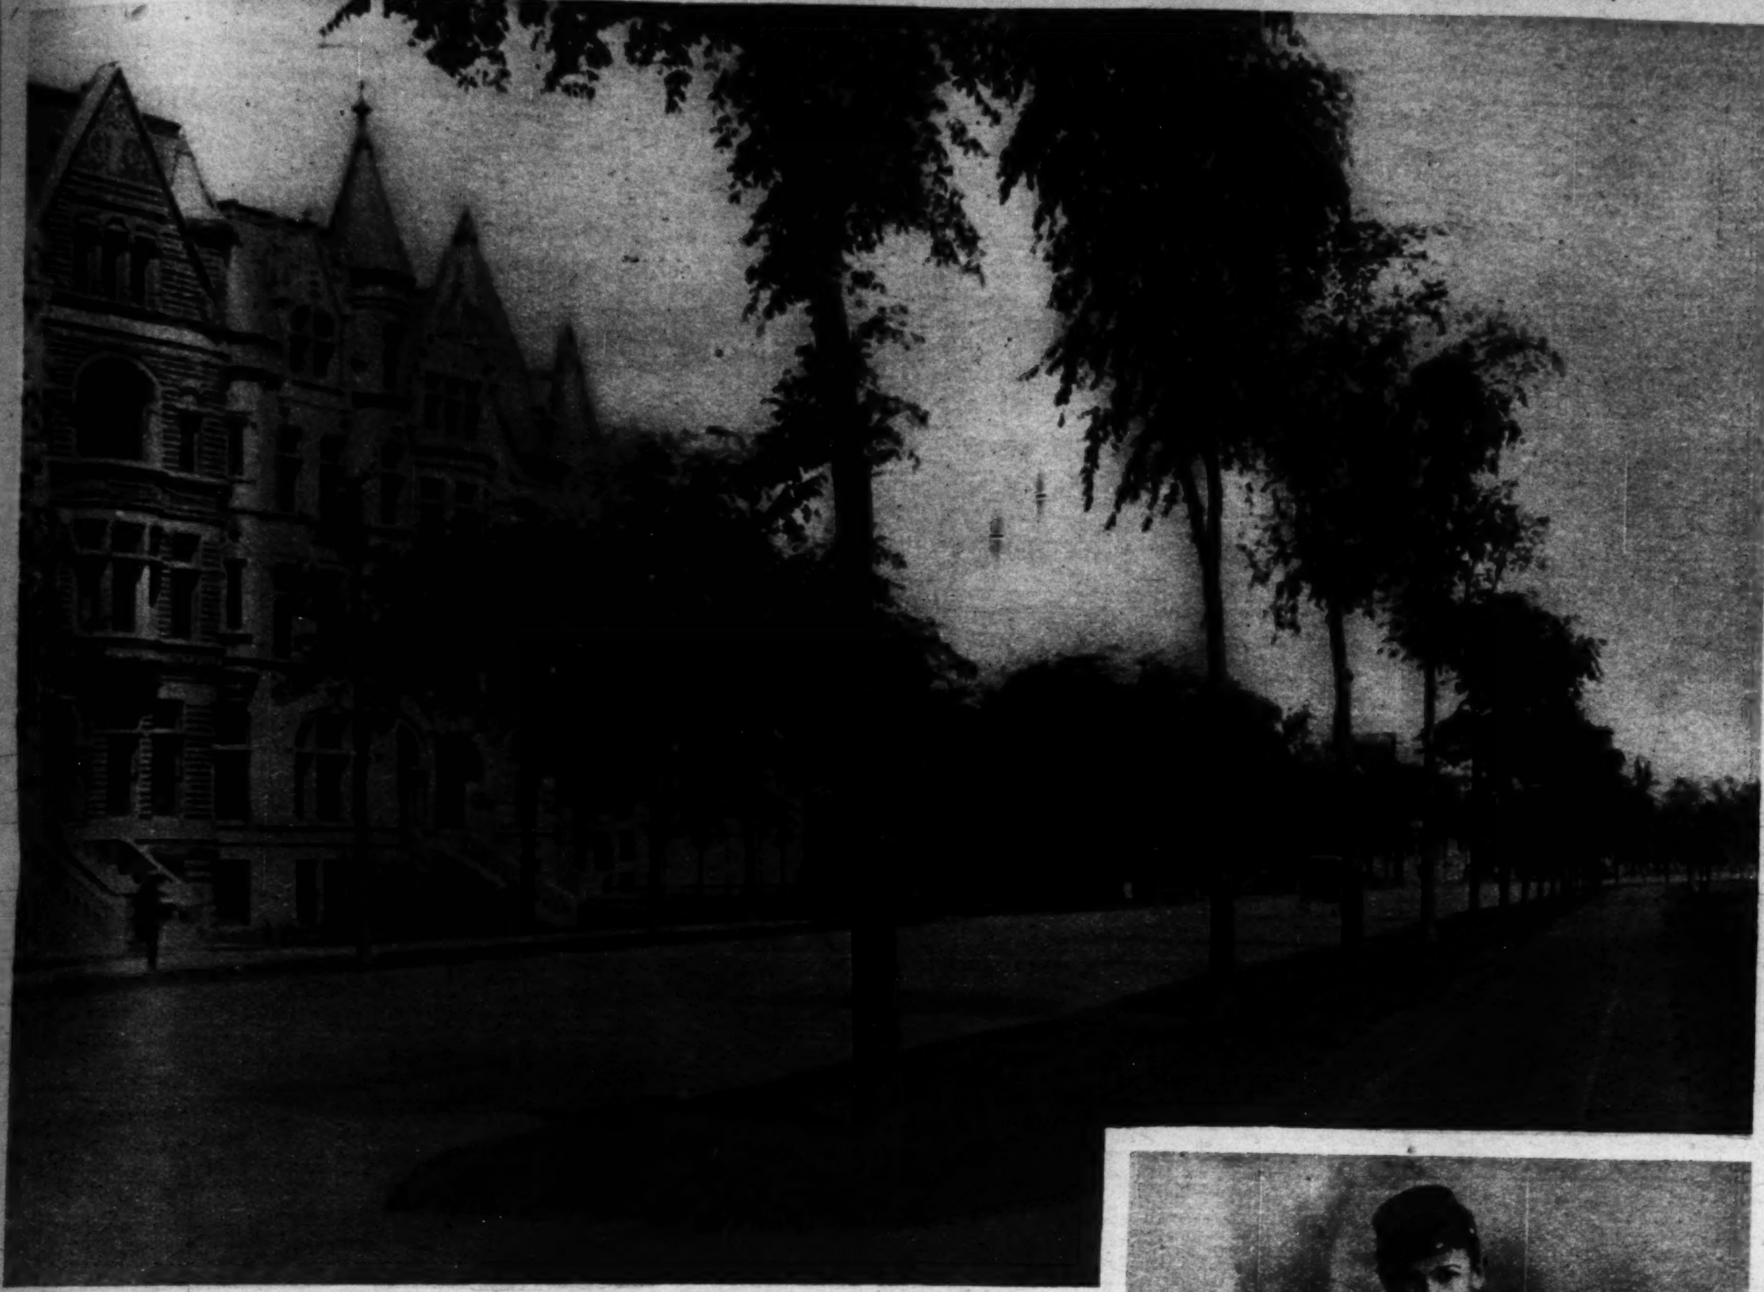
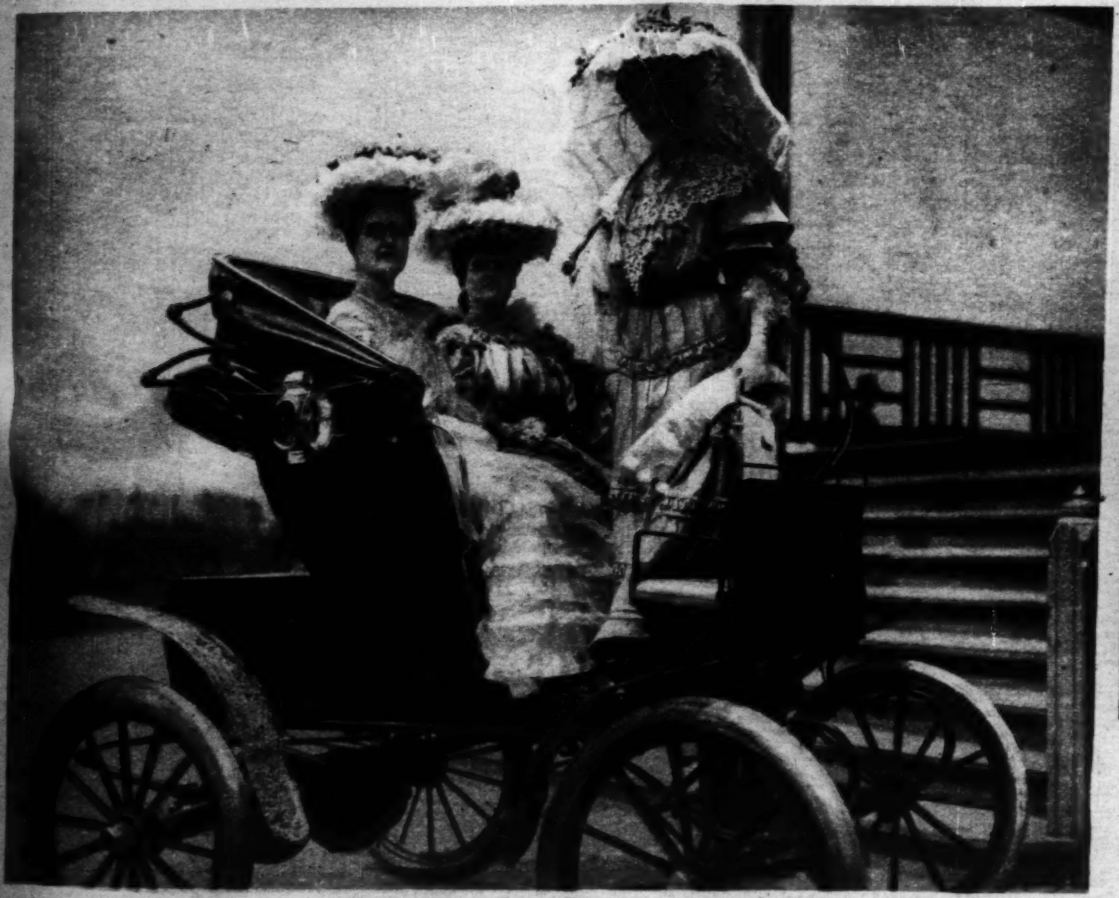
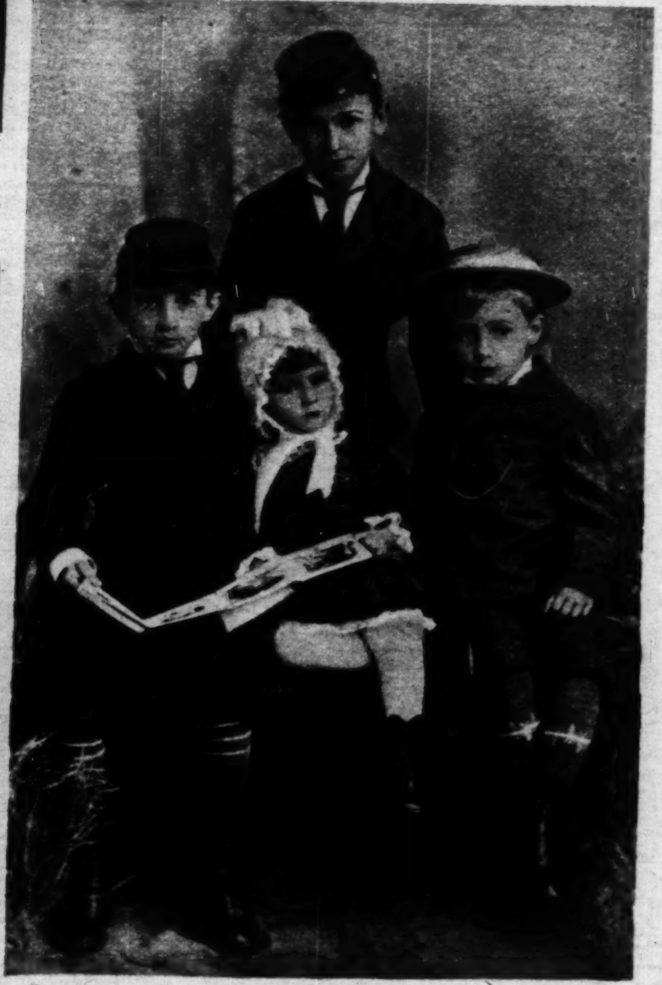
DO YOU REMEMBER WAY BACK WHEN---



LAKE SHORE DRIVE looked like this? The photo was taken more than twenty-five years ago. It shows the drive looking north to Lincoln park, from a point just south of Goethe street.



FASHIONS IN ELECTRICS AND WOMEN'S CLOTHES were as pictured here? That was in 1904. Mrs. Joseph Emery, Mrs. Louis A. Becker, and Mrs. Frederick W. Gardner are shown in the car.



FLORENZ ZIEGFELD, JR., famed connoisseur of feminine beauty as displayed in the perennial "Follies," was the serious youngster seen standing here? Seated are the late Carl Ziegfeld, Louise Ziegfeld, widow of Willis E. Buhl of Detroit, and William K. Ziegfeld, now a moving picture promoter. The father, founder of the Chicago Musical college, still lives in the old home out in West Adams street.

You, too, can have the charm of "A Skin You Love to Touch"

Is your skin pale and sallow?

—How you can rouse it

Sleep, fresh air, the right food—all these contribute to a healthy condition of your skin.

But your skin itself must be given special care, if you wish it to have the brilliant loveliness of which it is capable.

Your skin is a separate organ of your body. Neglect of its special needs may result in an unattractive complexion, even though your general health is good.

If your skin is pale and sallow, use the following treatment to give it color and life:

ONCE or twice a week, just before retiring, fill your basin full of hot water—almost boiling hot. Bend over the top of the basin and cover your head and the bowl with a heavy bath towel, so that no steam can escape. Steam your face for thirty seconds. Now lather a hot cloth with Woodbury's Facial Soap. With this wash your face thoroughly, rubbing the lather well into the skin with an upward and outward motion. Then rinse the skin well, first with warm water, then with cold, and finish by rubbing it for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

The other nights of the week cleanse your skin thoroughly in the usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water, ending with a dash of cold.

How you can tell that your skin is responding

The first time you use this treatment it will leave your skin with a slightly drawn, tight feeling. Do not regard this as a disadvantage — it means that your skin is responding in the right way to a more stimulating form of cleansing. After a few treatments this drawn sensation will disappear. You will be surprised at the difference even two or three of these treatments will make in your complexion.

In the booklet around each cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap special treatments are given for each type of skin and its needs.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today and begin tonight the right treatment for your skin.

A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's lasts a month or six weeks for regular toilet use, including any of the special Woodbury treatments. The same qualities that give Woodbury's its beneficial effect in overcoming common skin troubles, make it ideal for regular use.

Send 25 cents for these special Woodbury skin preparations

U. S. ON EVE O
WATER TRANS DEVELOPME

Roads Inadequa
Experts Show.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENN
Washington, D. C., Feb. 18.—
cial.]—There are numerous indic that a tremendous developme water transportation in this cou at hand.

High freight rates and the in of the railroads to finance exte and the additional equipment re by increased agricultural and trial production are acceleratin development of other means of portation, notably motor truck vessels.

Reviving prosperity indicates the day is not far distant when carrier resource of the countr be taxed to the limit. The d for adequate and cheap transpo then will be so great, it is calc as to carry the St. Lawrence s and the lakes to the gulf wat projects to swift consummation, ing the great lakes system the g waterway in the world in volu commerce.

Shipping Interests Active.

Already Washington is being barded by the shipping interest appeals to remove alleged ra criminations that have grown favor of all rail transportatio against water or rail and wate riage. Such discriminations, it
serted, are hampering the develo of waterways to meet transpo needs.

Julius Barnes, president of th ber of commerce of the United has called a conference of tran tion and shipping interests to the rate structure and other pr with a view to removing obsta the expansion of transit faciliti

One of the most comprehensiv entations of the complaint of ra crimination against great lakes has been made to the federa commission by H. E. Smith, pr of the Northwestern Coal Dock ators' association, and Fred G.
well of Chicago.

Penalties of Shortage.

They told the commission t
cept in the case of strikes, sh and high prices of coal are due sively to lack of transportation on account of rate discriminat favor of all rail hauls it has unprofitable, they asserted, to s to the northwest by way of the

"In the shipment of eastern the northwest via the great
Mr. Smith said, "there are t hauls; one from the mines to La ports for loading into vessels, other from the upper lake d land to the point of consumpti

"Taking Ohio as an exam origin and the Twin Cities as of consumption, there is an of approximately 300 total m rail haul and about 800 miles haul. From this it will be se both rail hauls can be class short hauls and the destinati
at least can be called a perfe anced haul, being under loa ways.

Southern Illinois Coal.

"Compare this with coal from southern Illinois, an ave
tance of 600 miles all rail, empty return. The coal car docks is a box car, while the from the all rail mines is in an open car in which the n cannot ship its grain.

"Keeping these two com hauls in mind, in 1917, the i commerce commission placed advance on the eastern hal lake-rail route and 15 cents on the western half. On the rate the advance was only 15 s.

"In other words, the order the 300 mile rail haul by lake and the all rail haul of 600 cents—a penalty of 15 cents using lake transportation.

Another Advance Order

"In what is known as gene 28 the commission again double advance upon the rail lake transportation so that order of the commission the vances on lake coal amounted and the total advances on Illinois coal was $1.17, a diff
17 cents, as a penalty again the great lakes as a trans route for coal.

"In addition the commissio an advance of 3 cents on the dumping charge at L ports. Looking at it in anot the penalty could not be ov the vessels hauled the coal average vessel rate being only per ton."
